THE CAR SHORTAGE.

Managers of great transportation lines are forming extensive plans to build in haste railroads to new territory, before a competing line may have time to occupy the same. New, sparsely settled districts needs roads to provide means for proper development.

The shipper, however, in other localities where railroads have been built, calculates that his surplus when ready for market will be loaded on cars promptly provided for the purpose to carry the same to market while the price is yet good. He places his commodity in a warehouse or along side of a way station and anxiously waits for weeks and sometimes months, after the proper authorities have been requested to supply the needed cars.

He may purchase or raise great quantities of products to send to market and if cars were promptly supplied the margin at that time would leave him a small profit. He waits week after week for the needed freight cars, until the price declines, until he can no longer expect a profit, but it is inevitable that he must suffer a loss. He continues to wait. Workmen must be discharged and occasionally the industry must partially, if not fully, be shut down.

If a consignee receives freight and permits it to remain in the transportation companies' depots or on the wharf longer than a given time, he is charged storage or a penalty until it is removed. This penalty pays the transportation company for the damage or loss they may suffer by reason of the neglect of the customers.

Following along a similar line of thought, when the shipper places his lumber, wheat, cattle, or other product in readiness for shipment and notifies the company to furnish the necessary cars, and if the cars are not furnished after a reasonable time, would it not be proper that the company for its neglect be required to pay a reasonable sum to compensate the customer for each day he is delayed waiting for cars?

Transportation companies may feel that they will carry the freight in the territory they occupy, but they should be required to furnish cars or boats promptly in territory where they operate lines of transportation. If they do not promptly respond, reasonable laws should be passed requiring them to compensate the shipper for unnecessary delays. The terms should be so definitely fixed that a law suit will not be required to obtain results.

WHAT HE THINKS.

She receives the education which she has received. One thing which American woman does not like very well is cooking and washing dishes—though she does not seem to mind much the trouble of keeping the house clean and beautiful. In this respect her sister in Asia is different. Hindu, Persian, and Japanese women regard it a compliment to be able to cook a variety of good meals.

But in one thing she beats all. An American girl can look one square in the face, can walk upright, can run, is well informed, and can face an audience without the slightest nervousness or excitement.

An American woman is good and courteous towards foreigners; the writer, a Hindu, has enjoyed many courtesies at the hand of American women, and but for them, would have hardly known anything about the home life of America.

One day I happened to go to see an acquaintance of mine. I had no business but what could be transacted in ten minutes. When I reached my friend's house it was about supper time. He invited me to supper at his table.

I told him I had no such intention. But in the meantime his mother came out, and a short introduction followed, she asked me to the supper as well, so I went inside the house. It was a small farmer's home. There were young boys and girls, and I was quite a stranger to the place, yet such was the conduct and good will of everyone that I felt at home and enjoyed their society full well. But there was one thought in my mind all the time, nor has it left me now. What was it? Let the Hindu audience guess it awhile. I felt the force of this natural, unassumed courtesy. I felt there was something in it which I cannot return in India under similar circumstances. What is it? Have you guessed?

Is it that I could not have invited the same acquaintance to supper in India? Yes—I could. Spontaneous hospitality in India is our custom—what then could I not return? Have you guessed it? If not, I will tell you. Could I have invited my friend to the same table with my sister, wife and mother, and could they give the same attention and personal regard to make the stranger happy and cheerful as this American family did? This was the question. And I wish you all, my Hindu friends, to reply to this in your own mind. But this is digression.

I was going to say that the freedom given to the American woman has been a success. It has contributed to the general healthfulness of the people; it has improved the size, the beauty, and mental and moral calibre of both men and women. The presence of women in public, far from corrupting and lowering the morals of men and causing disorder, as some people in India think, has been a direct influence in keeping the public morals decent, the language refined and their meanness suppressed.

American woman by itself is a fit subject of study for the Hindus, and we should never let an opportunity go, whenever we can observe and make notes. Nothing is more convincing than silent observation, and I believe it will be to the best interest of the human race if the Hindu boys will take more interest in all that pertains to the welfare of women; and on the other hand, it ought to be a consideration with American women to give every opportunity to the Hindu lads, to see what American woman is capable of doing, and what freedom to other women is likely to do for India.

Cultured, self-respecting, independent and graceful, beautiful, shining as American woman is, no wonder then that America is going forward with a resistless progress, and no wonder that her children are so intelligent. It is her voice which, when mingled with the voice of men, makes the air ring with the melodious and awe-inspiring music of the National anthem; it is she who answers for the safety of the "land of the free and the home of the brave," and she that inspires men to glorious deeds and noble advancement.

The Hindu needs woman's partnership as his American brother does, and national freedom is no small corollary of woman's freedom.

"A ROYAL SLAVE."

At the Opera House Next Saturday Night.

Gordon Bennett's beautiful romantic drama of the Southland, "A Royal Slave" will be the attraction at the opera house next Saturday night. On account of the great popularity of this production, it has become necessary to make the Corvallis date the 17th instead of the 15th as first announced. The company has just completed a week's engagement in Portland, where they were spoken of as an unusually strong attraction.

Mexican history is replete with romantic stories, but in the days of Maximilian, a half century ago, romance rose to its highest plane. Those were days when knighthood was in flower fully as much as in Europe centuries ago. Clarence Bennett has made one of Nature's noblemen, a descendant of kings as well, the leading character in "A Royal Slave," one of the strongest and best dramatic productions of the day. The fact that it is under the management of Gordon & Bennett, the producers of "The Holy City," should be a sufficient guarantee of its class and merit. Reserve seat sale opens Wednesday morning. It will be to learn that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever organ, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung disease (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Barlow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hale, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley, of Chicago; Prof. Bennett, of Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Felt, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that has any such professional endorsement, worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its form is the best possible guaranty of its merit. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming drugs and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful agent in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native medicinal roots and is safe and reliable. A booklet of extracts from eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients mailed free on request. Address Dr. E. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Always Was Sick.

When a man says he always was sick—troubled with a cough that lasted all winter—what would you think if he should say—he never was sick since using Ballard's Horehound Syrup. Such a man exists: Mr. J. C. Clark of Denver, Colorado, writes: "For some years I was troubled with a severe cough that would last all winter. This cough left me in a miserable condition. I tried Ballard's Horehound Syrup and have not had a sick day since. That's what it did for me." Sold by Graham & Wortham.
