WILL THEY RESIGN?

In some respects the matter may be considered of a delicate nature, but perhaps the "livest" question in Oregon today relates to the course likely to be pursued by those who heretofore represented this state at the meetings of our national congress.

Surely they must know their positions even though friends have shielded them from all contact with those little features and incidents relative to their standing before their fellowmen.

Will they now be equal to the occasion and come forward like the men they were reputed to be and resign? From any sane standpoint they may as well, for to hold on will add not to their glory at home or abroad.

Some of Oregon's representative men state that there is neither use nor sense in sending inexperienced men to Washington.

The Task on Hand.

Philip L. Bates, publisher of the Pacific Northwest and other journals, was in our city during the first of the week in the interest of his business.

The Pacific Northwest is, at present, making strenuous efforts to induce Easterners to come to the coast.

In order to have something to offer those who communicate with him, Mr. Bates must keep thoroughly posted on every section of this country and for this reason Mr. Bates desires to maintain close relations with all real estate dealers and boards of trade and civic improvement societies of the various cities of Oregon.

The work undertaken by this wide-awake publisher is an important one and from the way it has been taken in hand we may expect flattering results.

in connection with some of our leading real estate firms, also with the Citizens' League, for the upbuilding of Corvallis and Benton. Good idea!

Portland Selfish.

It is not to Portland's interest, says the Pendleton East Oregonian, to have Yaquina Bay improved or any other Pacific coast harbor, built up in opposition to Portland, so the people of Tillamook, Coos and other coast counties cannot hope for much from congressmen and senators whose political strings are tied up in Portland.

Maro's Saxophone Quartette.

Without Music Maro's program would be incomplete. All who know about Maro know of his versatility. How he delights his audiences year in and year out with his wonderful magic—his large pictures quickly drawn in nature's colors—his shadow pictures which are bound to make you laugh while you wonder how those hands can do it all—how as a virtuoso on innumerable musical instruments he has played his way into the hearts of all who love the magical influence of harmony.

And now he has added to the musical part of his entertainment a quartette of wonder Saxophones. Three good musicians besides himself as soprano saxophonist produce such entrancing strains from these beautiful instruments that the music seems a part of Maro's Magic—now weird deep, profound then exuberant—now plainly pianissimo, then furiously fortissimo.

PROGRAM OF MARO.

At the Local Opera House, Monday, Nov. 6.

PART I. "It filled me with wonder and amusement." Forty minutes of bewilderment and humorous situations with MARO AS A MAGICIAN.

In a bouquet of mysteries. Nature's laws set aside. In this most astonishing exhibition of digital dexterity Maro stands absolutely without a peer. Including the inexplicable "Skull of Oogliostro." The wonderful "Spirit Cabinet of Balsamo" Maro's twentieth century marvel, "Flags of all Nations."

PART II. MARO AS A MUSICIAN, ARTIST AND SHADOW-GRAPHER.

It is during this part of the program probably, that Maro illustrates most forcibly his wonderful versatility—first by introducing various musical instruments, including

MARO'S GREAT SAXOPHONE QUARTETTE. The monster grand contra bass saxophone, and the GOGGLEPER. Conceded by all to be the most voluminous toned stringed instrument in the world.

AN ART SÉANCE. During which Maro, with a few bold strokes of color, draws and paints large and realistic pictures of the impressionistic school.

SHADOWGRAPHY. The art of making with the hands most amusing and grotesque, silhouettes of animals, face, figures, etc.

PART III. Maro's very latest sensation MAGIC OF THE ORIENT.

During this part of the program Maro will don the costume of the ancient sorcerers or high priests of India, and give a most realistic and wonderful exhibition of magic, as performed by the famed fakirs of India. His entire company will assist by introducing music of the Orient, produced with genuine East Indian musical instruments, making altogether a most weird and fascinating performance.

PART IV. "If this be magic, let it be an art," A Winter Tale, V. III

FORTY MINUTES MORE OF MAGIC. "Merriment born of bewilderment."

SERVICE OF THE WEEK.

Noted Men Address Corvallis Public at M. E. Church.

Services are still in progress nightly at the First Methodist church in connection with the opening of the re-modeled edifice last Sunday morning.

Tonight, the address is by Dr. John Coleman, president of Willamette University, and in honor of the occasion the church will be decorated in colors representing the Corvallis High School, Willamette University and OAC.

The services during the week have been conducted by the following: Monday night, Rev. J. W. McDougall of Albany; Tuesday night, Dr. T. B. Ford, of Portland; Wednesday night, D. F. Burgett Short, Portland, and last night Rev. Harold Ober, Portland.

The sermon by Rev. McDougall was one of the most powerful and practical heard in this city for a long time. His subject was, "Raising the Standard," first, the standard of union among the various church denominations; second, the standard of love, by which all persons are more easily reached than through any other source of appeal; third, the standard of work, each one of God's followers aiming at the best of which he is capable, and not content until the work of the Master is placed on the highest possible plane.

Rev. McDougall called attention to some of the things that sap the strength of a church. One of these evils was secret unbelief among professors of religion; another was the "stumps" that are found in every church—in other words, the "kickers" whose voices are lifted in opposition to all undertakings, and whose influence is a poison that, diffused among the brethren, produces the worst sort of dissatisfaction, friction and discord.

This was Rev. McDougall's first visit to Corvallis, and he will be gladly welcomed whenever he comes again.

Dr. Ford, who spoke Tuesday evening, discussed the subject, "The Law of Human and Divine Co-partnership." He contended that since beasts, birds and fowls are not one whit wiser nor farther advanced now than they were in the beginning, and that since man, and man alone, is never satisfied with results achieved, thus showing a tendency to go on and on forever, it is reasonable to assume that a just God will satisfy this nature by an eternal existence.

Special music Monday night was a vocal solo by R. N. White, accompanied by Frank White, and Tuesday night Mrs. Peterson pleased all with a well-rendered solo, her accompanist being Mrs. E. F. Green.

Perhaps the most general praise of the week's service, was bestowed upon the sermon of Wednesday night. The speaker was Rev. Burgett Short, of Portland, who was a stranger here, this being his first visit to Corvallis. After congratulating the church on its improvement and outlook, and also the city, Rev. Short spoke for over an hour on the vital subject of "Prayer." He held that prayer was as necessary to the Christian man or woman as is air, food and drink for the development of the physical being; he urged upon all the necessity of a secret place of prayer and struck many listeners a direct blow when he declared that few of them did an over-amount of praying anywhere, save possibly in public meetings, which is not really praying at all.

Rev. Short has an original style and is a deep thinker, his sermon being deeply appreciated by a large audience. By his own offer, he may return to Corvallis later, and deliver a lecture, the funds to be given to the M. E. church improvement fund.

A feature of interest at this service was a vocal solo by Dr. Cathey, accompanied by Miss Marie Cathey.

The sermon last night was to be by Rev. Ober, former pastor here, now in Portland.

The formal opening of the church will occur next Sunday morning, at which time Rev. Rader, of Portland, and Dr. Rowland are to be present. The services begin at 10:30, preceded by a love feast.
