Most of the early hay will be in the stack this week. The crop is about as heavy as usual. A good shower would help the crops and gardens generally.

The County Court, at its last session, made a move toward building a new bridge across Mill Creek. This will be much appreciated by the citizens of this locality as the old bridge has been in a dangerous condition for some time.

The people of Fall Creek are making preparations to celebrate, with a good, old-fashioned, mountain picnic. As this is an excellent outing resort, the stream abounding with speckled beauties, it is more than likely that there will be a goodly number present. An appropriate literary program is being prepared.

Farm hands are scarce. The cascara business is furnishing employment to every loose hand, and farmers who need help with their hay find it necessary to pay a premium, or to do the work themselves.

While cutting a small tree from which to gather cascara bark a few days ago, M. L. Barnett, who lives over in the Alesea valley, met with a very painful accident. The tree had been severed from the stump but had lodged against some timber.
