

OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

An event of tremendous importance to the Pacific Coast transpired a few days ago when the "Minnesota," the greatest cargo carrier in the world, slid from the ways. Her launching attracted but little attention considering the significance of the event.

Large ships have been built before, says the Spokesman Review. Every year new leviathans are put in commission in response to a demand from growing commerce, but the advent of one of them has carried with it so much meaning as that which must be associated with the launching of the Great Northern monster. The Minnesota has been built for what is relatively a new commerce. She is designed for the carrying trade between the Orient and a port in the state of Washington.

Republicans of the first congressional district will vote for Mr. Hermann because he has always been a steadfast and consistent republican; because he had remarkably successful experience while in congress, in procuring for the wants of his constituents more and better results than any other representative from any other state. Mr. Hermann is in perfect harmony with the republican administration and he and President Roosevelt are on friendly personal terms.

THE MAGIC OF SCIENCE.

Professor Patty Performs Marvellous Scientific Feats.

In ancient times the conjurer and necromancer startled and mystified beholders with sorcery and tricks of magic. The Kellers and Hermann's of our day have bewildered the world with their feats of legerdemain, but science has made possible the accomplishment of things so marvellous that the sorcerer and magician find their occupation gone.

All who witnessed the experiments with liquid air and wireless telegraphy, performed by Professor Patty at the armory last Wednesday night, were continually surprised and charmed by the seemingly impossible feats performed. Professor Patty entertains while he instructs, and each demonstration was made so plain that it appeared simple when understood.

The demonstrator spoke briefly of the experiments of various scientists which preceded the final accomplishment of the effort to liquify air. The first of these experiments was made in 1823, but the scientist who spent a life time endeavoring to bring the atmosphere to a liquid state, died without accomplishing his object.

Finally the discovery was made that air must be reduced to a very low temperature before it would liquify, and with this new advantage efforts were renewed, with the result that a spoonful of liquid air was produced at a cost of $12,000. The world was told that science had accomplished its purpose, by demonstrating that air could be liquified, but no practical advantage could be taken of the discovery, because of the great cost of manufacture.

The Woodmen are making fine progress in the state, having over 15,000 members. All of the camps in the county are working hard to build up the order; also to make the carnival here on June 10, 11, 12 and 13 the grandest gathering in the history of our county.

operation in various parts of the world manufacturing liquid air. Limited space precludes a detailed account of the many wonderful and interesting experiments performed by Professor Patty. He said that liquid air could be put to almost untold uses of great practical value in the arts, in medicine, in commercial and industrial fields. It had been found of great value in surgery, and cancer has been cured by spraying with liquid air. It has greater motive power than steam, and is a more powerful explosive than dynamite.

The latter part of the entertainment was devoted to experiments in wireless telegraphy. Professor Patty exhibited the transmitter and receiver and explained their construction. Messages were sent, and the audience was instructed in the operation of Marconi's wonderful invention. Professor Patty demonstrated how the machinery of any of the vast factories of the East might be put in motion by simply pressing the button on a Marconi transmitter in Corvallis.

Wren Items.

I have seen nothing from Wren, so will give you a few items. The farmers are about through plowing their summer-fallow. Scott King has bought the Wren store and has moved his family to our burg. The sports had better be a little more cautious or they may run up against the law some day -warning. There has been a lot of stealing and other depredations going on in our district. Certain persons are suspected. Eugene Jackson lost four head of cows, last week, by larkspur poison. He says his loss is over $140. Wm. Bryan is building a large barn on the farm he bought last year, and has lumber on the ground to build a fine new residence. We need more such men.

Some one cut a lot of wire fence for S. H. Jackson last week and committed other misdemeanors, such as leaving gates open and throwing down fences, because Mr. Jackson wants people to travel one road through his farm.

Some one stole a crosscut saw from the road supervisor last Friday evening. He was sawing some logs out of the road near Wren and laid the saw down to direct some work and was away some time. When he returned the saw was gone and could not be found. The saw belongs to Thos. Casey and was a good one. The thief is suspected.

To Drill Woodmen.

Col. H. L. Day, 2nd Reg. Uniform Rank, W. O. W., is in Corvallis in the interest of the order. He will drill the Corvallis, Philomath and Dusty companies. These as well as the other companies of this district will be called to assemble here on June 11th, the second day of the Woodmen carnival. There will be several prizes offered for competitive drill, which will take place on the above date. Col. Day has 14 companies in the regiment, and four Woodmen bands. The Woodmen are making fine progress in the state, having over 15,000 members. All of the camps in the county are working hard to build up the order; also to make the carnival here on June 10, 11, 12 and 13 the grandest gathering in the history of our county.
