

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SALEM, Oct. 9, 1878.

I would like to write you a good letter this week, but I have not the time. Work in all the committee rooms is pushing, and there is no chance for anything else.

The smelting committees appear to have discovered a "mare's nest" in the conduct of late officials, and seem determined to sift the matter to the bottom. So far the only witness who has said anything to bolster the charge of wrong having been done is Thos. H. Cann Clerk of the Board of School Land Commissioners; and it is stated that Thomas has spoken without proper knowledge of the subject; and that he is not a good book-keeper. Let that be as it may, I am certain that there may be other interests at work to delay full investigation, and to keep the eyes of our citizens from the office of Superintendent of the Penitentiary. A full examination into the books and accounts of the parties under suspicion might clear those who kept the books, and I do not see why it is the investigation is not pushed, and the truth in the matter developed as early a day as is possible. It may be that some one else wishes to be Superintendent of the Penitentiary, but no one should be allowed to suffer under a false accusation simply because somebody else wants to see a friend secure appointment to a lucrative position. And then, again, why should any man be allowed to escape the penalty prescribed by the law for wrong doing? The Legislature may adjourn before the smelting committees complete their labors; the chances for arrest and punishment may be delayed until the guilty escape; therefore, the committees in charge of investigation cannot serve justice in delaying that which should be known at once.

In regard to the Watkins-Shadwick quarrel, the end is near. In the investigating committee room the other day there was a personal wordy encounter between the two named, and the ex-Governor showed pluck, and, it all accounts of the affair are correct, "came off with flying colors," having spoke plainly, to the point, to make a man fight, and there was no fight. It looks now as though there may be an investigation in the late Superintendents' conduct unlooked for and unsatisfactory to those interested. The ex-Governor appears more anxious for an examination into his official conduct than those who at one time would have (judging from their published statements) made it look. "The tables have turned."

[Owing to some mistake only a portion of Mr. Kelly's letter has been received.]

The result of our city election last Monday convinces us that the taxpayers want no longer such men as Boss Tweed to handle our City Treasury for private spite, and the honest action of our Trustees Messrs. Haynes, Langenberg and Conn, was endorsed last Monday by our tax-payers by an overwhelming majority. Boss Tweed secured all the two bit votes, who, by law, are deprived to vote for non payment other than poll and road tax. There were a baker's dozen of such votes cast, and Boss Tweed got them all and no more. The additional newly elected Trustees, Messrs. Beath and Farquar together with the three already named gentlemen Haynes, Langenberg and Conn will constitute an upright board who will at all times guard the interests of the city and taxpayers equally.

TRAVELING CORRESPONDENCE
A careless observer in passing through the county of Coos and not devoting his mind to the examination of its many features could very easily overlook its vast resources. When I say that Coos county has as many natural sources of future wealth as any other county in the State of Oregon I say it with a full knowledge of the value and wealth of the other counties.

The timber and coal, which are almost inexhaustible, are in themselves alone, enough to insure the future prosperity of the county beyond a doubt; but there are other features of boundless wealth which we will proceed to examine namely: agricultural, and stock raising.

The most of the farming land lays along the Coquille and Coos rivers and their tributaries, also around Coos Bay and its arms extending into the land. These lands are mostly covered with a growth of brush and small timber which can be cleared at little expense, and the farmers who have tried it tell me that the fertility of the land is so great that the first crop will always more than pay for the clearing, and my own observation in the Coquille valley confirms them in every particular.

In the Coquille valley we find considerable advancement in the agricultural line; here are many farms under the finest cultivation, all kinds of grain and vegetables are raised in great profusion and they now have three grist mills in the valley which furnish the best of flour for home consumption.

As a fruit growing country Coos county cannot be surpassed, either in the quality or the quantity of the fruit which can be produced. The apples and peaches especially have a peculiarly rich flavor—the rich land seems especially adapted for all kinds of fruit; I notice that scarcely any attention is paid to the fruit trees and still they are all loaded to their greatest capacity, and, in the opinion of your correspondent Coos county and more especially the Coquille valley in the near future, will be the most noted of any portion of Oregon for its fine fruits.

There is another branch of industry which can be carried on in Coos county with great profit, that is, stock raising. The ground even on the hills and mountains is so well adapted to all kinds of grass that seeds scattered broadcast spring up as if by magic and feed for your stock is abundant. In winter as well as summer stock will fatten and there is no danger of hard winters in which your stock will freeze or starve.

What Coos county needs is better communications with the rest of Oregon and that could be effected by a railroad to Roseburg which at no great future day will be an accomplished fact. The bar of the lay is one of the greatest impediments to the interests of Coos county—improve it so that ships of great tonnage can enter the harbor then will the business of the county surpass any other portion of the State.

While the people of Coos are waiting for railroads and harbor improvements, they should not neglect the improvement of their wagon roads for good roads are certainly a great convenience, and conduce to wealth of any country. The road between Coquille City and Myrtle Point certainly needs improving and the energetic people of the Coquille will not long let it remain in its present condition.

Some Pleasantry.
We publish below that portion of Mr. Kelly's letter that was crowded out last week:
I was pleased to meet Hon. Binger Hermann, and Messrs. Friedlander, Deal, Conn, and Rev. Bell here the other day. I can vouch for the conduct of all but the last named gentleman. He did not start for bed until midnight, got in the wrong room, and then he was laughed at by his companions next morning. Brother Bell had better bring Peter Kearns with him the next time.

Articles of incorporation have just been filed in the office of the Secretary of State for the Ellensburg and Jacksonville Railroad company with a capital stock of $2,000,000 divided into shares of $100, each. The object is to build a narrow gauge railroad from Ellensburg through Curry, Josephine and Jackson counties to Jacksonville. The following well-known gentlemen are the incorporators: Alex. Martin, C. C. Beckman, E. D. Fondary, J. E. Beers, John Orth, Jacob Ish, M. Hawley, J. M. McCall, J. N. T. Miller and R. D. Humm representing some of the wealthiest capitalists of Southern Ore. on.

THE FIRE AT JUNCTION.
Great Destruction of Property—The Work of an Inconceivable—Detailed Statement of Losses.

JUNCTION CITY, Oct. 7, 1878.

The heaviest blow ever dealt at the business interests of Lane county, and one from which we cannot soon recover, was the fire which laid in ashes a solid block, with the exception of Gilmore's hotel, in the very heart of our town. The accumulated life savings of industrious citizens was destroyed in a few hours' time. The fire originated in the back part of B. Cohen's store, about seventy feet back from Front street. It was first noticed about 1 o'clock by parties who were in Craig's saloon. This saloon is the next door but one south of Cohen's store, but before Mr. Craig and those who were with him could give the alarm the fire had got beyond control and the flames were shooting up the sides of the building and through the roof as if the walls had been saturated with coal oil. The alarm was struck at once. The church bells were sounded, the district school house and the railroad engine bells were rung and the citizens turned out en masse to fight the flames. We have no fire engine and were poorly prepared for the emergency. Hundreds of our men fought brave and hard, at times running great risks with their lives, and for hours with great odds against them. The flames passed rapidly from Cohen's store to the north, consuming Shipley's & Carson's meat market and into the roof of L. Salomon & Celig's general mercantile store. On the south, the fire ran rapidly along Front street, past the upper story of Richard's hall falling over on Henderson's barber shop, and giving the fire increased headway. It soon passed in to Al. Craig's saloon and from thence into Beebe's boot and shoe store, where the flames were held in check for awhile through an extra effort by the citizens and the wind being favorable. At this juncture the roof of Salomon and Celig's store fell in with a deafening crash, and it was noticed that J. H. Berry's hotel, which is situated across Depot street to the north from Salomon & Celig's store, was in imminent danger. Men mounted the roof of this handsome edifice, covering it with blankets upon which barrels of water was thrown. It appears that there were one hundred pounds of powder and sixty gallons of coal oil in the rear of Salomon & Celig's buildings, and while the roof of Berry's hotel and adjoining buildings were covered with men, this powder and coal oil exploded, throwing boxes of nails and timbers, spades, boxes of nails and timbers, 25 and some of them 150 feet into the air. The men on Berry's hotel had no chance for dodging, because they were fifty and some of them one hundred feet from the ground on the top of a steep roof. A great volcano of fire was blown into the air and fell thick upon the roofs of adjoining buildings. There was no person, however, seriously hurt by this accident. At the time of the explosion Mr. C. W. Washburne was standing in a window in the third story of Berry's hotel, and a large iron bolt was driven through a half-inch plank within a few feet of his head. Pieces of iron bolts were thrown 200 yards from the building. It was a fearful sight—men fighting and hovering under a porch for protection, while nearly every window glass in the south exposure of Berry's hotel was shattered to atoms. The report was distinctly heard at Harrisburg and Irving, distances six and ten miles.

The fire again broke out from Beebe's boot and shoe store, where it had been held in check awhile, and rapidly consumed Shog Lee's laundry building, Wolf's harness shop Kitter's tin and hardware store, leaving between the fire and Gilmore's hotel; and this building, a tailor shop, was, by the aid of a large force of men, pulled down and torn away, thus saving this hotel the fire extending back along a cross street, consuming a blacksmith shop and L. Cunningham & Co.'s hardware establishment. There is not a building standing between the two hotels. All are one heap of smouldering ruins.

The experts of Oregon, says Centennial circular of 1876, average $375 to every man in the State. It is more than that now annually. Oregon wheat, wool, flour, salmon, fruits and vegetables command from five to ten per cent. higher price than those any other country; with a population of 40,000 men her exports equal one-seventh of the total exports of the United States. Truly, such a State is not a poor State to live in.

Ben Butler's ticket in Massachusetts is falling to pieces. The candidates for State Treasurer and Attorney General have both withdrawn. Now Brick Pomeroy step in and jerk Ben's platform from under him.

A CRITICISM.

The Exhibition of art given at the school house Monday night was very good, all but the lecturing which named him in the estimation of the people a traitor.

He first began ridiculing Grant whose picture he had produced on the canvass about the presidency and numerous things. Next he produced the picture of Beauregard who he applauded to the skies then came the picture of R. E. Lee which he pronounced the picture of a gentleman and a scholar. Then he showed the two battles of Manassas, both rebel victories, but did not show any of the victories on the other side. Directly came the picture of the Indian messenger in Cherry Valley which he said was right; and we would have done the same had we been in their place, also Benedict Arnold.

Now if Mr. Dion Platt believes that the Confederate officers done right, upholds the Indians in their bloody massacres, and the traitor Benedict Arnold I would say that he is a traitor of the worst type and, readers judge for yourselves, do you think it is right or appropriate for a man who means to obtain his living from the public to run down our best men and uphold these villainous and bloody Indian massacres and praise such traitors as Benedict Arnold? I do not say that Arnold did no good to his country, but I hope that all men that turn traitor may die as wretched as Arnold did, and I would advise all Dion Platts to go to any other showman who talks like Dion Platt to not come here again for as sure as they do they will get thrown out of some window and their traps also.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Following are the particulars of the serious railroad accident which occurred last Sunday on the Dayton and Sheridan narrow gauge railroad. The accident occurred near Ball's station. The train was backing. The first car was a caboose, which was separated from the locomotive by a number of platform cars. The caboose was partially filled with wheat. There were also several passengers in the same car. By some means the caboose was ditched and capsized. The grain was scattered about and caught some of the passengers, who were badly injured. A Mrs. Martin and an old gentleman named Bai sustained what are feared to be fatal injuries. Mr. Martin, the husband of the lady, was badly bruised about the head and face. Miss McMillan, Miss Branson and Miss Graves who were in the caboose, also received slight injuries. A number of persons were on the train, but most of them occupied the platform cars and thus fortunately escaped injury. The train was moving slowly at the time, or the accident would have been attended with far more disastrous results. The passengers were extricated from their position as far as soon as possible and everything was done to alleviate the sufferings of those who were injured. No particular blame is attached to any one for the unfortunate disaster.

The returns from the Colorado election, so far as received, show the success of the entire Republican ticket by a majority over the Democratic and Greenback tickets. The Chairman of the State Republican Central Committee claims the State by 2,500 majority, and the legislature by two-thirds.
