Huge Task

It was a huge task, to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache, and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach. Guaranteed by Allen Woodward, druggist; price 50c."

BITS OF PARIS ETIQUETTE.

Manual Has Just Been Issued in France to Guide Both Men and Women.

How one ought to behave in polite society is always an interesting topic, and even if we know all about it it is worth while to hear what the latest mentor has to say on this score. "The Etiquette of Politeness and the Usages of Modern Society in all the Circumstances of Life" is the ponderous title of a bulky volume issued in Paris on this entertaining subject.

As an index to the behavior of French women and French men it is significant to note that young wives are counseled to banish from their dwelling the "dangerous visitor," giving him to understand that "you can never be anything more to him than a stranger." Young men who think they look well on horseback should meditate this sage advice: "If you are not an experienced equestrian, do not accompany the ladies to hounds."

Men who have attained a certain age are told that they may "embrace little girls on the forehead before their confirmation. Until that period it is a paternal caress, but after that it is wise to abstain." Presumably after confirmation the little girls begin to develop a preference for other than paternal caresses. One would have thought that in a country where men were so proverbially gallant it would not have been necessary to warn them that it is not "correct to stand with their back to the fire, leaning on the mantelpiece."

But the counsel is there, and it is gravely added: "By so doing you deprive others of the comforting heat which you monopolize." "The husband," we learn, "in speaking of his wife says: 'My wife,' but he must not say to her 'is it not so, my wife?' Neither must the wife address her husband in this fashion."

WILL OF A PATRIOTIC MAN

Hoboken, N. J., Resident Leaves Large Share of Cash to Pay on the National Debt.

No stranger or more interesting will has ever been made than that by which Joseph H. Lewis of Hoboken, N. J., left the larger share of his money to the United States to be used toward the payment of the national debt. He was 87 years old and lived alone with an old housekeeper. He was born of English parents on the island of Jamaica, but came to this country when only a small boy. He enlisted in the war of 1812 and forever after was the staunchest of patriots. By trade he was an engraver and had a little shop near Trinity church, where many of the fashionable wedding cards were engraved, as were the silver plates of the rich. In that way the door plate was a most important adjunct to the front of a house, and Lewis did a thriving trade in engraving them.

Though he retired from business at an early date, his competence was so invested during the remainder of the years of his long life that at his death his estate was valued at over $1,000,000. He had many plans for the final distribution of his fortune, but none of them pleased him as did the idea of leaving it to his country. He often told his friends that he had made his money in this country and all that he was owed to the United States. For that reason he wished to repay his indebtedness as best he could. With the exception of a few small bequests the entire fortune of this patriotic man was turned over to the United States government.

Called the Turn.

The elderly maiden had recently inherited a 640-acre farm. Later a man from an adjoining village appeared upon the scene. "Will you be my wife?" he asked. "I love you with my whole heart."

"For the land's sake!" exclaimed the giddy old girl.—Chicago Daily News.

An Oddity.

Wife—The woman who recently moved next door is certainly an oddity.

Husband—How's that?
"Why, she doesn't belong to a single society for the prevention of anything!"—Chicago Daily News.

WOMEN WHO "INVESTIGATE"

Insincerity Is Supreme Fault of Some Who Look for Positions, But Never Take One.

When the woman in the brown walking suit had left the room, relates the New York Press, the man at the desk by the window called out:

"Bright-appearing woman, that I hope you hired her."

"Well, I didn't," said his partner.

"Why not?"

"Because she didn't want to be hired."

"Then what did she answer our advertisement for?"

"You tell me and I'll tell you," was the enigmatic reply. "Why do any of those people that don't really want a job go around looking for one? A lot of them do. I suppose that the different women who make a fad of answering advertisements found in the help wanted column are actuated by different motives. Possibly some of them really think they would like a situation, but when they get inside a business office and gain some idea of the amount of work to be done they back out."

"Then there is another class of insincere investigators. They drive a hardworked business man clear up to the brink of strong drink and sometimes right over it. They are the women who belong to freak societies organized for the purpose of improving mankind. Usually they begin on the man who has advertised for a clerk or a stenographer. They think he is a bad lot, and in order to find out just how infamous he can be they answer his advertisement. In that way they find out what wages he pays and the degree of respect accorded to the prospective employe. Afterward they scorch him in a club paper. I have furnished copy three times, and I expect I'll be written up again. I think that woman who just went out was looking for material."

The man at the desk by the window was clearly perplexed.

"What a queer fad," he said.

THE POPULATION CENTER.

That of the United States Has Been Going Slowly Westward for Several Decades.

The "center of population" of the United States, as fixed under each federal census, travels slowly westward, and is now a little north of the valley of the Ohio river, and has been for several decades in southern Indiana, says the Washington Post. The present center of negro population, however, as fixed by the same bureau, is now at DeKalb county, Alabama, on the Georgia border, a few miles south of Tennessee. That is, while the center of white population moves westward, that of the negro population moves steadily southwest, and has been doing so for more than 100 years, having traveled through Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia in turn, and now having crossed to Alabama. The divergence between the two centers grows greater with each decade. At the close of the reconstruction period it was expected by many people that there would be a vast influx of southern negroes into the north, until the whole west would be overrun with refugees from the southern plantations. Actually, through the natural operation of the law of selection, the negro population gravitates toward the Gulf of Mexico, and particularly to the cotton raising states. The colored population of Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri, border states, is not increasing considerably. Instead of coming nearer together the two races seem to be getting further apart.

A Personal Remark.

"No, madam," said the ladies' tailor, "I can't take a penny off the price of that coat. The figure I quoted just now is the lowest possible."

"But," protested Miss Borgen, "as I told you, I figure that it can—"

"Madam, your figure is simply ridiculous."

"Sir!"—Philadelphia Press.

The Collector.

Goodley—Why don't you go to work?

Beggar—I am workin', I'm a collector o' rare coins.

Goodley—But a nickel is not a rare coin.

Beggar—It is to me.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Pneumonia follows La Grippe but never follows the use of

FOLEY'S Honey and Tar
