BANKING

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF Corvallis, Oregon, does a general, conservative banking business. It guards safely its customers' banking business through the panics of the last two decades, which merits proper consideration. It affords banking privileges at home and abroad, first-class, not excelled by any institution in the United States. The members of the Board of Directors were born and raised in Benton County, except one, and that member has resided in the county forty-six years. The business history of each is as an open book before the people of the county. Loans to customers solicited, properly secured. 40tf

LAND AGENTS

WHEN IT COMES TO BUYING lands, new-comers in this county will make no mistake in consulting James Lewis. Mr. Lewis has been in Benton for 30 years and not only knows the county but the entire valley. He has been actively engaged in selling and buying live stock and real estate all of this time and naturally his judgment is sound. He knows soils and values. His knowledge is worth money to anybody desiring correct and sincere information. 25-77*

H. M. STONE, REAL ESTATE AND Intelligence office—After 42 years in Benton and Linn counties, I feel justified in coming before the home-seekers of Oregon, and feel that I am competent to locate all such as wish to buy homes here, with judgment and competency. For 27 years I was a bridge builder in Benton, Lane, Polk, Yamhill and Linn counties. I have property in the above named counties to sell, and am thoroughly conversant with the same. I ask no exclusive right of sale and unless property is sold by me I ask no pay. Parties wishing to employ help or if looking for a position, will find it a convenience to phone or call at the office. Kindness and courtesy extended to all. Office, South Main street, Corvallis, Oregon. Office phone 378, res. phone 66.

SWORE WASHINGTON IN.

Home of John Langdon, First President of Senate, Still Stands—His Political Career.

John Langdon's house still stands in Portsmouth, Me., a reminder of that man's devotion to his state and his country, which he served so well. As president of the first United States senate it was he who declared the vote of the infant republic which elected George Washington to the national presidency. He also administered to Washington the oath of office.

John Langdon was one of the gallant little band of patriots, including Capt. Thomas Pickering and Maj. John Sullivan, that on a December night in 1774 went to Newcastle and surprised the garrison at Fort William and Mary. This was the first overt act of the revolution, and it occurred four months before the battle of Lexington.

He was speaker of the provincial legislature in 1776 and 1777, and that legislative body was in session at Exeter when the news of the fall of Ticonderoga came. Seeing the public credit exhausted, and his compatriots discouraged, he arose and said:

"I have $1,000 in hard money. I will pledge my plate for $3,000 more. I have 70 hogsheads of Tobacco rum, which will be sold for the most they will bring. They are at the service of the state. If we succeed in defending our firesides and our homes I may be remunerated. If we do not, then the property will be of no value to me. Our friend Stark, who so nobly maintained the honor of our state at Bunker Hill, may be safely intrusted with the honor of the enterprise, and we will check the progress of Burgoyne."

It is a well known fact that it was through John Langdon's noble offer that the gallant little army was raised that, under the command of the intrepid Stark, won everlasting glory at the battle of Bennington.

In November, 1788, he was elected a member of the United States senate, and became the first presiding officer of that body.

Later in life he was nominated for vice president, but declined on account of his age.

From 1801 to 1805 he was a member of the New Hampshire legislature. And from 1805 to 1808 and 1810 and 1811 was the governor of that state.

The mansion on Pleasant street, Portsmouth, was built by Gov. Langdon in 1874, and was occupied by him until his death in 1819. It is now occupied by one of his descendants.

THIS COWBOY PARTICULAR.

Plainsman Wanted Story, But Upon Its Presentation He Thought He Had Cash Coming.

A cowboy living in Arizona, 40 miles from a post office or a book store, was a Graustark convert. He learned my address from a Chicago man who happened to be traveling in that country and wrote me a letter.

He said he was eager to read my new book, "The Snerrods," which had just been published. He had ridden 40 miles, going and coming, twice a week for a month, but had been unable to secure the book at the nearest town, says a writer in the Bookman. He was writing to ask me if I would send him a copy by mail if he would send me the price. I sent him a copy with my compliments and told him he need not mind the price, I was only too happy to give him the book. It required but little perception on my part to discover that he did not like the story. I have only to repeat what he said:

"I don't wonder you are happy to give it away. You don't expect people to buy it, do you? I'm much obliged to you for giving it to me for nothing, but even at that I think there is some change coming to me."

What criticism could be more caustic than that?

It penetrated to the very quick of my pride, and I made the mistake of retaliating politely. I sent him a dollar and fifty cents in stamps and asked if that made us square. He went me one better by responding that he could use the stamps to great advantage in warning his friends not to read the book. I was afraid to reply to this.

WELCOMED BY BIG NATION

When Lafayette Visited This Country, the Whole Population Did Him Honor.

When Lafayette revisited this country he had no idea of the greeting he was to receive. No intimation was given him of a public demonstration. Indeed, the modest old hero came in a most simple and unassuming fashion, and, not being possessed of riches, was a little afraid lest his means should not prove sufficient. He made many anxious inquiries of his fellow passengers on the French packet in regard to the prices of living and traveling in America. A gentleman on board invited him to make his headquarters at his Boston residence. Neither he nor his invited guest had any thought of the welcome awaiting the nation's former ally. Mr. William Stone describes in his "Reminiscences" the reception in New York harbor.

When the packet was near the Narrows two men rowed to the vessel and boarded her. They were clad in plain civilian dress, and, after a private conference with the captain, quietly departed. When the ship reached Staten Island it dropped anchor, much to the surprise of all, and somewhat to the disgust of many of the passengers.

Suddenly a long line of vessels was observed coming down the bay. Steamboats and sailing craft of all kinds formed a quite considerable fleet. Yards were manned, flags were flying and bands were playing.

"What is it?" asked Lafayette. No one could answer save the captain, and he kept his own counsel.

"Some grand anniversary of your republic, messieurs?" suggested Lafayette.

The gay vessels approached, making for the French ship, round which they clustered. One of the boats steamed alongside, and a number of gentlemen in official costume stepped on board. They were the governor of New York and his staff and the mayor of the city.

Not until the captain of the French ship introduced these dignitaries to General Marquis de Lafayette did the old soldier suspect that the demonstration was all for him. When the truth dawned on him that this was the hand of a grateful country stretched out to give him greeting, he stood speechless, with the tears falling fast from his eyes.

As the general bade his Boston friend good-by, he said:

"Monsieur, I shall love New York so well I may never be able to get away from it to pay you visit in Boston. Dis grand re publique. Von grand people!"

THE SINS OF THE FATHER.

Georgia Bishop Tells Story of How Sire's Wrongs Descend on Harmless Offspring.

Bishop Rawdon, of Georgia, illustrated the other day a well known text with an anecdote in the New York Tribune.

"There was once a hod carrier," said, "whose name was Jerome McWade. Jerome was working a job in the country last summer, and, in order to reach the railroad station to take the train home, it was necessary for him each evening to cross a large, flat field.

"There was a small bull in this field one evening, and it gave Jerome a terrible chase. He fled like the wind before it for more than a mile, and only escaped just a time, by making a wonderful jump over a five-foot fence.

"The next evening, on his homeward way, Jerome carried his hod with him for a weapon. Swinging a heavy hod he entered the field fearlessly, but this time the bull was absent. Only a calf, a playful, harmless little calf, could Jerome find. He approached the calf, being greatly excited, and determined to be revenged. He struck the little animal a violent blow with his hod, at the same time exclaiming loudly: "Take that, and tell your father Jerome McWade did it!"
