ELEPHANT TRAVEL.

An Uncomfortable and Perilous Trip In a Howdah.

There were two elephants at our disposal, and myself and the interpreter rode the first, each occupying half of the howdah. The howdah has a peculiar and objec-tionable habit of nearly succeeding in cutting your legs in two. If you hang your legs outside you may pad the edge as much as you like, but if you are new to the game you will wake in about half an hour from an uneasy doze with the painful conviction that the lower halves of your legs have dropped off.

On squirming up into a position from which you can view the outside world you will see they are still dangling there, but with an irresponsibility which suggests that they have been frayed through to the last shred. Abnormal efforts alsurgeon. Office at Demmick's Red low you to drag them safely inside, Front stable. Ind. Phone 328. 18#f and you think it will be better in future to keep them there.

The elephant is almost as fine a vehicle to see the surrounding country from as a London bus, and there is a considerable element of excitement in his progression. The elephant I rode had a fatal habit when it came to a river bank or bit of rough ground of looking around and picking out what seemed the worst

An east side resident tells of the following conversation heard at a breakfast table between a mother and a small child. The mother in question was reprimanding her daughter for speaking unkindly of her father.

"You never hear me speak in such a disrespectful manner of your father," she contended.

A special correspondence from Eugene gives some interesting facts in regard to U. of O. It

The annual report of the President of the University of Oregon for 1907, with the reports of the Steward and Registrar, have just been issued. The President's report shows that the University has made a gain of 23 in enrollment this year over that of last. The funds have fallen short $15,ooo of meeting the current expenses of the year, and to avoid a deficiency the faculty served three months without pay. The work of the Summer School and the Correspondence School is discussed, and a recommendation is made for a bureau of research in Economics, Politics, and Sociology. An outline of the plans of the School of Education for training high school teachers and principals-is given, and attention is called to the gift to the University of a building and land by which Coos Bay offers exceptional advantages.
