GERMANY CONCERNED.

It is given out in Berlin that as soon as our reciprocity treaty with Cuba is ratified by both governments Germany will ask for the same privileges. It is also intimated that other governments will make similar requests. This will be done under the most favored nation clause of our treaties with these governments.

There is no reason to fear that such action on part of Germany or any other nation would cause us to abandon our purpose of reciprocity with Cuba. We should simply say that we were ready to negotiate terms of reciprocity with any government giving us full reciprocal favors.

Germany cares little for the theory of the most favored nation. She is ready to abandon that and to construct her commercial treaties to fit the trade conditions of herself and the country with which she is arranging a treaty. In reality Germany is now looking to reciprocity for the preservation and expansion of her trade. She fears we shall arrange reciprocity treaties with Mexico and the governments of Central and South America which will ultimately give us a trade monopoly in those countries.

The late Secretary Blaine saw how this could be accomplished through reciprocity treaties and he was an earnest advocate of such measures. It is a striking confirmation of his far-seeing statesmanship that political economists so shrewd as the Germans are perturbed by the probability that even at this late date we shall adopt his views.

We shall offer reciprocal trade benefits wherever they are really reciprocal, while at the same time we shall preserve our own system of protection and thus demonstrate to the world that "reciprocity is the hand-maid of protection."

GUARANTEE OF PEACE.

It is thought by some that but for the attitude of England toward us the Venezuelan affair would have involved us in war with the allies. This is not probable. Had England not been one of the allies there is no real cause to suppose that the conduct of Germany would have been essentially different. However warlike the spirit of the German army and navy toward us the German government certainly desires no quarrel with us.

It is true, that if Germany were seeking a quarrel with us she would undoubtedly attempt to ally England with her. This she could not do. England must have very grave causes before she would go to war with us. She is dependent upon us for a large part of her breadstuffs. War with us would cut this off and before six months time her people would find starvation confronting them. All other considerations—such as the enormous cost of war, the risk she would incur of losing her North American possessions—aside, her dependence upon us for necessary food supplies would impel her by all honorable means to avoid war with us.

We may speculate as much as we please as to how far mere sentiment would operate to prevent war between England and the United States, but nations are not swayed by sentiment in the final analysis of things, but by self-interest. England's self-interest is the strongest guarantee that we rely on for her friendship and good will.

Germany's self-interest to avoid war with us is not so great, perhaps, as England's, but it is enough powerful to make war with Germany very improbable. Both England and Germany desire, above all else, to build up their commerce and extend their trade relations. They cannot do this on this continent through the arts of conquest and colonization. Commercial conquest of any part of Mexico, Central and South America must be through the arts of peace, friendship and just treatment.

We will be their chief competitor. We shall provoke their commercial jealousy and stir up intense commercial strife, but we shall have no appeal to arms, no resultant war. Diplomacy directed by self-interest will avoid war.

Just here, and as a factor making for peace, is found ample reason why the United States should create and maintain a large and highly efficient navy.

Street Carnival in June.

They are alert, wideawake fellows, these Woodmen. Thanks to the enterprise of Marys Peak camp of this city, Corvallis is to have a street fair and carnival next June. This form of entertainment is very popular, and citizens of cities where it has been tried say it beats a dozen other forms of holiday entertainment combined.

The carnival will be given the second week in June and will last four days. The Woodmen will be assisted by the Oregon Pacific & Oriental Carnival Co., an organization that has shown in all the principal cities on the Coast. Among the many attractions will be the crowning of the queen, who will be selected at a voting contest; a public wedding, a donation of the marriage fees and $25 worth of house-keeping furniture to go to the happy couple; a competitive drill by the uniform degree teams of the W. O. W.; a balloon ascension, and the numerous entertainment features which will be provided by the street carnival shows.

The Benefit of Change.

We are like house plants: We need a change of soil now and then—to be replanted. New scenes, new experiences, new surroundings—a change of climate dry air instead of moisture, sunshine in place of cloud. This is sometimes essential to health. There are conditions near at hand that are better than Europe can offer. Take a month or two in California. Plant yourself for a time where there are no irritations, where the hotel is beyond criticism, the landscape pleasing, and where warm sunny weather invites to walks and drives. Pure and dry air, and the increased electric influences of sunshine are vastly helpful.

You can make this trip at very little expense, and enjoy a ride over the scenic Siskiyou and Shasta mountains, which, at this time of the year with their snow-covered peaks, are unsurpassed for their grandeur.
