CONVENIENT GRANARY.

Lumber and Other Material Required Will Cost $58. This building is 14 by 20 feet, and 14 feet high to the eaves. The lower part is 7 1/2 feet high. The bins are planing as shown. Grain is put in above and drawn out at S. S. The steps of stairway S. W. are seven inches high, so that it is easy to carry grain up and empty it into the bins in each side. To get the grain out is always harder, but in this granary it is the easiest work, as all you have to do is hold the bag under the spout (S), turn the shut-off, and the grain does the rest. It is only play to sack a load of grain. One man can do it as fast as two with a half-bushel.

There are three bins on each side in my granary, each of 200 bushels capacity. The space on upper floor between bins, back of the stairway, is five by eleven feet, and high enough for any man to walk and work in. Lower floor mostly used for storing seed and grain in sacks, such as flaxseed, clover, timothy, etc. They are packed under the slant of the bins, out of the way. The middle space is used for cleaning grain, and a good fanning mill is always in readiness, and good platform scales upon which everything is weighed.

The carpenter says this style of bin is easier on the building, as most of the pressure is on the inside, drawing the frame together instead of pressing it out. The weight is carried direct to the sills, resting on good stone foundation. The rough lumber and flooring were got out of our own woods; siding—cucumber and white wood—cost ten dollars per 1,000 feet on the stump, and is of better quality than I could have got for double the money in the lumber yards. Here is the bill of lumber needed:

Two pieces 8x8, 20 feet long.
Three pieces 8x8, 14 feet long.
Twenty-six studding 2x5, 14 feet long.
Four corner posts 5x5, 14 feet long.
Nine joists 2x8, 14 feet long.
Twelve joists 2x8, 10 feet long.
Twenty-four bin studding 2x4, 9 feet long.
Twenty-two rafters 2x5, 10 feet long.
Fifteen girts 1 1/2 x 4, 11 feet long.
One hundred ribs 1x2, 12 feet long.
Five hundred feet flooring.
Eighteen hundred feet siding and for bins inside.

The cash cost, beside my labor, is as follows, in round numbers:
Carpenter.....$25
Saw bill.....12
Siding.....18
Stone and cement.....15
Shingles.....15
Window sash and glass.....2
Nails, track and rollers for door.....5
Paint, oil and brush.....4
Planing and matching.....4

Total.....$88
Siding runs up and down, as it is better that way. At the gable ends the siding is scalloped, which adds but a few cents to the cost. This granary suits me perfectly. Paint it nicely, and it will be an ornament to the farm.—A. A. Singler, in Ohio Farmer.

SOME HELPFUL HINTS.

Scatter manure as fast as it is hauled out.
Get all of the manure out possible before planting.

Breeding from immature stock has a strong tendency to degenerate the offspring.

One object in pruning is to lessen the amount of fruit and increase its quality.

Feed the growing pigs a good ration of ship-stuff wet up with skim-milk twice daily.

Clean, well-fitting harness for the work teams will often save having sore shoulders.

In order that the horses may get the full benefit of their rest at noon, always remove the harness.

With pigs it is always best to push the growth and sell young, and in that way lessen the risk of loss.

Slops made of bran and middlings with skim-milk makes one of the very best foods for suckling sows.

The aim in breeding should be to build up vitality, standing and capability for rapid development.

Commence cultivating as soon as possible after planting. This is the easiest way of keeping in a good condition.—Farmers' Union.

For a Permanent Pasture.

When practicable a permanent pasture is desirable. Fields that are adapted to the production of tilled crops that are under a close rotation cannot be pastured with profit. If a crop of clover or timothy is removed in the rotation there is nothing gained by grazing the young grass nor the growth after the crop is removed. The soil needs more of this organic matter than it gets at the best, and this aftermath is worth more as food to the soil than to stock. The skinning of the tilled fields by stock and the tramping when the land is wet are responsible for many failures to get profitable crops. If less desirable land can be laid down to permanent grasses and stock be confined to this land, the plowed land of the farm has a better chance.

Dragging Pains

2835 Keeley St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 2, 1902.
I suffered with falling and dragging of the womb, with severe pains through the groin. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and ringing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Mrs. Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui, for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

WINE OF CARDUI

POPULAR OCEAN BEACH.

Many from the Willamette Valley to Spend Their Vacation at the Sea Shore.

Hundreds from the Willamette Valley spent their vacation at North (Long) Beach, Washington, last summer, and it is safe to say that this popular resort of the North Pacific Coast will be visited by many more this year than ever before within its history. The change from the valley to the sea level opens up an entirely new realm of scenic charms.

The trip on the Willamette and Columbia rivers, out of Portland, is one long to be remembered, the usual heat of a summer afternoon being tempered by a gentle breeze freighted with the aroma of pine trees and seasoned with salt sea air. The scenery includes much that is beautiful. Leaving Portland on one of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company's palatial river steamers, (the T. J. Potter being queen of river flyers) the excursionist is carried through its harbor where fly the flags of many nations. The twelve miles on the Willamette river are quickly made, and, after saluting the government light house, marking the junction of the two rivers, the boat swings into the Columbia for the trip down stream. The morning is clear (generally so from June until September), and a magnificent and inspiring sight meets the eye as the sweep around the bend is made—five snow-capped peaks, Mount Hood, Mount Adams, Mount Saint Helen, Mt. Ranier and Mount Jefferson, looming into view a sight worth traveling thousands of miles to see. On down the picturesque river, past villages, sawmills, fishing fleets, salmon canneries, spectacular basaltic bluffs, and pretty side hill farms, the boat pursues its way. The majestic sweep of the river is awe inspiring. Gradually the shores grow farther and farther apart and scarcely realizing that the five hours have been consumed in making the trip, the boat steams along side the wharf at Astoria.

One hour from Astoria, through the famous fishing waters of the Columbia, past scores of salmon traps and nets and as many white-winged fish boats, lands the passengers at Ilwaco, on Baker's Bay, where connections for beach points is made with trains of the Ilwaco Railway & Navigation Company, whose cars stand on the wharf awaiting the steamer.

North Beach, where the surf bathing is unexcelled, at low tide is from 200 to 400 feet wide, twenty-three miles long and so compact that a carriage or wagon scarcely leaves a trace upon it. Scattered along the beach are hundreds of cottages and hotels in which summer life is an unceasing round of pleasure from the opening until the closing of season. The much dreaded "Resort Mosquito" is unknown and no venomous snakes or insects are found. The thermometer rarely goes above 80 degrees in July or August, but light overcoats, fires morning and evening and blankets at night are comfortable during the season.

Rates for accommodations at North Beach points are reasonable and vary to suit the visitor. European hotels and lodging houses range from 25 cents to one dollar a day; at restaurants, meals run from twenty-five to fifty cents; and at the American-plan hotels range from one dollar a day to two dollars and upward.

Dozens of delightful side trips may be taken from the beach into a country of wild and picturesque beauty, quiet and secluded among hills and forest, with hunting and fishing in native haunts; to the United States Life Saving stations and lighthouses, cranberry farms, oyster beds, salmon fishing grounds and canneries.

For particulars about the trip to North Beach ask the nearest O. R. & N. agent, or send two cents in stamps to A. L. Craig, general passenger agent, Portland, for "Recreational Resorts," which tells all about the Columbia River summering places.

IS TO BE CONTINUED.

Free Mail Delivery in Rural Districts May Become an Established National Institution.

The experiment in rural free mail delivery, made from 140 post offices throughout the country, is to be continued, owing to the increase by congress of the appropriation available for this purpose. If rural free mail delivery becomes an established institution it will remove one more of the drawbacks to rural life in the United States. Perhaps the time is not far distant when the American woman's dislike of country life will be succeeded by an appreciation of it as hearty as that felt by her English cousin.

Rural free mail delivery ought to be as successful in the United States as it is in England, if for no other reason than that the country in the older sections of the United States is more thickly populated than it is in England. One of the greatest obstacles to rural free mail delivery in this country has been the absence of good roads. Some of the experimental routes now under trial are in the vicinity of Moorestown, N. J., from which place radiate many miles of improved roads, built under the state road law. In that vicinity mail is now being distributed at the farmers' homes by carriers upon bicycles, so that the roads, which make the use of a bicycle, equipped with mud guards and gear case, possible in all kinds of weather, except when the ground is covered with snow, have conferred upon the inhabitants the additional benefits of a free mail delivery.

The past reports of the stone road commissioner of New Jersey have contained communications showing a much greater activity in the real estate market in the neighborhood of improved roads. Every additional convenience added to rural life must make that life seem more desirable to the American women who are chiefly responsible for the flocking of the American people to villages and towns. Good roads, bicycles, free mail delivery—all tend to counteract rapidly that dislike of an isolated life which has been handed down from mother to daughter from the time that America was a wilderness inhabited by wild animals and savage men. The conveniences spoken of help to make rural life not only possible, but enjoyable, and they afford opportunity for development of that interest in country affairs which must be the basis of perfect content with a rural life.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

FAVORABLE DECISION.

Good Roads, Says the Iowa Supreme Court, Are of Benefit to Every Citizen of the State.

A decision which is favorable to the improvement of the highways has been rendered by the Iowa supreme court, and is based on the principle that "good highways are of general benefit, not only to the territory through which they pass, but to the inhabitants of cities and towns, by facilitating travel, and thus promoting intercourse and trade."

The question at issue was on the right of a county to collect taxes in cities and towns for road purposes. A railroad company claimed that it was double taxation, on the ground that the cities already laid a tax for their own streets, and further claimed that taxes could not be levied in one part of a county to use in another part.

The court decided against these claims and, it would seem, very justly. It is a very shortsighted policy for a city to desire to limit its work of road improvement to its own borders. In order to grow and prosper and maintain a healthy activity the roads from the surrounding country which nourish it and take its merchandise in return must be kept open and in good condition. This is at least as important for the city as for the country, and they should divide the expense in right proportion.—L. A. W. Bulletin.

The Average of Butter.

Prof. Wing, speaking recently to the New York state dairy meeting of a visit he had paid to Europe, said: "Our butter in some cases is as good as any in Denmark, but does not average as good. There are some careless dairymen there as elsewhere, but there is not so much variation. There is nothing done there that we do not do. There is no milk secret. Their cows, feed and milk are ordinary. Scrupulous care, cleanliness and the use of artificial ferments, which is almost universal, are the causes of superiority."—Farmer's Review.

Progress in Louisiana.

The new constitution of Louisiana allows the police juries "to set aside at least one mill per annum of the taxes levied by them, and to impose a per capita tax of not more than one dollar per annum upon each able-bodied male inhabitant * * * and to levy an annual license of not less than 25 cents nor more than one dollar per annum upon each vehicle, including bicycles, kept and used for locomotion" for the purpose of "constructing, maintaining and repairing the public roads and bridges of their parishes."

Grading Up the Flocks.

When an attempt is made to grade the flock up to a higher standard such work should be done by judicious selection of pure-bred males and females, but farmers prefer to procure males and cross on their hens. If farmers will use the best males, however, crossing would not be objectionable, but they will exchange males with some neighbor, or accept as pure-bred fowls some that are but grades, which can effect no improvement. The best to be had is not too good when the stock is to be improved.—Farm and Fireside.
