

A FINE THEORY.

Dr. Clark, professor of political economy in Columbia University, declares that economic tendencies assure the peace of the world.

These movements are formed in competition, commerce, and international tribunals of arbitration. He says: "Competition means much; it means a limitless progress in the accumulation of wealth."

This sounds all very well and is possibly true of honest, healthful competition, but all competition is not; indeed, we dare say but a small part of this sort.

Commerce is a mighty factor, the chief factor, in civilizing the nations. Asia, Africa and South America will be brought, through its agency, into close connection with civilization.

War opens the way for commerce, and behind the commerce of every nation are "the dogs of war," ready to protect its interests.

It is a fine theory that would not civilize the nations, but induce them to live in the bonds of amity and peace and universal brotherhood through the agency of commerce, the moving spirit of which is selfishness.

By international tribunals of arbitration the nations may avoid war for trivial causes and thus insure longer periods of peace.

THE CONTEST.

It is fortunate that so far the senatorial contest at Salem has not impeded legislation. That it will not be permitted to do so we may now easily believe.

Another commendable feature of the contest is that it is remarkably devoid of any show of mere partisan or factional differences.

There are those who profess to fear a hold-up, and no election made. Such fears are groundless. It may be, indeed, that neither Mr. Fulton nor Mr. Geer shall be elected, but there will be a choice made and a republican, acceptable we hope, to the party and to the state, will be chosen.

WANT NEW SCHEDULE.

The article in the GAZETTE of the 6th inst., outlining a simple change of schedule whereby a great improvement can be made in the Southern Pacific West Side passenger service, has attracted the attention and received the endorsement of commercial bodies and newspapers in cities affected by the proposed improvement in this service.

The Benton County Citizens' League should give this matter immediate attention, for whatever effort is made should be united. The Southern Pacific officials have shown an earnest desire to make every reasonable improvement asked for by the public, and we believe that all that is necessary in the present instance is to convince them that the proposed change of schedule will be of practical benefit.

NAST'S WILL.

By the will of Thomas Nast, the great cartoonist, his entire estate, real and personal, life insurance and museum of curios is left to the widow, who is also named as executrix. He estimated the value of his art collections and curios to be nearly $100,000.

There is no change in the senatorial contest in the Oregon legislature. The hope of the opposition to Mr. Fulton is that it may be able to wear out and discourage his supporters.

By international tribunals of arbitration the nations may avoid war for trivial causes and thus insure longer periods of peace.
