WILL BE JUST.

The most strenuous republican among all men is President Roosevelt. He is rugged and blunt in his purpose, but at all times honest. Honesty is written in every word he utters. All of his consideration is for the good of his people as a whole—not for any particular class. So apparent is this that the people feel and acknowledge it to the fullness of their ability.

One of the greatest battles fought by any man in years is that of President Roosevelt in his endeavor to secure just rates from the railroads of this great republic for and in behalf of the common people. It required no small amount of courage to do this; it required not alone a thorough understanding of the matter of railroad regulation, but the ability to see far into the future and discern possible impediments in such a course.

It is noteworthy that in every utterance of the president there is apparent the determination to do the right thing not only by the common people, but by those who own and control the railroads. In a recent speech made in Colorado President Roosevelt stated that the great commonwealth had been served in a degree far beyond estimation by the railroad men in times past. They made connection of the Atlantic with the Pacific; they built into undeveloped regions; by the investment of their capital, their energy, their genius, and employment of great perseverance they placed the people of the United States to a great extent in their debt.

In view of all this President Roosevelt is just as anxious that in the matter of regulation no injustice be done these men as that they shall cease oppressing the people. The debt of the people has been paid. In the matter of railway regulation the people of every political faith are with the president. The one great obstacle is the U. S. senate. Will it dare hold out against both president and people in an issue of such vital importance? It scarcely seems likely. One would naturally guess Teddy, backed as he is by the people, to win. But justice must be done so nearly as possible to each and every one.

Council Notes.

The common council of the City of Corvallis met in regular monthly session last Monday evening. No business of any great importance was transacted.

Bills were allowed on the general fund in the sum of $351.80; on the street fund to the amount of $144.40.

An ordinance was passed prohibiting merchants and others from depositing their wares on the sidewalks along Main street. Bicycle racks are also to be removed from the sidewalks; in fact, any obstruction whatever is strictly prohibited.

There was some discussion regarding matters pertaining to the fire limits of the city as regards dilapidated buildings. The matter came up over the advisability of allowing Dave Irvin to repair his building on South Main street, work having been suspended by the fire chief. On this matter the council was somewhat divided. Some of the councilmen contend that the present ordinance regulating matters of building and repairs within the limits are too stringent and offer in support of their argument that it is better for all concerned that buildings be repaired than that they be forced to remain in a state of dilapidation.
