MARKET GARDENS.

Lettuce and Other Products as Grown on a Large Scale.

A feature of the recent annual meeting of the Massachusetts state board of agriculture was a visit to the market gardens of Warren W. Rawson in Arlington. The magnitude of the scale on which this work is being conducted is a revelation to one coming from the west. The plant covers some forty acres of ground. The greenhouses cover about eight acres. Some of them inclose half an acre and some are smaller.

At the present time lettuce is being grown in these greenhouses to a greater extent than any other garden plant. It is certainly a novel and pleasing sight to walk into a greenhouse covering half an acre on a cold day in December in which are growing in the most perfect form some 36,000 plants of lettuce, approaching that stage which fits them for being marketed. The vigorous and healthy appearance of the plants formed a picture that was particularly pleasing. The most perfect order is observed in planting them, so that when fully grown the ground is completely occupied. The plants are kept entirely free from the growth of weeds of any kind. Some three crops of lettuce are grown in some of these greenhouses in one year, and also a crop of cucumbers in addition. In other houses such products as parsley were being grown. The visitors were also shown immense beds in which celery was stored away for winter use. These beds were covered with a protecting roof, which was elevated two or three feet above the lettuce, and over these was a light covering of waste litter.

The productive power of land thus utilized is very great. Just imagine 36,000 plants growing on half an acre of land! When these plants are sold they fetch 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen, according to the condition of the market. Of course the expense of growing and marketing them must be very considerable, but there can be no question about the marked profit that must come from growing these products on a scale so large, writes Professor Shaw in New England Homestead.

CURL LEAF.

Spraying For Control of This Disease of the Peach.

A very important complication must be considered in spraying for blight control. This is the occurrence of another peach disease, the curl leaf. The effects of this trouble are too well known in California to need description. The control of the disease is very successfully accomplished by spraying in February or March, just before the buds unfold, but a time which is too late for blight prevention. Treatments Given.

In the experience of 1905 the one fall spraying controlled both diseases—a most satisfactory condition. In the spring of 1907, however, a very virulent attack of curl leaf occurred, especially in the lower Sacramento valley, while the blight fungus proved somewhat less active than in the previous season.

The result of this attack is plainly shown by the results of spraying—viz. that the November or December application did not entirely hold the curl leaf in check, although as successful as before with the blight. Consequently some orchards sprayed properly and successfully for blight were badly injured by curl leaf, while others sprayed later were protected from curl leaf.

All that had been expected of the blight treatment held good when its effects were differentiated from those of the other disease, but the necessity of two sprayings rather than one for the positive control of both diseases has become evident.

Prune if possible before spraying, but do not delay the work on account of pruning.

It is recommended by the California experiment station to spray again for the prevention of curl leaf about Feb. 15, or just before the buds open, with bordeaux, 20-20-200, or lime, salt and sulphur.

The Albemarle Pippin. The apple which has made Virginia famous at home and abroad is the Yellow Newtown, otherwise known as the Albemarle Pippin.

Whether pomologists accept the name Albemarle Pippin or persist in calling this apple the Yellow Newtown makes little difference, for it will always be known by Virginians and in the trade by the name of Albemarle Pippin. The high state of perfection attained by this apple fully merits this distinction and the almost fabulous prices often received for it. It is not usual for our growers to sell their fruit for $10 per barrel, and sometimes it brings as much as $12, $15 and even $20 per barrel, and two to three times as much as the average red apple.—Professor J. S. Phillips.

As a Dairy State. California has a soil and climate so varied that all fruits, both deciduous and citrus, can be grown to perfection. All kinds of cereals are grown with success. California has also great possibilities as a dairy state.

TO CUT UP DIDOS.

Some Speculation as to the Origin of the Phrase.

The phrase "kick up didos"—for the plural is formed either with or without the "e"—is allowable. It occurs, for example, in Quiller Couch's "Delectable Duchy," but the more common form is "to cut" or "to cut up didos." The word is a dictionary one. Dr. Murray says that it is "United States slang." He defines it as a prank, a caper, a disturbance, a row, a shindy. He quotes, as the earliest use in English literature, this sentence from "Sam Slick In England" (1843-4): "Then Italian singers recitin' their jabber and cuttin' didoes at a private concert." He says that the origin of the word is uncertain.

But Haliburton used the term in "The Clockmaker" in 1835, and Professor Joseph Wright in his "English Dialect Dictionary" says that the term is known in Ireland, Kent, Isle of Wight, Cornwall and also in the United States. Haliburton used it with reference to a Nova Scotian: "I met a man this mornin' from Halifax, a real conceited lookin' critter, all shimes and didoes." Professor Wright gives as the first definition a disturbance, noise, fuss, as in the speech heard on the Isle of Wight, "He kicked up a middlen dido about it;" then plural—tricks, antics, eccentric feats—as in Kent, "Dreeckley ye be backturned, there he be, a-cutting all manner o' didos," and, lastly, a plaything; also used as a term to denote articles which do not give satisfaction to the owner, as trimming on a dress or bonnet.

Yet the learned Professor Wright does not venture to explain the derivation of the word; he does not suggest a possible derivation. Did the term come from the fuss made by Queen Dido after the pious Aenas left her? An obsolete word "dido"—a thrice told tale may have been originally "a tale of Dido." Tait in his "Quaternions" speaks of a Didonian curve, with reference to the story of Dido, who bargained for as much land as could be covered with a hide and then cut the hide into a long and narrow strip. Why not say glibly that "to cut up didos" is to cut up as Dido did? Let us honor the name of that noble dame in every way.—Boston Transcript.

One Kind of Economy.

"Some people have queer ideas of economy, don't they?" said a Wall street man. "The other day I was waiting with a man on an 'L' station to go downtown. He saw a friend on the opposite platform and called over to him to come across and go down with him to his office on a matter of business. The man said he would, and after asking the ticket chopper to pass the word over that his fare was paid he handed over a cigar to the chopper and came over to our side. He was greeted with a laugh by the man who had called to him and naturally asked what it was for. 'Didn't you give that ticket chopper a fifteen cent cigar?' asked the friend. The man admitted that he gave the kind he usually smoked. 'Well,' said the other, 'why didn't you just come across without saying anything about it, pay your fare and save a dime?' The man rubbed his chin and looked serious. He had become so accustomed to tipping everybody for any sort of favor that he never thought of the other plan."—New York Press.

On the Map.

Two women chanced to meet on a street car in Chicago. "Why, how do you do, Mrs. Thompson?" exclaimed one of them. "I called at your house one day last week, and there was nobody at home." "We've moved, Mrs. Giles," said the other. "Didn't you know that?" "No. When did you move?" "About two weeks ago. We got tired of living in all the noise and bustle, and we went away out in the suburbs." "What direction?" "Northwest." "And where are you located now?" "It's a new neighborhood, Mrs. Giles, and I can't describe it exactly, but if I had a map of the city here I could show you. We live just about half an inch outside of the city limits."—Exchange.

SHORT COURSES AT THE OAC

Fifteen Counties Represented in the Work—Splendid Addresses Given.

The winter short courses at the Oregon Agricultural College have been very successful. Over one hundred students were registered in the different courses, as follows: General Agriculture 31, Dairying 27, Horticulture 12, Mechanics 10, Household Economy 27, Total 107.

Some fifteen counties in the state are represented in the attendance. Several came from Washington State, one each from British Columbia, Kansas and New Jersey. Each afternoon four lectures were given by different members of the agricultural staff. In addition, prominent men of the State, engaged in different lines of agriculture, addressed those in attendance on the general agricultural course.

The subjects of animal husbandry, field crops, bacteriology, botany, plant diseases, chemistry, county roads, poultry keeping, were treated by members of the faculty.

During the forenoons the students did practical work in the shops, in the dairy and in the orchard, and the women had lectures and demonstration work in cooking and sewing in Waldo Hall.

It is planned to make these courses of increasing usefulness to the people of the state.

Anecdote of General Howard.

We recall but one piece of witicism by General O. O. Howard. It was related by Gen. Fulwood and occurred before Atlanta during Sherman's siege of that city.

One evening Howard proposed to Fulwood, his chief of staff, that they take a stroll through the camps of the "contrabands" located in the rear of our lines. Joined by several young men of the staff they set out and presently came upon a large tent in which the negroes were holding religious services under the leadership of a negro preacher.

Howard and his companions entered the tent. In due time the preacher proceeded to close the meeting with prayer. He prayed for the divine blessing on "massa Lincum an his sojers." Then he fervently prayed that "the good Lord would bless massa general Howard, an in good time take him to hebbin whar one ob him aims an already gon befoah."

During this invocation Howard looked grave, while the young officers scarcely restrained their mirth until they passed out when they joined in laughter. Howard gently chided them and quietly said: "I find increased incentive to my living in that poor creature's prayer." "How is that, General?" asked Fulwood. "If one of my arms has already gone to heaven it would be most unfortuna if the rest of my body should not join it," was Howard's reply. CONTRIBUTED.

The New Armory.

There is a movement on foot for the building of a new armory for OAC. The building is to be designed and constructed by the cadets of the military department.

Capt. McAlexander presented the proposition to the cadets at one of the drill periods this week and much enthusiasm was displayed by all. 2500 days work was promised by the students and the building will be certain providing the Board of Regents of the college will vote the proper amount required to furnish materials.

The building is to be constructed of reinforced concrete with a steel frame, and will be practically fire-proof. It is to be 100 feet in width and 300 feet in length.

The main room will probably have a concrete floor and will be the drill room. Each company will have an office and store room and there will also be offices for the regimental headquarters. The building will also have a large assembly room which will be used for lectures, entertainments and dances.

It is hoped by all that this proposition will be successful, as such a building is greatly needed by the OAC.

With the cadet regiment behind this movement and with the aid of the Board of Regents, no doubt this building will be constructed.—Saturday's OAC Barometer.

An Old Corvallis Man.

A friend of Harry Holgate has handed in the following item, which we are pleased to give space:

Harry L. Holgate returned to his home in Klamath county, Thursday, after a week's visit among Corvallis relatives and friends. Since leaving the Government service three or four years ago, he has taken an active part in the development of that progressive, prosperous section of Oregon known as the Klamath country. He is now conducting a bank at Bonanza, a rapidly developing town about 25 miles from Klamath Falls.

Harry is one of the tactful, brainy young men of the state and we are glad to learn that he is doing well. A recent dispatch to the Oregonian states that he will be a candidate for joint senator from Klamath, Crook and Lake counties. He is popular and a hustler and should make a good showing in the coming primaries. His familiarity with the needs of Oregon coupled with his unusual experience in the preparation of laws and the handling of legislation make him an exceptionally well qualified person for the place. Besides this he has a statewide acquaintance among men of standing and influence which would be of invaluable aid to him in securing legislative action.

As he is an old Corvallis boy and a graduate of the OAC, his many friends here will anxiously watch his campaign for the nomination and earnestly hope for his success.
