REPUBLICAN QUARRELS.

We would be pleased to have every Republican in Benton county read the following extracts from the National Tribune as its notes of warning are certainly applicable to Oregon and should induce every Republican to wake up and go to work:

Are the Republicans going to settle up their quarrels? The well-wishers of the party are beginning to ask that question with all seriousness. For while Nominee Taft is the apostle of peace and has been doing much to place the olive branch in the hands of all concerned the month of August is slipping away, and inter-party fights are quite as acute as acute as ever.

Republican quarrels are not allowed to distract well-informed men, as a rule. Fiercely as the party wrangles before the Conventions its factions are accustomed to close the ranks after Conventions. August is usually the great month for the Republican peacemaker. The quarrels this year have been of an aggravated character, and the month of September, when the Presidential campaign begins, finds the party fighting inside its own lines. The old and practiced peacemakers seem to have retired this year. New men are at the helm, and they are not as skillful as some of the oldsters were.

National Chairman Hitchcock is giving some attention to the adjustment of these factional fights, but in spite of him and of Taft the fighters keep on fighting. Every effort to patch up a peace seems to be followed by a new outburst of trouble. The olive branch work, however, seems to be of the utmost importance at this stage, of even more importance than the organization for the National campaign. For, although voters are very intelligent in splitting tickets, the fact remains that with local quarrels the National ticket is bound to suffer.

President Roosevelt's hand is seen more and more in the management of campaign affairs. Apparently nothing of importance is done without consulting him. Every little while the newspaper dispatches tell how this appointment to campaign work was made at the suggestion of President Roosevelt. The travelers up to Oyster Bay are not quite as numerous as the travelers to Hot Springs, but very many of them are on campaign errands. National Chairman Hitchcock goes there every little while to report, and he is executing many of the President's directions in the management of the campaign.

One good feature for Republicans in the West is the fact that the primaries are out of the way. Kansas has just held a primary and nominated Joseph L. Bristow, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, for Senator. He ran as a radical. The radical candidate for Governor was also nominated. Both of these nominations will help the Republican ticket and strengthen Taft's cause in the State. Whether as much can be said in Illinois is uncertain. However, once the primaries are out of the way Republicans are more apt to get together for the campaign.

Soon the effort will be to arouse some interest among the Republicans in their National ticket. There is great lethargy. True this is August, and the election is 11 weeks away. Lethargy has become a growing feature of campaigns in recent years, and sometimes is not as dangerous as it might seem. None the less, the fact is that the ticket of Taft and Sherman has not aroused much enthusiasm. The applause has been perfunctory from the country at large. There has not been sufficient disposition to take off one's coat and get into the work of winning voters. Interest in the personal differences of the leaders has been more pronounced.

For these reasons many good friends of the Republican Party want to see a change in the spirit of the campaign. They argue that it is time for the columns to be moving forward. Taft chances for election, of course are good, but the idea is becoming prevalent that it is possible to lose the Presidency if they do not watch out.

ISSUE OF CAMPAIGN.

The overshadowing issue of the campaign really is: Shall the administration of President Roosevelt be approved? Shall a party of demonstrated capacity in administrative affairs be continued in power; shall the reins of government be placed in experienced hands, or do the people prefer to trust their destinies to an aggregation of experimental malcontents and theorists whose only claim to history is a party name they pilfered?

With a record of four decades of wise legislation; two-score years of faithful administration; offering its fulfilled pledges as a guaranty of its promises for the future, the Republican party appeals to the people and, with full confidence in their wisdom and patriotism, awaits the rendition of the November verdict.—Sherman's speech of acceptance.

The Republicans of Missouri feel that with Taft and Hadley as leaders they are in fine shape for contesting the state in the present campaign. Missouri is one of the states that will be vigorously fought for. Nationally, its electoral vote of eighteen and congressional delegation of sixteen may not be necessary to the choice of the next administration, and to a Republican majority in the next House, but it can never be prudent to let a single vote go by default. Missouri was Republican by over 200,000 in 1904, and Democratic by a few thousands in the off-year 1906. It ought to be Republican next year on the national issues presented. With its varied industries, agricultural, manufacturing and mining, Missouri certainly should be Republican if protection alone were the policy at stake.

Mr. Hadley's unanimous nomination for governor opens a large vista of progress for the state. The succession of governors for thirty-six years has been Democratic without a respite. This is the politics of Bourbonism, based on ring manipulation, state board rule for cities, gerrymanders and other gross unfairness. It can be safely predicted that Hadley will make one of the ablest, most energetic and most valuable governors in the country. He is a young man of great ability and promise. His election would please a large majority of the American people, for they know him as one of the most active and capable of the youthful politicians who have appeared in public affairs in recent years. Both Taft and Hadley represent the era of a Greater Missouri.—Globe-Democrat.

A Harney county Republican was heard to murmur the following a few days ago and to voice the conclusion that it is no wonder there is vitality in the Democratic party: "Wherever you find a county court that is Democratic you find every line of patronage it controls going to the Democratic newspaper and never a smell to the Republican paper. Wherever you find a Democratic official with patronage to bestow it is the same thing. But on the other hand, when you find a Republican official with patronage to give he either divides it with the Democratic paper or gives the latter the lion's share."—News.

Henry Wattersou, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, predicts the same "ground-swell for Bryan this year that we had for Cleveland in 1902." The people have not yet forgotten that the "swell" soon vanished and the soup-house took its place.

Over at Colfax, Washington, a woman left her four children at home and went to the theater. The men were away harvesting. The house caught fire in the night and the children were burned to death. What do you think of that for criminal carelessness?

Council Proceedings.

The Police Judge was instructed to have permits prepared for construction of cement sidewalks inside of prescribed limits.

The street committee was instructed to follow provisions of cement ordinance, which means that all cross-walks in the cement district shall be built of cement.

The fire and water committee was instructed to see that sufficient fire escapes be installed in moving picture show now being arranged by Elgin & Kiger.

The controversy over cement sidewalk constructed by S. L. Kline on south side of his residence, was placed in the hands of the street committee with instructions to consult the city attorney and take such action as he may deem expedient.

A proposition of the Willamette Valley Light Company to install new poles equipped with the latest modern fixtures on 1st street was referred to ordinance committee, to report at next meeting.

THE FRESH COW.

Following Calving She Must Have Good Care and Feed.

The fresh cow has a right to good care. If she does not get it her owner will suffer. The fresh cow, especially if young, is nervous and excitable. For this very reason she acts in such a way as to annoy her owner or keeper, but the owner or keeper is not wise who is weak enough to give vent to his annoyance in abuse of the cow. The cow is not to blame for her nervous condition. Harshness will actually lessen materially the supply of milk. The man who cannot control his temper would better let dairying alone. He cannot make it pay.

The fresh cow also requires care and judgment in feeding on account of her feverish condition. She is not only feverish, but weak. She will crave water, but only a little food. The water will be better if it is slightly warmed. Professor Smith of the University of Nebraska suggests the following as a method of feeding for the first few days following calving: "Whatever is given her should be of a light character, such as well cured clover or alfalfa and a little bran, preferably made into a mash by the use of warm water. A few pounds of bran will have a cooling and laxative effect, which is always beneficial just after calving. The following day four or five pounds of a mixture of equal parts of corn, oats and bran would prove satisfactory.

Cows in Hot Weather.

Spray the cows before they are turned out to pasture in the morning with a mixture of equal parts of coal oil and fish oil. One gill, applied with a spray syringe, will cover the neck, shoulders and legs of one cow. The following mixture is recommended by the Wisconsin experiment station: Resin, one and one-half pounds; common soap, two cakes; fish oil, one-half pint, and water, three gallons. Dissolve the resin by boiling in one gallon of water and the soap cut fine. When dissolved add the fish oil and the remainder of the water. Stir thoroughly before using. Apply with syringe or brush. This is an excellent fly repellent, cheap and effective.
