AMERICAN CHAPTER NO. 11, A. M., hold their regular communications every first and third Tuesday in each month. All members in good standing will take due and timely notice and govern themselves accordingly.

ORCHESTRA.—Prof. Gilliam is in receipt of a set of Jean White's latest musical productions. A full orchestra has been organized, and after a little practice will be able to provide as fine music as can be produced anywhere.

MARRIED.—At the residence of Mr. James Short, by Rev. M. C. Miller, Aug. 1, 1882, Mr. R. M. Matthews and Miss Malinda Short. On the same evening the happy couple received the congratulations of friends at the Metropolitan hotel. They were also the recipients of a serenade by the Silver Cornet Band.

REACHED MYRTLE CREEK.—On the evening of the 1st inst. the railroad people of that little place had the pleasure of welcoming a real train of cars to their midst, after many years of anxious expectation. Quite a number of persons from this place went out on the first train.

ACCIDENT.—On Monday Harry Seibert met with an accident which for a short time it was thought might prove fatal. In trying to control a spirited horse, which he was riding, with a curved bit, he caused the animal to rear and fall backward. Harry struck heavily, severing an artery at the back of his head. Dr. R. M. Davis was called and with much difficulty succeeded in effecting a compress.

WHY IT IS THUS.—As a matter of interest to the ladies and wool-growers of this county, we quote the following from a New York paper: "The stiffening in the price of medium grade wool is due to the caprice of fashion. Since the ladies have determined to wear the broad striped worsted goods the coming season the manufacturers, to serve their own interests, must manufacture that class of goods. Hence, medium fine grades have gone up and the finer and coarser grades have fallen in value."

NEW MACHINERY.—New machinery for the gristmill just south of the city arrived here this week direct from the East, and will be placed and in running order within thirty days. The mill is to contain three runs of burrs, and as all the machinery is new, it will be an excellent one. A force of hands is now at work on the race which will be ready as soon as the machinery can be put in place. This is an enterprise which has been delayed from various causes and we are glad to note its final success. It will be of much benefit to the commercial interests of Roseburg.

QUICK RELIEF.—Mr. Hermann Anlauf, of Drain, had suffered intensely with nervous spasms for two days, at times requiring several men to hold him in bed. The spasms were caused from the root of a broken tooth pressing upon the nerve. On Monday Dr. M. W. Davis, of this city, was telegraphed for, and he went to Drain upon a freight train. He found the patient suffering intense agony. The doctor removed the broken tooth which at once gave relief, whereupon Mr. Anlauf was the happiest man in Oregon. Dr. Davis returned home on the evening train.

WILBUR ACADEMY.—This long established and popular institution of learning, according to notice which appears elsewhere in our columns, commences its fall term on the 4th day of September, under the supervision of Prof. H. L. Benson, assisted by able and popular teachers. Prof. Benson took charge of this school a little over two years ago, and has raised it from the position of an academy, which it had obtained under Prof. Skidmore and other teachers, to one of the first class colleges of the state. From its pleasant situation in the little town of Wilbur, free from the influence of saloons, in the midst of a sober industrious and orderly community; its altitude and position in the center of the Umpqua Valley, renders it the most healthful locality, mentally, morally and physically that can be found on the Pacific coast for a college. Prof. Benson and the other teachers associated with him deserve the patronage and support of the people of this county, in the work they are doing in the cause of education.

HOME NEWS.

The infant child of Mr. Moss Fletcher died on Sunday last, after a brief illness aged four days.

During the illness of Mr. Bowen, Al. Tibbets has acted as Marshal to an acceptable manner. Forest fires are raging in the Coast Range and a vast amount of valuable timber will be destroyed.

Quincy A. Grubbs has been appointed deputy by the newly elected Democratic Sheriff of Marion county. It is rumored that several accidents have recently occurred at Cow Creek tunnel, but we have no particulars.

It is a pleasure to show goods at Flood's. The work of running logs for the mills on the North Umpqua has been completed. The boys had good luck.

The largest heats of oats we have seen were on exhibition at Marks' store this week. They were raised by Capt. George Short at Wilbur.

Joe Williams, in the employ of R. S. & J. C. Sheridans has completed the tinning on the roof of the new residence of Hon. B. Hermann.

Tom Barnett, driver of the stage at the time of the accident on Myrtle Creek highway was a very large slipper on account of injuries received. There was a $1,000,000 fire in New York this week and the cheapest place to buy goods is at Flood's.

The insurance on $10,000 lost in the Colfax fire by Arthur Howe & F. H. Belmont to $3,000. Almost all the business houses burned will be rebuilt.

An interesting communication from Lewisville, and other matter of interest was crowded out of this issue for lack of space, but will appear in our next.

The hunting party headed by Rev. J. Howard, returned on Wednesday from Brewster Valley. The leader killed two elk and one bear. The elk meat was delicious.

Extensive operations will very shortly begin on the railroad extension from Hedding. We understand that 300 men are ready at work, and that 2,000 white laborers will be taken from the Southern Pacific early this fall.

Three men are detained at Sisson's on account of injuries received by the turning over of the stage in that vicinity. Stage accidents have been alarmingly numerous since the new company took charge, but we understand that it is on account of very heavy mail.

Levi Bagg, who was convicted at the last term of circuit court and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary, was employed as a trusty on the outside brickyard. On Friday last he made his escape. The warden offers a reward of $100 for his capture and return.

Joe Sheridan, L. A. Sanctuary, Fred Tolles and James Fletcher were fishing the first of the week, beyond Camas Valley on the Coquille. The result of the trip is not sterling, but we can assure the public that "Sank" was not the one who told us the number of fish caught as it was only one hundred and fifty-seven.

No cheap John shoddy goods at Flood's. A chap, not unknown, walked into R. S. & J. C. Sheridans hardware store on Monday and appropriated several hundred fish-hooks and a number of boxes of primers in the absence of any one to wait upon him. The boys do a cash business and the gentleman will please call and settle for the articles. Otherwise there is trouble in store for him.

PERSONAL.

Dr. G. H. Flett is sojourning with us again temporarily. Johnny Stenger, of Canyonville, has been in Roseburg several days.

Hon. A. F. Campbell returned this week from a business trip to Portland. Eugene Shelby passed through this week en route for Will Creek to establish an express office at that locality.

Mr. H. Stetzel is in our city soliciting for the Polaris, an excellent eight-page weekly paper published in Portland.

Julius Stearns of Portland was here yesterday. He has been visiting his parents who reside in Oakland in this county, attending at the bedside of a sick mother. The Judge himself is the picture of good health.

Charley Wilex who has been reading law with the Hon. B. Hermann has left town—he has gone to teach school at Gardiner during the fall term when he expects to return. Come back Charley at an early day—you are missed by one single Miss—it will not do to stay too long away from town.

Mr. W. Whitmore, with Fechtelmer, Goodkin & Co., wholesale clothing, San Francisco, has been with us the past week. He was a resident of this city in 1855, and all the old citizens remember him as Willie. When he left Roseburg he went to San Francisco in 1866 a mere boy, since which time he has been with the firm now so ably represented by him.

Mrs. Taylor, and troupe gave the people of Roseburg an entertainment at the court house on Thursday and Friday nights of this week. The songs and relations were good, and interesting, with rare feats of tumbling by Segnor Francesco Blanchard who surpasses in agility any one who has visited this section of country for many years. Little Maud Taylor in her role as the scolding wife, acted her part to perfection and beyond what could be expected of one of her tender years.

Of Mrs. Blanche's recitations and songs nothing need be said, you have all heard him and he was fully up to himself.

Bargains in clothing at Flood's.

EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY.

As there has been considerable interest manifested in this locality in the case of J. C. Powers, we give in full the decision of Gov. Thayer regarding the application for clemency. STATE OF OREGON, EXECUTIVE OFFICE, Salem, July 28th, 1882.

In the matter of the application for executive clemency in favor of J. C. Powers.

At the October term, 1881, of the circuit court for the county of Multnomah, Powers was tried and convicted of murder in the first degree for the murder of Benjamin Cornelius, and sentenced to be hung. Numerous petitions have been duly presented to me in his behalf, containing, in the aggregate, the names of ten thousand petitioners, representing the counties of Multnomah, Washington, Clatsop, Columbia, Yamhill, Polk, Linn, Umatilla, and portions of Washington Territory. They contain the names of the leading citizens and representative men of the various localities from which they were forwarded. In many of them the occupation of each of the signers is set out. In some of them a full pardon is urged, but generally a communication of the sentence to imprisonment for life is all that is asked. I have also received several letters from prominent citizens residing in different parts of the State soliciting in his behalf, and have been advised by many others with whom I have consulted that it was a proper case for executive interference. One of the petitions received was signed by nearly all the members of the bar of the fourth judicial district. I have met a few parties who were opposed to any pardon or commutation of the sentence, but I am fully satisfied that the sentiment of a great majority of the people of the State is against the execution of Powers, and that the petitions and letters referred to as a general thing, express the honest convictions of the signers. These various petitions are more important from the fact that the circumstances of the homicide were widely known. The affair occurred at a celebration of the Fourth of July in Portland, when a large number of persons were present, and was extensively published throughout the country. Consequently the people had a better knowledge of it than they generally do of such occurrences, and are able to petition more intelligently. Though I attach importance to petitions in all proper cases, the right of petition is secured to the people by the highest authority known to the government. It may be and probably is often abused, but it does not follow that petitions are to be ignored, for that would be destructive of the immunity itself; yet there should always be reasonable grounds upon which to found a petition. A governor, for instance, would not be justified in changing the sentence of the law pronounced by the court simply because the people requested it. A valid reason should be shown for so important an act, else it should be refused. In considering the subject of a pardon, the executive has no right, in my judgment, to review the law or evidence in the case for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not error has been committed in the conviction of the party. The court and jury constitute the tribunal to settle questions of that character, and their action in that matter is final, and is unimpeachable in this proceeding. The court and jury determine the law and the facts, and I must assume that their determination in this case has been correct, and that Powers was in accordance with the law and evidence rightfully and properly convicted of murder in the first degree, and that, by the laws of this State he has forfeited his life. Still I think that the general circumstances which have occasioned the killing may be taken in consideration in an application for clemency, though I concede that an attempt to draw a distinction between cases in which parties have "purposely" and of deliberate and premeditated malice, killed people, appears like subtlety, a refinement that possibly should never be admitted where human life under such circumstances has been sacrificed. But as a matter of fact, there may be a wide difference in cases, both in the manner of killing and the circumstances and motives causing it. The assassin who lays in wait for his victim and stealthily murders him for his money, is a greater culprit, morally, than he, who, smothered under the sense of injury to himself or family, comforts the offender and slays him; yet the law might adjudge both acts offenses of the same grade. It is claimed in this case, in the petitions and letters before mentioned, that a family difficulty had arisen between the deceased and Powers; that Powers had married his daughter; that they had children; that there had been a separation, and that Powers had become annoyed and exasperated on account of it; that the deceased was a powerful man physically; that on the day of the murder he had armed himself in expectation of a difficulty; that the two parties met in a street in the city of Portland; that a desperate encounter ensued in which both were actors and in which Powers was severely, and Cornelius mortally wounded, and upon these grounds substantially executive clemency is urged. I understand that Powers is a business man, has been engaged in getting out timber for several years; that he has been regarded as a person possessing a good deal of physical courage; has been somewhat addicted to drink, and has had some personal difficulties, but has not been regarded as a criminal. On the contrary, he has been considered as a man of reasonably fair character; one who has observed his contracts, paid his debts, and been honest in his dealings.

This application for clemency has been made at a time set for its hearing and in pursuance of a regularly published notice. No counter statement has been presented or opposition made to it other than as before stated, the question now to be determined is whether the State can, consistently with its dignity, and the duty which it owes to its citizens, in maintaining order in the community, in protecting them in their rights, and in securing them in their person, afford to commute the sentence of death to that of imprisonment for life.

It involves a matter strictly between the commonwealth and powers. No feelings of malice or vindictiveness can enter into it. If the lesser punishment will subserve the ends of justice, if it is adequate under the circumstances of the case, then it would be a great moral wrong to inflict the greater; it would be closing the door of mercy, a quality of our nature that is more refining and ennobling in its tendency than any other attribute we possess. It has been suggested with a degree of seriousness that there would be no objection to the commutation of Powers' sentence if any reasonable assurance could be given that he would be imprisoned during his natural life, but that the apprehension was so strong that he would at some future time be released, made it very necessary that he should be put to death. Of course I cannot consider any arguments of that character. I have no right to suppose that he will be relieved of his sentence unless circumstances should justify it. Besides, the question for me to determine is not one of expediency. I am obliged to decide it upon its merits, uninfluenced by anticipations of a possible neglect of duty upon the part of some future governor of the State. After a careful consideration of the various circumstances connected with the transaction, and though a respect for the opinion of the great number of persons who have urged the exercise of executive clemency in this matter, I have concluded to commute the sentence against Powers to imprisonment for life. And I base my action on the premises upon the grounds that the substituted punishment is sufficiently severe in this case to subserve the ends and purposes of justice.

Upon the question of a full pardon I deem it proper to state that I can see no grounds whatever upon which it could be granted. No one has a right to attempt to vindicate his wrongs, whether real or imaginary, by violent measures. Such a course would be subversive of law and order and if not promptly checked would break up and destroy society itself. The jury has settled the question as to which party was the aggressor in the affair, and the degree of the offense, and while the general circumstances surrounding the transaction, that could not be taken into account by the jury, may, out of a regard for human life, justify a mitigation of the punishment they should not be admitted to excuse the offense. Powers' conduct has been high-handed and malicious, and if the rigor of the law is fixed by the spirit of mercy, still the claims of justice must not be disregarded. The sentence, in my judgment, should not be changed before the communication mentioned. W. W. THAYER, Governor of Oregon.
