PEACE-MAKING DIFFICULT.

Look where one may it will be found that there is strife everlasting between capital and labor. Corporations seem to aim at nothing short of crushing labor. Competition has become so close in many instances between manufacturing companies that about the only way open by which these concerns can hope to carry on their business successfully is at the expense of the class that "earn their bread by the sweat of their brow." As "self-preservation is the first law of nature," the capitalist, sooner than go under in the struggle, resorts to whatever means he can to save himself and invariably sacrifices those who are dependent upon him. As man is the fiercest of all animals, the "king of beasts" if you will, nothing less than this should be expected by those who know man best.

Let us now consider the "under dog," the laborer. We find him combining against capital, just as he has a right to do in order to protect himself, as capital is organized against him. There is no difference in the course of capital and labor so far as self-protection and the means employed are concerned. But there is something of a difference in the judgment and discretion of those managing the affairs of the battling organizations, and capital rarely resorts to violence, to brute force, and in this is superior to labor, at least in example if not at heart.

For years labor has claimed that the government paid little or no heed to its cry. President Roosevelt has placed himself on record as a champion of honest men, be they capitalists or laborers, and both classes seem against him in some instances. He has bespoken a "square deal" for all men. Yet we have abundant evidence that corporate power is against him, and we have only to consider the Western Federation of Miners to see how bitterly he is assailed by that organization of labor.

Can it be that neither the capitalist nor working man wants a "square deal?" That justice is not what either party wants seems, in fact, the truth. The conviction grows that capital and labor both want the best of the bargain, else why are they fighting the president in his promise of justice to all? In the struggle for existence it appears that the principles of honesty, of truth, and the teachings of the Golden Rule are lost sight of entirely. No longer is there any compassion felt for the unfortunate, and sympathy is an unheard-of proposition. Capital and labor never lay down arms and abide in peace and harmony except for mutual gain, and even then each is suspicious of the other.

The part of a peace-maker in dealing with these warring factions is most thankless and equally discouraging. Were Jesus Christ on earth today his patience would be sorely taxed were he to act as a go-between for capital and labor, and the miracles he is credited with accomplishing while on earth would sink into insignificance in comparison with that of harmonizing the differences of capital and labor. In this case peace-making is difficult.

Misses Florence Adams and Alice Jones left Sunday for Salem to attend the teachers' institute.

Miss Teresa McDonald of Philomath arrived yesterday for a visit with friends and relatives, and will spend the Fourth in this city.

Miss Edith Alderson came over from Albany, Saturday, and visited friends until yesterday. Her home is now in Portland.

J. R. Gion and family leave today or tomorrow for Portland, to reside. They have been in Corvallis for some time, sending their children to school. They are people of means, and are a very worthy family.

Dr. E. A. Campbell and wife of Chicago are guests of the latter's brother, Dr. J. A. Harper, in this city. Sunday, in honor of the visitors, a picnic party was formed and a pleasant day spent on Dixon Creek. Those who went were the Jacobs, Allen, Andrews and Harper families, and Miss Mary Nolan.

Preparations are well under way for the big social to be given on the courthouse lawn by the ladies of the Congregational church next Thursday afternoon and evening, July 4th. Ice cream and cake and delicacies will be served. Everybody welcomed.

While out driving Sunday afternoon, Dr. Pernot and family met with an accident that gave them a great fright and might have proved fatal to one or all. Near the Holzgate residence a large covered auto flashed by, frightening the Pernot horse, which "bolted." Near the school house grounds the rig collided with a telephone pole with great violence pitching Dr. Pernot and little Dorothy head foremost over the dash board and precipitating Mrs. Pernot over the wheel into the road. Wonderful to relate, no injuries were received by any of the parties, save slight bruises and a shaking up. The bus shafts were broken and the top was smashed by the force of the collision with the pole.

Putting Up Butter For Market.

There is no neater way of putting up butter than in one pound squares and wrapped in parchment paper, says a writer in Hoard's Dairyman. We should stamp nothing upon the butter, but make the brick perfectly plain. On the wrapper it is appropriate to print the brand of the butter, name of the farm and the owner. If the butter is to be sold in the open market, it would be well to stamp the brand upon the brick as a protection against counterfeiting by unscrupulous dealers.

Manipulating the Udder.

A moderate amount of manipulation of the udder while the last gill of milk is drawn will be found well worth the time it requires. For the first few times it may seem awkward to the milker who has never tried it, but after a few trials a person will be convinced that by working the milk out of the quarter with one hand and emptying the teat with the other the udder will be emptied much sooner than where the last milk is drawn by stripping without manipulation.

THE VETERINARY.

Carbolic acid is a very effective destroyer of lice. Make an emulsion by dissolving one pound of hard soap in a gallon of rainwater, and to this add one gallon of kerosene and a pint of crude carbolic acid. Mix well by a thorough churning and add enough water to make twelve gallons. Apply with an old broom or spray pump.

Treatment For Dry Murrain.

Dry murrain is a form of indigestion and is attributable to several causes, such as dry feeding, dry grass in summer, overdriving, redwater, etc. We find this to occur often twice a year, in spring and fall. The following is recommended: One pound epsom salts, one-half pound common salt, one ounce ginger, one ounce jalap, one pound molasses. In case of redwater the following is a good remedy: Give one dram of carbolic acid and one quart of linseed oil.

Linseed For Hair Balls.

Hair balls are caused by the cow licking herself or other cattle. The hairs which are swallowed are carried around in the folds of the stomach till they collect in a ball sufficiently large to cause indigestion. This trouble is more pronounced about the time the cows calve, and many times it is mistaken for milk fever. Liberal doses of linseed oil rarely fail to correct the disorder.

How to Treat Mange.

In treating mange, preparations containing mercury or arsenic should not be used. These are liable to poison the animal by absorption in the skin, or quantities of the poison are liable to be taken into the animal's mouth when it licks itself. The very best remedy, as well as the safest, is the so called lime and sulphur dip. A solution of eight pounds of lime and twenty-four pounds of sulphur in 100 gallons of water has proved to have no equal. It may be applied with an old broom or enough of it made to be used as a dip.

Bloating Cured by Exercise.

In cases of bloating, if not extreme, exercise will be sufficient. Drive the cow a mile or two, and the exercise will correct the trouble. If this fails to afford relief, pour a half pint of raw linseed oil down the animal's throat. It may be necessary to repeat the dose every three hours till four or five doses are given, but this simple remedy rarely fails to bring relief.

THEY PRINTED IT.

In '62—Iowa Regiment issued Paper in old Missouri.

R. W. Stowe, a brother-in-law of John Meeker, a well known Benton county resident, has in his possession a copy of "The Bayonet," a newspaper published in the stormy days of 1862, at California, Missouri.

It seems that the 11th Regiment, Iowa Volunteers, invaded the Missouri town and took possession. Among other things they appropriated the printing office, and as there were printers in the ranks, the 11th regiment issued this number of "The Bayonet." Under the heading appears a second line which reads: "The Iowa boys know how to use it."

The paper is yellow with age but is well printed and perfectly legible. Among the jokes contained in its columns is the following: "Some bachelors go to war because they like fighting; some married men go because they like peace." And in another column; "An exchange says: 'Truth is crowded out of this issue.' This is almost as bad as the up-country editor who wrote, 'For the evil effects of intoxicating drink, see our inside.'"

Probably the most interesting feature of the paper, however, is a little "salutatory" on the editorial page, written by the Iowa boys when they took possession of "The Bayonet" office. This "salutatory" says:

"Friends and Patrons: In assuming the junior editorship of the 'Bayonet' it is not without feeling a due appreciation of the magnitude of the undertaking. Our experience in the Sanctum is limited, consequently we do not much expect to exceed public expectation. 'The Bayonet' will adhere strictly to the policy governing the administration and its columns will ever be open to the advancement of the cause for which we fight; and if from inability we fail to perform our work to the satisfaction of all interested, we will proclaim our independence by quoting the following beautiful and impressive line: 'We do not belong to our patrons, Our paper is wholly our own, Whoever likes it can take it, Who don't may just let it alone.'"

tion and its columns will ever be open to the advancement of the cause for which we fight; and if from inability we fail to perform our work to the satisfaction of all interested, we will proclaim our independence by quoting the following beautiful and impressive line: "We do not belong to our patrons, Our paper is wholly our own, Whoever likes it can take it, Who don't may just let it alone."

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchitis, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe obstinate, hang-on chronic coughs, bronchitis and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine: "In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach), it is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity." "Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores, or ulcers. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.
