

Good Work At Corvallis.

The people of Oregon take pleasure in reading the compliments paid by a high Government official to the character of the work done at the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station at Corvallis. The officers of the station have in recent years shown themselves to be interested in the agricultural development of this state, and they have been diligent in trying to lead Oregon farmers to adopt better methods. They have not only worked zealously but have accepted good-naturedly the criticisms which a few tillers of the soil have made concerning the theories of "book farmers." Though many farmers refuse or neglect to try the methods recommended by the Agricultural Station, others have possessed a more progressive spirit and have been willing to learn something new. The station is located on land below the average in quality of soil, so that the experiment work is conducted under conditions which fairly represent what Oregon farmers can do. The experiments conducted have been of a practical nature, and the station officials have not hesitated to give the results of their investigations in bulletins and in addresses at farmers' meetings. Unfortunately the farmers who need the information most are least likely to read the bulletins or attend the meetings. Nevertheless, the work of the Station has had a marked influence directly and indirectly, upon agriculture in Oregon, and that influence has been always beneficial.—Oregonian.

About Carnivals.

Several Valley papers have commented upon the carnival proposition after the carnival has passed. In no instance that has come to notice here has reference bearing the marks of sincerity, been favorable. It is not to be desired that any more of this class of amusement come to Albany this year, if at all. The recent affair here was under direction, to a certain extent, of local people and a fraternal order which lent to the show a measure of dignity and a semblance of respectability. Unless local support of this sort can be gained, the carnival plan does not work. The gain here, as elsewhere is small to the auxiliary. The snake eaters carry off most of the receipts. The people composing this sort of a thing are ordinarily tough. One experience is ordinarily enough for any place or order interested. It seems reasonable now that those who favored the carnival have had their way, and those who did not favor it withdrew their objections, that for a season further arrangements of the sort do not be made. The performance is and will be cheap, vulgar and unprofitable.—Albany Herald.

The Father Acquitted.

Sheriff J. H. Ross, of Toledo, passed through town Wednesday, having in custody Irving De Boise and Tarelde Tellefson, who were convicted of robbing seaside cottages. The DeBoise boy and his father were both in the Benton county jail for about six weeks owing to the insecurity of the Lincoln county structure, and were taken back for trial last Saturday. The father was acquitted for lack of evidence, but the son and young Tellefson pleaded guilty and went to the penitentiary for one year each. Sheriff Ross stated that the elder DeBoise had his entire family in court during the trial, and one of his little children was about his neck through nearly the entire term of the court. This seems to have made an impression on the jury, for the verdict was for acquittal. It is stated that when the jury first retired they stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal, and later changed to ten for conviction, but finally a verdict of acquittal was reached, probably owing to the helpless condition of the family, whose main support the father is.
