GAUGES IMPURITY IN AIR.

Clever Swiss Inventor Originates Instrument Which Tells Healthfulness of Atmosphere.

A clever Swiss inventor has originated an instrument which tells the exact condition of the air in a room—that is, its degree of impurity, according to the New York Herald. It is generally believed that if the air in a room is bad it will be sufficiently noticeable to the persons in the room without the aid of any instrument. But if one stops to remember how quickly the suffocating odors in a crowded room are perceived by a person entering from the pure air outside she will see that this state of things might be remedied by this new invention. The instrument consists of an air-tight glass receptacle in which is a red fluid. A bent glass tube is inserted in this and up this tube the fluid runs to drop at the rate of two drops a minute on to a cord which is stretched by a weight. This fluid possesses the property of changing color when submitted to the action of carbonic acid gas. The more of this gas there is in the room the more pronounced the change in the color of the fluid. With this fact in mind the principle on which the indicator works is easily understood. The drops of fluid as they fall on the string change it according to the condition of the atmosphere. Should the atmosphere be pure the string remains red all the way down. Would it be slightly tainted the top of the string appears white, the fouler the air the longer the white marks on the string. By the side of the string runs an indicator, graded to show the exact condition of the air. The highest point on the scale marks "pure," the next "passably pure," then "bad," and from there down to "very bad" and "extremely bad." The instrument has been thoroughly tested and found to work perfectly.

BISHOP VICTIM OF A JOKE. Opens Gate at Request of Child and Finds Hands Covered with Fresh Paint.

The archbishop of Canterbury, says the New York Times, is shown among his friends as especially partial to two things—children and jokes. As bishop of London he won no little of his great influence in the slum districts because of his immense popularity with the small citizens whom he dearly loved, and as for the jokes he need but to hear the famous anecdote tell one upon himself to realize how keen is his sense of and taste for humor.

Not long before his translation he was one day walking in the suburbs of the English capital when he chanced upon a little girl, who was standing looking up some what stiffly at a four-barred gate. "Oh, please, sir," she asked, "will you open this gate for me?" Smiling upon the demure maiden, the bishop lifted the latch and pushed back the gate, but in spite of its size it swung so easily that he said: "You're such a big little girl that I should think you could open yourself so easily."

THORN TREES FOR LAWN.

Have Several Virtues to Recommend Them as Ornaments—Also Suitable for Hedges.

More than 30 years ago an eminent botanist called attention to the beauty of our native thorn trees and their suitability for hedges and for lawn ornaments.

Their hardiness and graceful shapes, thick foliage and brilliant fruit clusters all recommend them, while the ability to flourish under a severe pruning is an added virtue in the eyes of those who desire formal shapes. Yet up to the present time, says a writer in Country Life in America, our thorn trees remain the ornaments, not of private grounds, but of waysides and pastures; while the only pruners to exercise their skill upon them are the cattle, which eagerly browse upon the young shoots. Many a pasture contains shrubs fitted to grace a public park and worthy of considerable pilgrimage on the part of lovers of the beautiful.

CEMETERY GAG SOLD FARM

Du Page County, Ill., Man Adopts a Unique Method of Selling Land Advantageously.

"There are many ways of bringing a hesitating buyer up to the mark," said Lawyer John E. Kehoe, in the Chicago Daily News, "but the way my friend and client, Tom Corrigan, of Du Page county, Ill., managed to sell his farm was about as unique as any."

"Tom was tired of farming in that particular section. He wanted to sell and get out, and his neighbor, Silas Barker, whose farm lay across the road from him, wanted just as badly to buy and get in. But Silas was a great hand at a bargain, and he kept waiting for Tom to come down to a price that would please him. This Tom was not inclined to do. The pair occasionally met and casually referred to the matter, one trying to conceal that he was anxious to sell and the other that he was burning to buy, but they never seemed to come any nearer an agreement."

"Well, Mr. Barker," said Tom, at length, "I think I've a good buyer in view now for this farm of mine. Still, you being a neighbor, I'm willing to give you the preference."

"What's your price to-day?" asked Silas.

"It's $500 more than it was last time," replied Tom.

"I guess not," said Barker.

"Next day Silas saw Tom Barker conducting a Roman Catholic priest over the farm as if showing him its various points and advantages. On inquiry he got a whisper from a friend of Tom's that the latter was negotiating with Father Madigan, who wanted the place for a cemetery."

"For a cemetery! Right at his door, too! A cemetery, with hearses and carriages full of mourners, unloading almost at his very threshold every day, and bristling rows of tombstones to look out upon every night. This would be a sad upset to his cherished dream of amalgamating the two farms and owning one of the finest pieces of land in Du Page county."

"Very soon he sought out Tom Corrigan. 'Is it true that you're going to sell your farm to the priest?'"

"That's my own business, Mr. Barker," said Tom.

"And is it true that it's going to be made into a cemetery?'"

"Faith, then, 'tis little I know or care what the buyer intends to make of it, so long as I get a good price for it."

"Tom Corrigan, what's the price of your farm to-day?'"

"It's $1,000 more than it was yesterday," answered Tom.

"Well, then," said Barker, "I'll take it at that price."

"And he took it. Now, the priest had no notion of booming Corrigan's real estate with his innocent visit, so he was angry. But he was not so thoroughly disgusted as was Silas Barker when the latter discovered the trick by which Corrigan had got his own price for his farm."

KOREANS TRAIN TORTOISES

Show Wonderful Skill and Ability in Teaching Reptiles to Execute Various Evolutions.

Japanese and Korean showmen, in addition to their skill as jugglers and acrobats, display a truly marvelous skill in teaching animals tricks. They not only exhibit educated bears, spaniels, monkeys and goats, but also trained birds, and what is the most astonishing of all, trick fish. One of the most curious examples of patient training is an exhibit by an old Korean boatman of a dozen drilled tortoises. Directed by his songs and a small metal drum, they march in line, execute various evolutions, and conclude by climbing upon a low table, the larger ones forming of their own accord a bridge for the smaller, to which the feat would otherwise be impossible. When they have all mounted they dispose of themselves in three or four piles, like so many plates.
