LIVE STOCK POINTERS.

Corn smut will not injure cattle unless they eat too much of it.

Hogs will fatten on alfalfa, but should be finished off with some grain. Horses are very fond of artichokes and do well on them as a partial food. Infuse some new blood into the swine herd and you will find that it pays.

At night in hot weather animals should be kept out of doors as much as possible.

Is the animal panting and no shade or water to partially relieve the distress? Bad, very bad.

Flies do not like kerosene oil, and just touching the hair of the animal with sponge saturated with the oil will help keep the flies off.

The country butcher is an advantage to the farmer because he will buy an animal occasionally and furnish fresh meat for the farmer's table.

Oxen are not much used in the west, but you will sometimes see them in the far west. They are not profitable for team service, but the bull could be worked with profit.

An alarming report from swine breeders is that there is not much buying of pure bred swine. This is a detriment to the farm breeders, we fear. Keep the standard high, and that can only be done by an occasional introduction of new blood.—Western Plowman.

Exercise for Brood Mares.

Mares with suckling foals should be exercised plentifully with slow and light work. After the foal is a month old it may be left in a box stall or feed lot out of sight and hearing of its dam from morning till noon, when it should be allowed to suckle. If the mare's udder is very full of milk it should be partly emptied when the animal comes home at night and before the colt is allowed to get its evening drink.—Farmers' Review.

PREVENTION OF ROUP.

Germs of the Disease Do Not Develop Without Assistance of Filth and Dampness.

Roup is a disease that is not feared by those that have never had it in their flocks. A person will sometimes raise poultry for many years and never have a case. It is our belief that it is possible to keep the disease out of the flock altogether by using due precautions. Bad weather conditions seem frequently to be the cause of the disease, but it is certainly due to a germ, and however bad the weather the disease could not come without the germs being present. But even if the germs are present they may not find a chance to develop without the assistance of filth, dampness and drafty roosting places. The way to keep roup out of a flock is to keep the house clean, supply it with an abundance of light, have it so tight that the fowls will be exposed to no drafts, and then be careful about introducing new birds. New fowls must be purchased now and then, but such ones should be kept by themselves and away from the rest of the flock for a month after purchase to make sure that they are healthy. When the disease is once introduced it is likely to prove a very stubborn visitor to eject. Prevention is far easier than cure.

Roup is frequently very destructive, but at other times the disease seems to be mild in form, carrying off no birds at all. This has led to the suspicion that there are several diseases that we ignorantly named roup. We are certain that there are at least two, one being common in winter and the other most fatal in summer. The bacteriologists are working on the diseases at the present time and may ultimately bring light out of the darkness. But with our present knowledge we must treat all of these diseases as one and call them simply roup. This word is an old one and means "to cry out." It was probably given to this disease because birds affected with it cry out. A synonym is the "pip."

When this disease gets into a flock the losses from dead birds may be great; but the incapacitation of the live birds may be even greater. One man claimed to us that he had a recipe that had cured his flock of roup. It was quite an extensive combination of drugs that were made up into pellets. Each bird had to be caught in turn and have the pellets crammed down the throat. It took several months in the winter to cure the flock, and this work had to be done just at the time when the fowls should have been laying eggs. "But," said the man, "I cured them anyway, and without losing a single fowl, but I didn't get any eggs till the middle of the next summer." It may well be doubted if the cure was worth the trouble. Doubtless it would have paid better to have chopped off the heads of the well fowls as soon as it was apparent that the disease was likely to take them.

Roup is indicated by the birds having swelled heads, watery eyes, nostrils clogged with matter, by diarrhea, and by a high fever. Sometimes all symptoms except fever and diarrhea are wanting. It is better to kill cheap birds that are sick than to doctor them. But if it is desired to doctor them, their heads and throats should be washed in antiseptics and the well and sick birds should be separated.—Farmers' Review.

His One Act of Wisdom. "That young Jollifings seems to be about the biggest fool I ever saw. All he does is go gallivanting around, spending money like water and letting the girls who want to have a good time making a monkey of him. What good does such a fellow do the world?" "You've got me guessing there. And yet, in spite of his general foolishness, he did none thing once that was much wiser than anything you or I ever did."

"What was that?" "Picked out a millionaire to be his father."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1902. Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Serges Dumber

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one sincere effort to be well. You need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?
