The Patent System.

How It is Annually Saving the Country Hundreds of Militons of Dollars. From the Chicago Tribune.

The Senate Committee on patents, in the course of its investigation prelimi-nary to the report of the new bill for the codification of the patent laws, has discovered many new and important facts connected with the extension of the patent system in the west. Mr. C. C. Coffin, the well-known writer, under the none de plume of "Carleton," was specially charged by gentlemen interosted in patents to make a tour of the western country, and to direct his inquiries to various points, -such as, what benefit has accrued to an inventor from a patent; what benefit to the public: what royalities have been paid for the use of a patent; how much of time, labor and expense an invention has cost: what it costs to introduce an invention to the public; what grounds of complaint there are against the present law; and what modifications of the law

THE OLIVER CHILLED PLOW. He visited the entire northwest, and discovered the last invention in plows in the Oliver chilled plow, of Indiana.

Mr. Coffin said: "Mr. Oliver was a manufacturer of common plows. He began at South Bend in 1855. He saw that the demand of the farmers was for the plow that would have a mold-board of hard finish,-something harder than iron, because iron was almost worthless in many of the western soils. Therefore, he turned his attention to the production of a chilled mold-board. It was nothing new; it had been attempted for twenty-five years, and every time re sulted in utter failure, for this reason: It was found that when you attempted to enlarge the surface of the mold-board beyond thirty-six superficial inches, you could not produce a perfect piece of iron. THE ARRAY OF PROOF

Of its reliability in our possession, we make the two following condensed extracts:

Mr. Namuel H. Matthews, Modestown, Accommac Co., Va., states that his child, when a mouth old, was attacked with an emption that covered its bead, face, arms, feet and legs, comverting them into "hearly one sold sone." but that two and a haif bottles of Escovint's slighted and Liver Syrup effected a complete curve without a scar.

Mariin Robbins, Jr., writes that he suffered from Seroinlous White Swelling with twelve the time he had finished the twenty-fourth bottle of the SYRUP he was completely cured.
