WHY THE WOMEN ARE LATE

A Scene in the Squibbob Household Explains the Sex's Tardiness in a Clear Manner.

"It's just seven o'clock," said Squibbob, "and so you have plenty of time to dress yourself carefully for the theater. With this margin of time, Henrietta, you can surely have no excuse for being unprepared at the last moment, a trait wholly confined to your sex."

"Yes, dear, I'll start dressing right now," said his helpmeet dutifully.

"And I myself will show you a good example in promptness," said Squibbob, kindly. "I'll start right in now myself. By the way, where are my shirts?"

"Here they are."

"Put the shirt studs in it, will you? And—er—by the way, this dress suit is rather rumpled. I must have tossed it around in the drawer. You are rather handy at those things, Henrietta—can't you press it into some sort of shape?"

"All right, dear."

"And, while you are at it, fix the pearls in my shirt front. Ginger! I wish you'd chase up my cuff buttons."

Mrs. Squibbob flew around with deft and willing hands, gathering the masculine apparel together, while Squibbob calmly dressed himself in the intervals of his rapid-fire directions. "Got my top hat?" he asked. "Good. Now please fix my necktie and—why—er—"

Squibbob gasped in surprise, relates the New York Sun, looked at the clock hands, which pointed eight, and then surveyed the flurried little woman.

"Ginger!" he said, in fine scorn, "aren't you dressed yet? Well, if that isn't just like a woman!"

DINE AT THE FRIAR'S FARM

New Year's Day at the English Home of Best for Finely Bred Horses.

An equine banquet has proved not the least interesting of the festivities of the season. The scene was Friar's Place Farm at Acton, relates the Pall Mall Gazette, where the home of rest for horses carries on its beneficent work of providing a hospital for convalescents, as well as an asylum for the aged, and the occasion was the annual New Year's day dinner to the inmates. Like other festive menus, this one differed from ordinary fare. Ridiculously simple from the human standpoint, it was a succession of dainties for the equine palate. Each inmate of the 60 or so loose boxes was presented with a New Year's box, filled with an assortment of biscuits, apples, carrots and bits of sugar and bread, and they munched these tasty morsels to the accompaniment of many caresses and kind words from the guests who were bidden to the feast merely as onlookers. There was no doubting that the horses knew that their environment was en fete. Long before one of them seized a rope in his teeth, and set the dinner bell a-ringing, two rows of heads and necks were nodding and swaying out of the open upper half of the loose box doors, in intelligent anticipation of the favors to come, keeping their eyes on the tempting titbits as yet beyond their reach, and dilating their nostrils in sniffing satisfaction. Like patients in a hospital ward, each was identified by a framed card, giving his name, his diet and his treatment, and brief biographies were furnished by the manager of the home, as each horse was visited in turn.

The all-pervading kindness displayed on this day by attendants and visitors alike was but part of the system of thoughtful benevolence that obtains all the year round at Friar's Place Farm. The work of the institution is better appreciated the more widely it is known. Each of the three main objects must enlist the sympathy of all lovers of man's noblest friend among the animal creation. First of all, it enables the poorer classes, on moderate terms to procure rest and good treatment for animals that are failing, not from age, but from continuous work, sickness, or accidental causes, and are likely to be benefited by a few weeks' rest and care. A little timely relief of this kind enables many failing horses to do further work with comfort for years, thus saving their owners unnecessary outlay in purchasing others. Secondly, it provides animals for poor persons for temporary use while their own are resting in the home, a small amount being charged for such loans, and a strict guarantee of good treatment being exacted. In the third place, the home provides a suitable asylum for "old favorites" that would suffer by being turned out only to grass, but whose owners, instead of destroying or selling them for future labor, desire to place them under good treatment for the rest of their days, paying a remunerative charge for such accommodation. Among the latter class the visitors were introduced to an old chestnut charger whose master, Col. Fludyear, of the Scots guards, had sent him to join the ranks of the other pensioners for life at the Home of Rest for Horses.

From Immense Heights.
"It is strange that many birds can rise as high as 40,000 feet, and at such immense heights sustain great muscular exertions for an indefinite period," says a naturalist. "From that appalling distance they swoop down in different styles. Ring-doves and woodcock often precipitate themselves with the rushing noise of a rocket. Doves break their descent at a considerable distance from the ground, but snipe rush down within two or three feet of the surface, and continue in a roving course at a very low elevation above it. Sometimes, with undiminished velocity, they sweep down thousands of feet to the base of a cliff, and when an observer goes to see how many pieces the snipe have dashed themselves into, he finds them sitting on a stone as quietly as if they had never been on the move."

NAVIGATES AIR.

Ship Appears to be Great Success.

For many years the matter of navigating space has occupied the minds of many of the world's most noted inventors. Of all things and ideas ever conceived by man there never was any idea projected that was received with so much skepticism as the matter of a flying machine.

It seems that patience and perseverance will accomplish many things—all things, it might be said. A recent visitor at the Fair from this city tells us of the marvellous flight of the airship on exhibition at the Exposition and the Telegram published the following entertaining and instructive write-up of the performance of the ship now at the Fair:

Before the admiring gaze of thousands of people, covering the roofs of down town business blocks, Lincoln Beachy, the 18 year-old aeronaut, in the airship Gelatine, made the most successful flight ever made, traveling in almost a direct line the distance from the Fair ground to the heart of the city, circling around the Oregonian building and the Post-office and returning by way of St. Vincent's Hospital. The entire trip was made in 35 minutes.

Beechy's flight was successful in every detail. He demonstrated that at all times he had his airship under perfect control, lowering and raising it at will and guiding it in any direction necessary to reach a desired point. The day was ideal, the gentle breeze in no way affecting the steering of his craft.

The ascent commenced from the airship depot at the Fair grounds promptly at 11:05 a. m., and it was just ten minutes later when Beechy sailed over the Oregonian building, and enthusiastic cheers from thousands of people who thronged the roof of the Oregonian and other downtown buildings, and to which the aeronaut responded by waving his cap.

For five minutes the graceful craft hovered over this city, circling gently but surely as a huge bird from one point to another. About 11:22 the Gelatine was headed upward, and after rising to a height of 2000 feet, started westward towards the St. Vincent's Hospital. Here was given a picturesque demonstration of the dirigibility of the craft.

After having attained an altitude of more than 2000 feet Beechy directed his course downward, and still steering directly west towards the hospital, he continued until he was less than 200 feet above the ground, the tower of the hospital in the background rising considerably above the airship. From this point the course veered northward and again the boat soared into the clouds, attaining the highest altitude reached during the trip. As he neared the Exposition grounds Beechy came gently downward. Again cheers of congratulation burst from the crowds who lingered on the housetops, and the airship, a distant speck of gold on the green background of Willamette Heights, gently sank behind the treetops and vanished from sight. The time of the return from the Oregonian tower to the airship station at the Fair grounds going by the indirect route of the St. Vincent's Hospital, was 18 minutes.

In his flight Beechy directed his course by the use of large buildings as a chart, and in every instance he passed directly above these landmarks.

Memorable Reception.

The reception given recently on the opening of the new Free Reading Rooms was a very pleasant affair. A goodly number of our citizens manifested their interest by visiting the rooms and inspecting the improvements. Everything was informal—friends dropping in for a time, looking about and enjoying the well-lighted, pleasant rooms so well fitted for their purpose, chatting awhile and leaving to give place to others.

Many people remained to partake of refreshments with the ladies. Nearly all expressed themselves and being well pleased with the transformation of this, formerly unsightly place, and their belief that in the new location the reading room is likely to be well patronized and prove a great benefit to the community. Several gave in their names and became members of the organization.
