BANKING.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF Corvallis, Oregon, does a general, conservative banking business. It guarded safely its customers' banking business through the panics of the last two decades, which merits proper consideration. It affords banking privileges at home and abroad, first-class, not excelled by any institution in the United States. The members of the Board of Directors were born and raised in Benton County, except one, and that member has resided in the county forty-six years. The business history of each is as an open book before the people of the county. Loans to customers solicited, properly secured. 40tf

Notice for Publication.

United States Land Office,
Portland, Oregon,
July 7, 1905.
Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 2, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the State of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892,
EUGENE BOGERT,
of Monmouth, county of Polk, State of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 6534, for the purchase of the E. 1/4 of S. W. 1/4 of W. of S. E. 1/4 of section No. 18 in Township No. 12 South, Range No. 6 West, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before Register and Receiver at Portland, Oregon, on Tuesday, the 16th day of September, 1905.
He names as witnesses: Charles H. Newman, Wilbur Church, Philip H. Johnson, Ernest R. Allen, all of Monmouth, Oregon.
Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 16th day of September 1905.
ALGERNON S. DRESSER,
Register.

He says: "They are a perfect remedy for dizziness, sour stomach, headache, constipation, etc." Guaranteed at Allen & Woodward's drug store; price 25c.

TELLS HOW TO LIVE LONG.

London Professor Gives Twelve Stat- utes Which Must Be Followed If Longevity Is Desired.

Prof. Boyd Laynard, of London, England's leading author of works on hygiene, gives 12 rules in the New York World, for those who desire to live a healthy and long life:

1. Avoid every kind of excess, especially in eating and drinking.
2. Do not live to eat. Select those aliments most suitable for nourishing the body and not those likely to impair it.
3. Look upon fresh air as your best friend. Inhale its life-giving oxygen as much as possible during the day, while at night sleep with the bedroom window open at the top for a space of at least four or five inches. Follow this out even in the depth of winter. It is one of the great secrets of long life.
4. Be clean both in mind and body. "Cleanliness is next to godliness." It is a fortification against disease.
5. Worry not nor grieve. This advice may seem but cold philosophy and to be easier to give than to follow; nevertheless, I have known persons of a worrying disposition almost entirely to break themselves of it by a simple effort of the will. Worry kills.
6. Learn to love work and hate indolence. The lazy man never becomes a centenarian.
7. Have a hobby. A man with a hobby will never die of senile decay. He has always something to occupy either mind or body; therefore they remain fresh and vigorous.
8. Take regular exercise in the open air, but avoid over exertion.
9. Keep regular hours, and insure sufficient sleep.
10. Beware of passion. Remember that every outbreak shortens life to a certain degree, while occasionally it is fatal.
11. Have an object in life. A man who has no purpose to live for rarely lives long.
12. Seek a good partner in life, but not too early.

Col. Andraede, in the account of his life in Mexico, tells an extraordinary story of the will power exercised over plants and the results. He is an ardent lover of flowers, and, possessing strong hypnotic force, the idea occurred to him one day to test the strength of his will on the vegetable kingdom.

He selected two flowering plants of the same kind, both in equally good health and just bursting into generous bloom. Standing near one, he put forth all his mental will power, bidding it to obey him in every way. He commanded it to develop courage and sturdiness, to rejoice in its health and strength, and to develop its sweetness and beauty to the utmost of its power.

Every day he lingered near the plant for a considerable time, giving it all the moral encouragement possible, praising it, flattering it, coaxing it, and, in fact, making absolute love to it.

The plant responded in the most remarkable manner to this stimulating treatment, producing finer blossoms than had ever before been seen of the sort, and sending forth, as though in gratitude, a richer, rarer perfume. Indeed, it seemed absolutely to become personified, and to wish to attain a state of absolute perfection for its master's sake. It actually appeared to recognize him, and seemed to lean toward him at his approach.

On the other hand the colonel treated the second plant in an opposite manner. He disparaged it, scolded it, sneered at its flowers, and was altogether so cruel and unkind that in three days the barely opened blossoms began to wither and within a month the plant actually withered away and died as if of a broken heart.

From this the colonel deduces that plants, etc., may be guided and governed in their growth and development by that animal magnetism which we all possess to some degree. It must be explained that both plants received scrupulously the same gardening care and that the colonel never touched either.

It might be argued from this that the kiss is essentially a civilized institution. And certainly the argument would receive support in the fact that the Japanese have lately adopted kissing among other customs of civilization.

KISS, AS SCIENCE SEES IT.

Unromantic Sons of Research Have Definition Which Takes Away Half Its Beauty.

What we call a kiss (according to an unromantic scientist) is the contraction of a muscle known as the orbicularis oris, which surrounds the mouth. The muscle is first contracted and then relaxed, the upper lip being at the same time lifted by the two "levator" muscles at each corner of the mouth, while the lower lip is drawn down by the two corresponding "depressor" muscles.

Even more depressing is it to learn that the origin of the kiss is not to be traced to any noble source than the lick which the monkey or some other animal bestows upon his offspring. Kissing, however, is not necessarily an instinct with all human beings, for some nations of men never practice it. Among these are the Maoris of New Zealand, the Eskimo, the Papuans, and the Australian "black fellows."

An Easy One.
"I don't like to say such long prayers," said a little girl the other night; "I want to say a nice short one like nurse says."
"What kind does nurse say?" inquired her mother.
"Oh, she just says: 'Oh, Lord, why do I have to get up?'"—Short Stories.

Prodigal's Warm Welcome.
Thomson—Did you ever run away when you were a boy?
Mobs—Once.
"And I suppose the tears flowed freely, when you returned."
"Yes. I made the mistake of returning when father was at home."—Stray Stories.

A Hot One.
Reggy—Bah Jove, I think you ought to apologize for calling me a calf.
Rose—I will.
"Why don't you?"
"Wait till I meet the calf and I will."—Chicago Journal.

PLANTS OBEY WILL OF MAN

Praise Will Raise Them to Ecstatic Joy While Blame Causes Withering.

Now that scientists have demonstrated that metals, which we have been taught belong to the catalogue of inorganic substances, can be poisoned and restored by antidotes, can be overworked and refreshed by a period of rest, and otherwise respond to many of the same influences to which living things are subject, it is not impossible to believe the statement that flowers exhibit sensibilities not unlike those of human beings and other of the higher animals, says the Chicago Tribune. Recent experiments prove that plants have in some cases far finer sensibilities than many modern mortals, since a word of praise will, it is stated, raise them to ecstatic joy and expansion, while blame will so crush their feelings that they die, broken hearted.

Col. Andraede, in the account of his life in Mexico, tells an extraordinary story of the will power exercised over plants and the results. He is an ardent lover of flowers, and, possessing strong hypnotic force, the idea occurred to him one day to test the strength of his will on the vegetable kingdom.

He selected two flowering plants of the same kind, both in equally good health and just bursting into generous bloom. Standing near one, he put forth all his mental will power, bidding it to obey him in every way. He commanded it to develop courage and sturdiness, to rejoice in its health and strength, and to develop its sweetness and beauty to the utmost of its power.

Every day he lingered near the plant for a considerable time, giving it all the moral encouragement possible, praising it, flattering it, coaxing it, and, in fact, making absolute love to it.

The plant responded in the most remarkable manner to this stimulating treatment, producing finer blossoms than had ever before been seen of the sort, and sending forth, as though in gratitude, a richer, rarer perfume. Indeed, it seemed absolutely to become personified, and to wish to attain a state of absolute perfection for its master's sake. It actually appeared to recognize him, and seemed to lean toward him at his approach.

On the other hand the colonel treated the second plant in an opposite manner. He disparaged it, scolded it, sneered at its flowers, and was altogether so cruel and unkind that in three days the barely opened blossoms began to wither and within a month the plant actually withered away and died as if of a broken heart.

From this the colonel deduces that plants, etc., may be guided and governed in their growth and development by that animal magnetism which we all possess to some degree. It must be explained that both plants received scrupulously the same gardening care and that the colonel never touched either.

FIX A SOUTHERN BARBECUE

Explanation of This Innovation in True Down-South Style—Shots a Delicacy.

The way we fix for a barbecue is to begin to get ready the day before. The meat is roasting all night, says Outing. We have plenty of different kinds—shote, calf, kid and goat—and we roast 'em whole. A trench is dug and oak bark coals put in. Then sticks are laid across for the shote and other creatures to rest on. Some white man has this in charge, but the niggers keep the fires goin' an' do the basting and the rough work. The next day everybody comes. There's a detail to do the carving, and we all step up and get what we want and go and get down by some tree to eat it. Of course there's potatoes and cornmeal lightbread and pickles and cake, and there's ice cream, and there's pure, genuine coffee that the old ladies make in abundance. Then there's fried chicken if anyone is fastidious enough to want it, and some enterprising fellow is likely to bring a dozen bottles of beer and invite his special friends out to his buggy to drink it. But the best thing to my thinking is the shote. A man hasn't got any part in the resurrection until he's eaten barbecued shote.
