HOW TARPON ARE TRAPPED

Vivid Tale of Mastering the Fish— An Hour Necessary Before Success Is Obtained.

The boat stops still; you are in a swirl on a wave, and a great fish, with a greenish body and a large projecting fin, appears above it. It is a breathless moment. "Look out, dar," yells "Tony"; there is a splash about 30 yards away, you line becomes taut and is gliding; out like lightning before you can apply the brake. When you do it is almost jerked from your grasp and simultaneously the tarpon leaps and writhes above the water again, says Outing. There is no sight more beautiful to the eye than that of the tarpon, like a gleam of light from darkness, leaping forth from the green sea. That moment when the tarpon has the bait and you strike is the one of all others most fraught with intense excitement. It is the first crisis in the battle. He is down again and your hook holds. He darts back and forth, ever going deeper in his wild rushes. It is an earnest fight. The first ten minutes seem like an hour. "Rush 'im, reel up, don't let him rest," following the advice, your arms tire, your hands become numb, it may be bleeding and blistered, but you save your fish. Thus you are towed out toward the sea, always fighting. In his mad rushes the huge fish gained on you, taking out nearly 100 yards of your line. During the first half hour he has decidedly the better of the fight and keeps most of the line. During the second half hour you gain the lost line foot by foot and the honors are about equally divided. Now the long rushes and leaps begin to tell and he loses wind. If he did not help to kill himself by these wild rushes and leaps, you could never land him. By some kind of intuition, an angler can tell when he has gained the mastery over a fish. You feel instinctively that the crisis has been passed and the boat turns back toward the beach; and as the beach is neared you reel in and fight at close range.

Once he dashes almost up to the boat and suddenly turns about; you nearly lost him that time. You soon lead him back, however. Now he lies near the boat; you see his gleaming sides glisten in the light. "Stiddy, now," says our man, as the boat touches the beach; you climb out and, resisting his last waning strength, as he lashes spray upon you, you pull him out upon the sand and the fight is won.

KAISER IS A HARD WORKER

German Emperor Has Even a Yan- kee Millionaire Beaten for Strenuous Exercise.

An American manufacturer who had recently been in Germany returned with a budget of personal incidents concerning the German emperor, whom he was so fortunate as to meet several times.

"As a worker the kaiser beats even a Yankee millionaire," he says in the New York Herald. "Why, even on the morning of his marriage he appeared at the barracks at Potsdam at six o'clock to give a medal to a sergeant major. He was then simply Prince William, but to the officers, who were astonished to see him at such a moment, he said: 'I am only doing my duty.' And later, as emperor, he has said: 'It is not necessary that I live, but it is essential that I work.'"

"He never postpones any kind of business, but settles everything at the hour appointed, even though to do so he has to take an hour or so from his sleep. He has made it a rule that even an important dinner of ten courses to 80 people shall not last longer than 50 minutes. In his bedchamber, beside his bed, a brass air worth $50, he keeps a paper and pencil, that he may make a note of anything that occurs to him before he goes to sleep or when he awakes in the morning."

SEES WINGED EXPRESSES.

Santos-Dumont Utters a Few Start- ling Predictions Regarding Future Transportation.

Writing in the new French magazine Je Sais Tout (I Know Everything), M. Santos Dumont, the famous French aeronaut, prophesies that before many years have passed a complete revolution will have taken place in modern methods of traveling.

Transcontinental aerial expresses will "fly between St. Petersburg and Paris." Men of this generation will take their seats in them as naturally as their grandfathers did in the first railway carriages.

Paris will be transformed by aerial stations at which passengers will alight and embark on flying omnibuses.

Winged warships will menace modern fleets and wage war with submarines—perhaps put whole armies to flight. Very possibly some bold explorer will reach the north pole without much difficulty in a dirigible balloon.

"What would you say," adds M. Santos Dumont, "if I told you that next summer I am confident of giving a new impulse to aerial navigation; that I myself hope to be able, before ending my experiences, to cruise over Europe for a week at a time—without descending to earth—in a yacht that will be in itself a flying house?"

TOLD OF ABSINTHE DRUG.

Is Described as the "Fairy with the Green Eyes"—Is a Nerve Stimulant.

The "fairy with the green eyes" is the poetical way in which absinthe has been described.

"It is rather a drug than a drink," said a medical man who has studied its effects on the body. "As a medicine it has some valuable qualities; as a beverage, its effects are simply deadly. Not a day passes in Paris on which some inveterate absinthe drinker does not drop dead either from apoplexy or heart failure. Fortunately, it has not obtained much hold in England."

"The liqueur is supposed to act as a nerve tonic and brain stimulant, and so it does when taken medicinally. When thus resorted to it gives tone to persons of a highly nervous temperament, and also has the effect of relieving bronchitis by promoting a healthy perspiration. But it should never be taken except under medical advice. As a beverage, avoid it as you would poison. Much of the cheap absinthe sold is adulterated with copper, to give it the characteristic green hue."
