KILLED BY ELECTRICITY.

Death Came While Dorsey Worked.—Sad Accident in Corvallis.

A tragic death marked the early hours of Wednesday morning in Corvallis, when Joe Dorsey of Albany, a member of the "long distance gang" of the Independent telephone company, now at work in this city, was killed by a live wire.

Dorsey was at work on a pole just back of the Charles Everett house on north Third street, and at 8:15 he came in contact with an electric light wire, receiving 2300 volts of electricity. The body fell back, the pipe dropped from the lips, and fellow workmen with a quick movement cut the current, thus preventing further disaster.

Within two minutes after the accident the limp body was being tenderly lowered, and Dr. Cathey and George Cathey were on the ground to begin a battle to save the life of the unconscious man. For two and a half hours all that mortal could do to bring back the precious life spark was done, not a second being lost, but the deadly "juice" had done its work and all efforts were unavailing.

A large crowd quickly gathered and a rope had to be stretched to keep back the curious, sympathetic throng. The wife and several other relatives were summoned from Albany and reached Corvallis before the case was given up as "hopeless."

At 11 o'clock, however, just after their arrival, the covers of the improvised bed which had been spread in the street, were drawn over the quiet face, and all was over.

Joe Dorsey was a native of Michigan and was about 30 years of age. He had resided in Albany about seven years and had been in the employ of the telephone company for a number of years. It was stated on the streets that he had been married only two weeks, but this report was not verified. The remains were placed in a receiving casket and driven at once to Albany in the hearse, the relatives returning by train. The young wife was prostrated by the shock, and all the relatives have the sympathy of this community in their sorrow.

Onto His Job.

We may be put down as a nature fakir, but we have taken particular notice that in stretching our legs and resting in a cosy corner on the porch while our wife trimmed the lawn with the mower and turned the sprinkler loose, it is always a signal for the robins to call and hop about on the mown grass in vicinity of the sprinkler where in a listening attitude they wait for the thrifty angle worm to wiggle up for a drink and then with a quick movement yank Mr. Worm from mother earth and fly away to a cosy nest in some secluded spot to feed the little ones. The Oregon robin is onto his job.—Ex.

Has Made Good Record.

One of Benton county's energetic road supervisors has sent in a report to the county court that contains several interesting items for the public. He is D. B. Farley, of Southern Benton, and his report says:

"I will make a partial statement of my road work up to the present time. I have let most of my work by contract and am well pleased with the terms I have made and with the hands I have placed my work in. I have got 700 yards of gravel at 29 1/2; 350 yards at 26; 700 at 25; 100 at 30; 450 yards at 27 1/2. In all I will put out about 3000 yards this season. I have some yet to let. There is out now about 1,300 yards.

"I have drawn one warrant to Richard Bradham for $78 and one to Harry Cartwright for $100 on special fund No. 15. There was $611, or about, to the credit of my district before I drew on it.

"I had one man last Monday alone to load and haul 21 yards of gravel a distance of about 100 rods in 10 hours, which I think is the best day's work for one man in the country. On the following Saturday, two men with two teams put out 39 yards. If anyone can raise that, I want to hear from them."

SHE IS FOUND.

Woman Who Disappeared From Hubbard—The Story.

Last winter the Gazette published a story concerning the strange disappearance from Hubbard Oregon, of a woman named Freyman. Relatives of the missing lady wrote to the chief of police of this city and to the editor of this paper, asking for information of their relative, and Chief Lane made diligent inquiry in Corvallis to ascertain whether or not such a person had been seen hereabouts.

The letters of inquiry gave detailed information of the strange disappearance of the woman, and enclosed a photograph, but no such person had been seen or heard of in Corvallis. Later, an item in a Portland paper related that the husband was still scouring the country for a clue to the lost woman, but his efforts had been of no avail. But the mystery has at last been solved, and a Woodburn dispatch Tuesday gives the sad story as follows:

"The body of Mrs. Mark Freyman, who had been missing since early in the morning of January first, was found yesterday morning between 9 and 10 o'clock by an old man who was fishing in Fiddle river and ran across the badly decomposed remains in driftwood between the two wagon bridges crossing the stream east of Woodburn.

"Very little was left of the body save the skeleton. The husband identified the remains by the false teeth and the clothing, which was the same that she had when last seen. She had evidently jumped from the railroad bridge into the river and her body had drifted down to the point where it was found.

"Mr. Freyman on December 31 took his wife to the home of her sister, Mrs. Albert Jordan, of Hubbard, because she expressed a wish to go there and also on account of her making a threat the night before to commit suicide stating that her heart was with another man. At her request he did not remain there that night. Early the next morning she slipped away from the house and no tidings were ever obtained of her until the body was found, six months afterward.

DR. KERR.

What They Say of Him in Utah—
A Splendid Record.

An eloquent testimonial to Dr. Kerr, OAC's president, appears editorially in "The Rocky Mountain Farming," a paper published by the Utah Agricultural College and edited by men who have been associated with Dr. Kerr in educational work. The paper says:

"President Kerr of the Utah Agricultural College has accepted the presidency of the Oregon Agricultural College which was tendered him unanimously by the Board of Regents of that institution. He will assume charge of the Oregon institution on July 1.

The success of the Utah College, under the administration of President Kerr, extending over seven years together with strong endorsements of leading citizens of this state and of prominent educators of other states no doubt appealed strongly to the Oregon board and decided the election in his favor. The Oregon Agricultural College is located at Corvallis in the famous Willamette valley, in western Oregon, some ninety miles south of Portland. The college is conducted on a broad basis. It has between eight and nine hundred students in the different courses offered, including Agriculture, Domestic Science, Civil, Mechanical, Electrical and Mining Engineering, Forestry, Commerce and Pharmacy. A fine farm of 224 acres belongs to the institution and is used for experimental purposes. The last legislature provided a fund of some $200,000 for buildings. With the assurance that comes from Oregon of united support for President Kerr in his labors there can be no doubt that the Oregon Agricultural College has a bright future before it.

In leaving the native state it must be a source of gratification to President Kerr as well as to every friend of the institution that the Agricultural College of Utah stands on a higher plane than at any other period of its history. It has been growing in influence year by year. Students have been coming in yearly increasing numbers. The number of students studying agriculture is over seven hundred per cent greater now than then; domestic science shows a splendid increase. Farm buildings, not including those used for instruction purposes, have been added to and their value is now four times that at the beginning of his term of office. According to a report of the United States Department of Agriculture, the college ranks among the first in number of agricultural students on a basis of farm population, the Utah College, having one agricultural student to every 836, while the average of all the others is one student to 3,700 of farm population. Through the liberal support given the institution by successive legislatures, and at a time when appropriations meant more of sacrifice to the people than they do today, the institution in buildings and equipment for experimentation, as well as in organization, ranks among the best in the country. President Kerr, in a recent address at college chapel, expressed his high appreciation of the loyal support he had received from the people of the state in his work, and hoped that support might be continued to the institution in the future.

"Stainless Flag" Service.

There will be a Union meeting of all the churches of the city held on the Court house lawn next Sunday evening. It is to be a "Stainless Flag" service originated by Dr. Chapman editor of the "Searchlight" in Los Angeles, California. The meeting will be under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Mr. Zimmerman, an Anti-Saloon League worker from Portland will be the principal speaker. Short talks by local pastors.

Special music in charge of Mrs. McCausland. Rev. Gibbs of the South Methodist church will preside.

Every body cordially invited.

We Will Celebrate.

If this issue of the Gazette is a little "shy" on news, if the articles that do appear have a dreamy absent-minded ring, and the market report, the editorials and the "personals" are perhaps jumbled somewhat, our readers are urgently requested to be charitable.

We are going to celebrate—an unusual thing with newspaper "forces". For that reason we are pressing a day in advance of our usual time, and the thoughts of peanuts, red lemonade, and popcorn wrapped in yellow paper, mingle persistently with the writer's "literary" ideas. We fear this issue will not be up to the usual standard, but who will criticize on such an occasion?

Newspaper "forces" are human. Not often, however, do they get credit for that distinction. Usually the newspaper is taken as an entirely impersonal affair but we assure our readers that back of it are brains and bodies that weary with the never-ending grind of getting out "stuff"; that every line of its news is spelled out word by word and letter by letter, by fingers that are tired and aching from the steady "picking" of type.

Give it a moment's thought, this issue, friends, and if we are a little short on news for once just remember that we are possessed of the same desire for pleasure as yourself and that for once we are out in full force and are celebrating.

Had Arm Broken.

A runaway that resulted disastrously occurred in the western part of town Monday evening. A team belonging to J. J. Mullet, attached to a woodrack, was driven by the owner and his son up to the stable, and before the occupants of the rig could alight, the horse become frightened and ran. They first struck an 8x8 post, which was knocked down, and rushing on, the animals collided with a corner of Mrs. Purdy's house, tearing off a corner board; they next smashed through a couple of panels of fence and mixed up with a barbed wire, running across a lot with one end of the wire attached to their rig and the other end to the fence, thus tearing off potato tops and doing all sorts of damage to the garden.

The next stunt was colliding with two posts at the Wills place, where they finally become entangled and one horse got a leg in a post hole. This ended the mad race, but the results were serious.

Mr. Mullet was thrown from the rig and had an arm broken, while the horses were badly cut on the barbed wire. Mr. Mullet's son jumped from the rig and escaped uninjured.

The Smile

That won't come off appears on baby's face after one bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge, the great worm medicine. Why not keep that smile on baby's face? If you keep this medicine on hand, you will never see anything else but smiles on his face. Mrs. S., Blackwell, Okla., writes:
"My baby was peevish and fretful, would not eat and I feared he would die. I used a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge and he has not had a sick day since." Sold by Graham & Wortham.
