Ceylon was the last of the three eastern countries even in the united kingdom.

tants of Ceylon began to grow tea successful. on a small scale, but the business flourished so that acreage devoted to the raising of this staple in creased enormously. And the beauty of the whole matter was the fact that the Ceylonians managed their export trade so well that 92 per cent. of their product was sold in the British posses sions, ousting the tea of China and Japan.

"During the last ten years the amount of Indian tea consumed by the people of England alone has increased more than 70 per cent Considering the fact that Japar and China had a firm hold on the tea market when the Ceylonians started out, this is quite remarka ble. It shows that the British people are willing to support each other, although they may be of different hue and may be thousands of miles apart."
