Where both vehicles can turn out. A cart which meets a horse car may turn to either side where there is the best chance to pass. In Michigan the proprietor of a steam threshing machine was traveling in it (it ran by steam power) along the road when a horse and wagon approached. The threshing machine man steered over to the extreme right side, and stopped his engine to avoid frighten-ing the horse. But the horse took fright, anthorities and citizens of Oakland and interior cities to join in the parade. There is a law of Congress which makes it an offense for any person to mail; and the usefulness of having mail wagons which run to and fro through the city streets so gorgeously painted and gilded as they are, no doubt is that it prevents cartmen from getting approach of the steamer City of Tokio in the way and then saying they did not with Grant on board, being received, they know the concern behind was a mail wagon. No one can mistake the big red and yellow affair, having the shape of a hearse, the size of an ark, and the colors of a circus chariot, which flashes along

The rule of the road as to foot passengers who want to cross streets where vehicles are passing is somewhat perplexing. While pedestrians are walking on the sidewalk they have the best right; a vehicle which should come upon the sidewalk and injure a walker would be almost sure to be cast in damages. A man in Troy allowed a kicking horse to come out from his stable unattended, and the horse strayed along the sidewalk, and kicked a boy who was walking there. The court said the horse owner must pay damages as matter of coure; he had no business to let such a horse run loose on the walk. Along the middle of the block, in the test right; a foot passenger who tries to cross takes his risk, and must look out for himself; he could hardly recover dame to for himself; he could hardly recover dame. gers who want to cross streets where the arrival of the steamer. There has been a large influx of visitors, official and unofficial, from the interior, including a to cross takes his risk, and must look out ege, and each must take all reason pains to avoid a run over. Foot passengers can generally stop, or turn aside, or hasten forward more easily than carts and carriages; this is some reason why they should take more responsibility and care against accidents.

By their neglected education during slavery, always directed what to do by their owners and not thinking for themselves, it could not be expected that freedom would bring in its train intelligence and administrative ability. As a consequence their ignorance has destroyed the fruit of their labors for years past, and they have been the prey too often of unscrupulous men, who have amassed fortunes at the expense of the negroes who traded with them. The rise has been so great in crediting the negro that from 100 to 300 per cent has been asked and paid for advances of supplies. As a consequence the negroes, seeing that they worked hard throughout the year and had nothing at the lend, have become demoralized and suspicious of everybody and everything; don't wish to work and would prafer to

But the majority of the negro women seem determined years has brought them to nearly the same condition of impoverishment as the black race. Prices on cotton have been steadily dropping each year, but the insatiate interest and commissions have not abated. And so the merchants have accumulated the load of debt to the have accumulated the load of debt to the point of probably half the value of the land, and thus the mortgage is foreclosed and the former owner is homeless and destitude. In a stretch of nearly eight miles of splendid cotton land in front of my window, this is the record of nearly every plantation, formerly producing thousands of dollars of revenue, and now owned by the commission merchant. Thus a new phase has been inaugurated.

The merchants must do something to make the land available, and a system of absentee landlordism like that of Ireland comes in. Agents must run the lands and employ the labor, and each successive year will witness the same scene of bare subsistence by the laborer with not a nickle to store away for old age or sick-

On examining the bird an ironheaded arrow over a foot long was found transfixed under one of its wings. Evidently the eagle had been fired at and struck in Africa by some native, and had struck in Africa by some native, and had borne the arrow in its body in its flight over the Mediterranean until it fell dead from exhaustion on touching land at Maina,—Scientific American.
