The shocking story of crime and death that comes from Corvallis should set people who are clamoring for "more law," in the interest of temperance reform to thinking. Is it really more law that we want, or is it not that one or two laws carrying the most wholesome restrictions that can possibly be enacted, have been plainly violated in this case? Here we have a lad not yet 19 years old frequenting saloons contrary to law and being supplied with liquor contrary to law, killed by a shot from a sheriff's pistol while murderously resisting arrest while drunk. A boy, we are told, who was the son of worthy and exemplary parents; who was possessed of many excellent traits of character, who was not frequently intoxicated, but who was "ugly when drinking."

Was it not manifestly the business of some one in authority to see that this boy was not allowed to go into saloons? Or, further, that any one who sold or gave him intoxicating liquor should be visited with the penalty plainly prescribed by law for this most flagrant-most damnable-offense? Reports that have come to us of this most distressing affair show that officers and friends acting the role of peacemakers did all in their power to disarm the unfortunate lad and take him into custody without harming him. But, being wild through a drinking bout, which had lasted the greater part of the night, and "ugly" because of the fire that ran riot in his youthful veins, he would not listen to reason and in the final attempt of the sheriff to save the lives of others from the murderous pistol shots that rang out upon the morning air from the drunken boy's pistol, he was killed.

Official vigilance falls far short of its duty when a crisis of this kind is allowed to come; parental vigilance falls far short of its duty when a minor is allowed to hang around saloons all night, or at all, or to become intoxicated more than once.

If there were no law forbidding a saloon-keeper to harbor a minor about his place of business, a clamor would go up for the enactment of such a law, and there the case too often rests. If there were no law forbidding the sale or gift of liquor to minors, a demand for the enactment of such a law would resound throughout the land; having such a law, no further thought is given to the matter.

Accessory after the fact are those in authority who permit these fundamental laws of temperance, that are found upon the statute-books of every state to be openly and frequently violated; culpable indeed are parents or other legal guardians of boys who, upon the first evidence that these laws have been violated, do not avail themselves of the right to prosecute men who are the instruments of their sons' undoing. It should not be difficult to enforce these laws in a rural or village community. That they are not enforced in Corvallis is attested not only by the death of Chester Keady, aged 18, shot while drunk, by the sheriff in pursuance of his duty, but by the drunken companions of similar age who had passed the greater part of the night in a saloon, and by two officers, wounded perhaps unto death by the drink-crazed boy before he fell. There is a strong temperance sermon in all of this, and it does not call for more temperance legislation, but for the enforcement of the wholesome and practical laws that we have.—Oregonian of April 26.

A youth of 18 years killed by the sheriff of Benton county in the performance of his duty lies dead in Corvallis and two prominent men of that town shot down by this boy are wounded, perhaps fatally. The tragedy occurred about midnight Saturday, and because the boy was intoxicated and had a gun. Thus it was a consequence of the violation of two laws, one against selling liquor to minors, and the other against carrying deadly weapons. The story of the tragedy includes the statement that young Keady was inclined to be ugly when drinking. So it appears that he was in the habit of drinking to the point of ugliness, and that this was known. Corvallis is a small place, and the officers must have known this fact, and where he obtained the liquor. It follows that there are other guilty parties besides the boy who has paid the penalty. These are the saloon men who habitually or frequently—or at all, for that matter—sold this minor liquors, and the officers who, knowing that this was done, did not bring complaint against these vendors of intoxicants to boys, and punish them, and put a stop to the practice.

Yes, whiskey is the cause of many, perhaps most, such tragedies, but this is a case that ought to prompt sincere, thorough efforts in every city in the state to suppress this form of violation of the law. It ought to be stopped. Every saloon man selling liquor to a minor should be prosecuted his license should be revoked. The man, or men, who sold this boy liquor, are morally, if not legally, accessories before the fact of the midnight crime.—Portland Journal, Apr. 25.

Citizens of Corvallis, Fathers of boys, the case is up to you. What are you going to do about it?

E. E. WHITE REAL ESTATE CO

I am so happy and so glad,
I do not now feel blue and sad,
I laugh and talk and take my ease:
I come and go just as I please.
I tell you what I sold my home
When I listed it with White & Stone.

I was feeling very blue and sad,
My wife she made me almost mad;
She did not want on the farm to stay,
She wanted to sell it and move away,
So I listed it for more than a year,
And still I found myself right here.

The agents took my place in hand
They were so sure they could sell the land,
I sometimes think they did not try
For they never brought a man to buy,
They gave me a wink with a knowing smile
And tried to fool me all the while.

With that knowing smile and wink
They could not fool me, don't you think,
I said they would not sell my home,
So I listed it with White & Stone.
You bet, I found them just and true;
They will do your work all right for you.

They will always help you if they can,
They deal with you as man with man,
They're always ready with good advice,
And are not afraid to advertise,
So, if you would buy or sell a home
Just have a talk with White & Stone.

For the "Non-Ultra."

Of course, every man isn't a dashing young fellow with leanings toward the ultra. It's not every one that can wear extreme styles, anyhow. They would look out of place. Fully half the good dressers go in for the conservative. We do not mean by that something that's out of date. On the contrary, our conservative coats are right up to the minute, only the cut isn't the kind that people will turn around and look at! Of course, we have the ultra styles, too, for the nobby youth—the sort that will bring out the ejaculation: "Geel but he's dead swell."

If you don't want that sort of thing, we commend our regular conservative suits, the Arvon three-button sack or the three-button double-breasted Tudor, or, may be, the straight-front sack, which-ever your taste decides. You won't be a swaggering Beau Brummel—just a plain every-day man with real smart clothes on.
