GOOD ROADS.

An Interesting Letter From Mr.
B. W. Johnson.

Five thousand electric lights, arched from curb to curb down the principle business street from the depot, blazed a welcome Thursday night to the visiting boosters to Eugene. A visit to this rapidly growing city really does one good. Its paved streets, its beautiful homes, and the spirit of thrift and progress that is everywhere manifest makes a most favorable impression upon a stranger. I have visited many towns in various sections of the United States, and so far as my observation goes Eugene has every town of her class beaten a mile.

Eugene citizens believe in Eugene. They are planning for a city of 50,000 and claim to have one-fifth of it now. At the present rate of growth she will have the other four fifths in ten or fifteen years. As the city grows the taste of her citizens improves. Better and more artistic homes are being erected; palms, elms and other ornamental trees are taking the place of maples for shade. Her many new business blocks are being substantially built along modern lines of architecture in marked contrast to many of the old buildings now used for business purposes.

In every part of the city is manifest a spirit of progress and prosperity that augurs well for the realization of her ambition to become a real city.

Apparently every one in Eugene has become a booster. The "knocker" has taken the count and is down and out. Something over a year ago she paved a few blocks, in spite of the kickers. It proved such a success, and rents and property valuations increased so much along the paved street, that demands were made for paving in various portions of the city until now the paved district covers miles instead of blocks. If this spirit continues all the streets of the city will be paved in a few years, and the citizen who prefers to live on a muddy, dusty street will have to move not only out of the city but out of the county. A good roads movement is on in Lane county. The paving of the streets has been a revelation to the citizens of the county and the farmers are wanting permanent crushed rock roads, and they are going to get them, too.

But with her growth and money making Eugene has not forgotten to provide for the pleasure and recreation of her citizens. Through the purchase of the waterworks the city acquired Skinner's Butte, which is to be converted into a park; and Banker Hendricks recently made the city a present of 70 acres lying at the eastern edge of the town, to be used for park purposes. The land is covered with oak and fir timber and reaches an altitude of several hundred feet. From its summit is afforded a magnificent view of the surrounding country. At the foot of this eminence flows the beautiful Willamette, while further to the north the McKenzie threads its way eastward to a junction with the former a few miles from town. The growing city of Springfield is in plain view. Large fields of grain lie to the northward of Eugene, extending to the green hills of the coast range. The scene from this future park is indeed a beautiful one and amply repays one for the steep climb to its summit. No such expanse of fertile land, with its magnificent mid-summer color scheme, can be found anywhere outside the Willamette valley. The scene from Jefferson Rock, at Harper's Ferry, which is famous throughout the East, cannot be compared with the beauty and magnificence of the view obtained from Hendricks Park.

It's a pity that one or more of our well-to-do citizens do not follow the example of Mr. Hendricks and donate a park site to Corvallis.

Too much credit for Eugene's growth cannot be given to Manager Hartog, of the Eugene Commercial Club. A year ago the people of that city raised a fund of $12,000 for advertising and other promotion purposes, and employed Mr. Hartog at a salary equal to that of the president of the Agricultural College, and like President Kerr, he is earning his money. Talent costs money, but it pays to get the best. Today Eugene is the best advertised town in the Northwest, and she is realizing splendidly on her investment. Her splendid publicity campaign is not to end with the first year's business, but will be continued indefinitely. A prominent Eugene business man told me that it would be much easier to raise the money for the second year than it was the first.

Eugene is to entertain the Shriners next week, and is making elaborate preparations for their reception. Under Manager Hartog's direction an experienced decorator is at work preparing penants, banners and other things for the decoration of the business streets. He outlined the general scheme of the decorations to me, and if his ideas are carried out the visiting lodgemen will be surprised and delighted with the taste, the beauty and the elaborateness of the street decorations.

All-Benton Fair Notes.

Booths for the storing of exhibits are now in course of construction and you may rest assured that whatever you bring will be suitably provided with space and properly cared for.

Mr. J. R. Smith is chairman of the committee on exhibits and he will be ably assisted by Walter Wiles and S. L. Henderson.

Exhibitors must remember that their products must be on hand at least one day in advance so as to avoid confusion in the arrangement.

The business men had a meeting at the Commercial Club parlors on Wednesday night which was well attended and the committee is assured that this department will be well represented. J. M. Nolan & Son, S. L. Kline and J. H. Harris have already commenced work on their floats.

The committee wishes it understood among the horsemen that all stock in the county is eligible to take part in the contest. Each class will be separated as to breeding so that no complication may arise along the line of breeding. The committee contemplates offering ribbons for 1st, 2d and 3d premiums.

An automobile parade will be a new feature of the show at the fair. This exhibition will be in connection with the business men's parade so as to avoid any complications that might arise by scaring teams. Mark Rickard will have charge of this department and he requests all persons in the county having automobiles to make report to him.

If anyone has been overlooked by the soliciting committee of the coffee club we sincerely hope you will realize that it is a hard job to locate everyone and hence take no offence. This is your fair as well as ours. Bring your exhibit and it shall have our attention.

Business men are earnestly requested to decorate their places of business during the fair thus not only making the store attractive but materially adding to the general appearance of the city on this important occasion.

The Arnold show people are hard at work arranging the tent for the big show. A private letter from Astoria states that the show is very fine and we need have no fear in recommending it to the public, all of which sounds mighty good to us. Go and see it and take children. It will make you feel good.
