Adams is the gentleman who nearly lost his life at Nye Creek, August 14th, when he ventured too far out to sea at ebb tide. Only after the most heroic efforts was he saved from the undertow.

Lionel Johnson is making the trip on horseback from St. Anthony, Idaho, to the seashore of Oregon, in the capacity of traveling correspondent for the Oregonian. He is gathering data and general information concerning the places he visits, and arranging it into a series of articles that are being published for the benefit of homeseekers. Mr. Johnson graduated from the O. A. C. in the class of '98. He served with the 2nd Oregon through the Philippine campaign, and upon his return home entered the newspaper field at Vale.

Chas. Young, of Seio, is visiting at the home of his brother-in-law, A. J. Johnson, in this city. Mr. Young was called home from the Yukon country last July by the illness of his mother, but intends returning shortly. He went to Alaska three years ago, and has some valuable claims on Miller creek in the Yukon. Mr. Young says that no one need be surprised at anything he hears concerning any rich discoveries in that country. It is one great bed of gold and copper, and its extent is so great that it will not be thoroughly prospected in the next 100 years.

A very pleasant party gathered around the table at the Occidental Hotel on Thursday evening last. The occasion was a complimentary supper tendered to mining expert F. H. Hopkins, by the stockholders of the recently discovered mining claims in the Fall Creek district, in the eastern part of Lane county. The party consisted of B. T. Thatcher, S. L. Hayes, E. J. Dunn, Robert Glass and Guy Seelye, with O. A. Dearing, of the GAZETTE, as the representative of the press. A jovial hour was spent in recalling reminiscences of mining life on the Pacific Coast in the early days, and everyone was highly pleased with the property and its future prospects.

A party, consisting of Clem Hodes, John Zeis, Frank Thrasher and Ed Felton, spent Sunday fishing in Alsea. They left Corvallis at midnight Saturday with a team and hack and reached Dick Zehn's place in time for breakfast. It was so dark when they crossed the mountain that it was necessary to walk ahead of the team with a lantern for seven miles, to keep from going over the grade into some of those bottomless canyons. They began to fish at 6 a. m., and by noon had 80 of as fine trout as ever were caught. The afternoon was spent in catching crawfish, and about a bushel of these longtailed crustaceans were secured. The boys left Zahn's Sunday evening and after a 22-mile drive, arrived in Corvallis a little after ten o'clock.

A New Factor.

A new factor has entered into the problem of the C. & E. extension. It is said that within two years the timber interests of Central Oregon will put a railroad into that section unless the C. & E. is extended.

The National Lumberman's Congress held recently in Chicago, by capitalists representing almost the whole of the lumber interests of America, brought out the fact that since the locating of timber first commenced the timber promoters have had their eyes on Central Oregon. It lies within their power to develop the timber resources of that section.

"Preceding timber cutting," says the Prineville Review, "will be a railroad, and it is now generally agreed that the timber interests will dictate the future railroad building of Central Oregon. The route will unquestionably be the Corvallis & Eastern extension as it is said to be favored, by not only lumbermen, but all practical ones interested. It should get the Central Oregon prize. Their line for a distance of 200 miles east from the Willamette Valley runs through a heavily timbered country interspersed by valleys of agricultural value, which would make it from the start essentially a lumber carrying road, with its traffic augmented by the grain and stock products, as the Central Oregon country develops. By the time the former industry had disappeared, as is the case in the Eastern States, the latter industries together with others, will have been developed, and Central Oregon will be one of the richest sections under the sun.

"The line of the Corvallis & Eastern will in all probability be along a new survey, as later developments show more practical routes than the old one. The company will undoubtedly build through our city. We do not believe an east to west line can afford to miss us, because of the valuable country tributary to the town. Not only is there a vast amount of agricultural land tributary to this place but there are also timber lands, to the north and east of Prineville that will in time make this town a lumbering center of no mean importance.

"In short the Lumberman's Congress has proven that the early development of Central Oregon is practically assured, and that the holders of yellow pine are indeed fortunate, for their claims, patented, are just as good as old wheat in the mill."

Carbon Photos.

The neatest thing in photographs is this new production now on exhibition at Emery's studio. Everyone is familiar with the time-honored custom of placing the photo on a selected card mount, but it is different with carbons. The likeness produced by this process is printed directly on the carbon parchment, the center of which is embossed to permit a sunken margin to surround the picture, with ample space for a signature.

The fascinating density of light and shade in the carbon bleaching at the edges into the parchment itself is a captivating combination. The finished portraits are then enveloped in "Artist Proof" folders or loosely attached to thin "linen" mounts and thus completed are certainly dainty rich and artistic. The samples of work submitted to our inspection by Mr. Emery are well worth the examination of the art loving public, and may be seen in the reception room of his studio on South Main street.

A Day at Newport.

Although the season is well advanced, the great crowd of pleasure seekers at Newport does not seem to diminish. Sunday excursions still prove popular, and during the week, westward bound trains carry more passengers than the trains that come out in the morning. Five coaches were required to accommodate the excursionists to the beach last Sunday. The day at the coast was ideal. A gentle breeze blew in from the ocean, giving zest to a stroll on the beach near the surf, while the town protected by the headlands, offered a warm spot for basking. The tide was right for bathing Sunday morning about 11 o'clock, and few entered the surf in the afternoon, although a great crowd gathered near the bathhouse near the jetty to watch this sport and witness an exhibition by the life-saving crew on the bay.

The Chemawa Indian Band, unquestionably the finest musical organization that has ever seasonated at Newport, rendered a number of popular marches to the great delight of the excursionists, many of whom had never had the opportunity to hear this excellent organization. Director Stoudermeyer acknowledges the numerous compliments bestowed upon his "boys" with becoming modesty.

The trip on the bay from Yaquina to Newport is the most enjoyable part of the delightful excursion to the coast. Captain Davis, of the Richardson, assisted by his sons, Harry and Bush, spare no pains to accommodate passengers and protect them from accident. Of the thousands that have been ferried from Yaquina to Newport and back this season, not one has had legitimate cause for complaint.

Sunday's excursion was made without incident, so far as the trip from Corvallis was concerned, save some fisticuffs indulged in by a lot of rowdies, who were herded into the smoking car. When a man or boy reaches that stage of intoxication where his presence is offensive to passengers, those in charge of the train will be justified in giving offenders a tie pass in lieu of their permit to ride.

Mr. Zierolf's Sacks.

A recent issue of the GAZETTE contained an item concerning the mysterious disappearance of 600 new grain sacks from the barnyard of Casper Zierolf, 1 1/2 miles south of Corvallis.

The following article in Thursday's Eugene Guard reads like a sequel to the GAZETTE's item, and may put Mr. Zierolf on the track of his sacks and the gentleman who purloined them:

A man who had 620 barley or wheat sacks for sale tried to dispose of his property at several places about town and was refused. He went to Ax Billy and was told that the junk man on West Eighth street would probably take them. He left his heavy load at the department store and went in search of the junk man.

While talking about the purchase Sheriff Fred Fisk happened to turn the corner, and with considerable local pride in the dignity of the county's chief crime tracer, the junk man proudly said, "There comes our sheriff."

It was an ill-timed sentence. With a stride like a candidate for the 100-yard dash, the man struck out for other streets. He turned on Charnelton and was going at an excellent clip when last seen.

The sacks are still uncalled for, and the thief, as he is supposed to be, is still uncaught. The sheriff, noticing the actions of the man, laid plans to capture him. He and Deputy Bown secured a rig and started for Irving while Chief of Police Stiles and Constable Jack Smith went to Springfield to head him off. The sheriff's team then ran away and the chase was given up.

The fugitive is supposed to have joined a comrade with a wagon which was stolen near Salem along with some harness near Albany, and made good his escape.

Their Golden Wedding.

An event at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Jacobs last Sunday, was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the most important epoch of their lives. The festivities of this occasion evoked memories of that happy day in August, 1853, when the two took that solemn vow that bound them even unto death. How faithfully that compact has been kept, all present gladly bore witness. For fifty years, in sickness and in health, come joy or come sorrow, they have journeyed hand in hand, and the evening of life finds them esteemed by their friends and loved and honored by their children. Surely, such treasures are golden.

While members of the family, only, took part in the exercises commemorative of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs were the recipients of many beautiful floral pieces and potted plants from friends at home and abroad, who hold them in fond remembrance. These were displayed about the house and set off the pretty decorations in the various rooms. Telegrams of congratulation were received from friends at distant points, while many at home called in person to express their esteem and regard.

Among the many beautiful presents received, was a loving piece from the local lodge of Rebekahs, of which organization Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs have long been members.

Relatives, who sat around the festive board at the Jacobs home Sunday afternoon were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kohn and daughter, Florence of Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Greenberg and two sons, and Mr. M. S. Neugass, of San Francisco; Mrs. Rose Selling, the Misses Eda and Sarah Jacobs, and Mr. Isa Jacobs and Mr. J. Blumberg.

Casper Zierolf has recovered the sacks stolen from his barnyard a few days ago. His attention was called to an article in a Eugene paper, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and upon investigation he found the sacks to be his own.

Hubert Hodes and E. F. Bryant made a trip to the summit of Marys Peak, Sunday. Leaving Corvallis at 4 o'clock that morning they drove to the foot of the Peak and made the ascent on foot, arriving at the summit at 1 o'clock. Here they eat dinner and spent two hours enjoying the landscape. The atmosphere was clear and they could see the ocean and headlands at Yaquina bay with the naked eye. With glasses, the jetty and white caps on the bar were plainly visible. They arrived home about 11, Sunday evening.
