LOCAL ITEMS.

The only genuine Henry Clay cigar in the city, at Morgan's.

A new tailoring establishment has been opened next door to the Metropolitan saloon, on Jackson street.

Mr. Leonard Howe returned on Monday from his trip east with the pioneers. He visited friends in Illinois.

Try some of those hit cigars at Morgan's, put up expressly for the fancy trade.

Mr. C. W. Wright informs us that a grand ball will be given at George Shambrook's at the Umpqua Ferry, Christmas eve.

George Engells, agent for the Overland stage company, was in the city Tuesday. He reports the terminus expects to move from Othello to Grant's Pass in a few days.

The British troops evacuated the city of New York one hundred years ago the 26th of November. A public celebration was held in that city in commemoration of the event.

At T. W. Morgan's you will find the finest assortment of holiday goods in the city, such as dolls, toys, tops, autograph albums, ladies purses, picture books, picture frames, and fancy ware of every description.

Henry Bowen has completed his new shop on the site of the old Bowen blacksmith shop, on Main street. The building is large and commodious and he is prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing.

Typhoid fever is prevalent in the city of Portland. It is not confined to any particular locality, but prevails in all parts of the city. It is attributed to the filthy condition of the sewers and streets.

W. J. Plymouth, of Jacksonville, stopped a few days in our city on his return from Salem. He took Melville alias Denver to the state prison last week. He was the guest of Mr. Zigler while in Roseburg.

John Pierce returned on Monday from an extensive trip to the Eastern States. He went East with the pioneers. He made an extended visit in New York and Pennsylvania. He states that there has been many changes and vast improvements since he left his old home some thirty years ago.

The trial of Justus last week in Jackson ville, for killing his father, resulted in a verdict of murder in the second degree. He was formerly convicted of murder in the first degree, and the Supreme court granted him a new trial. We learn that another appeal will be taken.

Recently a number of Republican leaders were assembled in caucus discussing the program for the June campaign. The name of M. C. George came up as a candidate for reelection to Congress. An old gray-haired, wire-puller arose, shook his head and in a stentorian tone said: "He won't do!" Several of Mr. George's admirers, in an excited manner, demanded to know the reason why. The old sage, in a slow, solemn and impressive tone, replied: "Poor boy; he died in the wool."

Hon. A. C. Gibbs, ex-Governor of the State and one of the early settlers of the Umpqua valley, and a former resident of Roseburg, at present a prominent lawyer of Portland, paid our city an extended visit the last of last week and the fore part of this. He returned home on the morning train, to be present with his family on Thanksgiving. The Governor is looking hale and hearty, and in the best of spirits and shows that time has dealt more gently with him than with many others of his years.

Says the Jacksonville Times: It is Judge Hanna's intention, at the close of the present term of the Circuit court, to resign the position he has honored for the past several years, and his resignation has already been forwarded to Governor Moody. C. W. Kahler, who was once a candidate before the people for the position, cannot be prevailed upon to accept it now, and a petition in favor of L. R. Webster, of this place, is in circulation. The appointment lasts until next June, when an election to fill the unexpired term of Judge Hanna, running two years, takes place.

About eight o'clock Monday morning as L. McGregor and a young man were crossing Deer creek bridge with a two-horse wagon and team, one of the swingletrees broke, which scared the team and it started to run up Jackson street. The tongue of the wagon came out of the neckyoke and ran under a cross walk and into the ground with such force that it stopped the wagon and threw McGregor out. The horses got loose and made a lively run of it up Jackson street and down Main street, when they turned back up Jackson street to the meat market, where they were stopped. But little damage was done. McGregor received some bruises which made him limp and some street posts were knocked down.

No intelligent reader can fail to be interested in the contents of the North American Review for December. The question of the telegraph has the place of honor in the number, Gardiner G. Hubbard pointing out the great advantages that would result from the proposed government control of the telegraph, and showing from the experience of several European countries the benefits to be derived from the incorporation of the telegraph with the postal service. Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, of Harvard University, shows the "Evils of the Sub-Treasury System," in its absorbing and withholding from circulation the specie that is constantly needed to insure stability in the world of finance. "The Day of Judgment," by Gail Hamilton, is a caustic review of the less amiable moral traits of Thomas Carlyle. Henry George writes of "Overproduction," an idea which he declares to be preposterous, unless more wealth is produced than is wanted. Gen. W. B. Franklin sets forth the views of naval and military experts as to what is absolutely needed in the way of organization, forts, ships and war material, to insure the "National Defense." An article on "Railroad and Public Time," by Professor Leonard Waldo, of the Yale college observatory, explains the system of uniform time standards now being introduced into the railroad service of the United States. Finally, there is a discussion of the question of "Morality without Religion," by F. A. Kidder and Prof. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton college. Published at 30 Lafayette place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

Al. Harlon Killed.

Tuesday of last week Al. Harlon, alias Thompson, got into a row with a young man by the name of Peter Maloney, in Cannon's saloon, at Grant's Pass. Maloney got the drop on Harlon with a knife, when the latter begged for his life and Maloney spared him. When Maloney released him and turned around, supposing the affair was ended, Harlon drew a large sized Smith & Wesson revolver and shot him in the back of the head, killing him. He then left for the Cow creek mountains. Sheriff Pardon was notified on Thursday that Harlon had come into Douglas county and having a warrant for his arrest on a charge of burglary, committed in this county, he took the train for Glendale Thursday night, Friday morning, in company with Geo. W. Smith, one of his deputies, he went over to Galesville and there learned that Harlon, in company with a young man by the name of Garrett, had passed that place. They went from there in company with John Haight, to Jones' place and learned from Mrs. Jones that Harlon had been there and stated that he had killed a man and demanded something to eat. She had given him some provisions, which he took to a cabin up in Sta. veout gulch, where he was then stopping. The Sheriff had Mrs. Jones go to the cabin and tell him that Charles Dwelley had seen where he was stopping and had told the officers, and that he had better move to an old cabin on the hill, back of their place. The Sheriff then, in company with Mr. Smith, Winfield Booth, and John Haight, concealed themselves on the trail he would have to take in going to the cabin. About two o'clock in the afternoon he made his appearance, with his provisions and bedding on his back. When within about forty steps the Sheriff presented his rifle and ordered him to throw up his hands and surrender. He instantly drew his pistol and jumped to get behind a log. The Sheriff then fired, which was followed by three or four shots from the other party, when Harlon fell forward on his face and called to them to shoot again. He partially raised himself up on his hands and commenced to groan. The Sheriff and Mr. Smith drew their revolvers and went to where he was laying. The Sheriff picked up one of his revolvers, which was laying on the ground, partly under him. It was a large Smith and Wesson revolver, of 44 caliber, the same he had killed Maloney with. He also had on his person another pistol of 32 caliber. They found that he was mortally wounded. They had shot five times, and two of the shots had taken effect, one through the thigh, the other in the side, ranging upward and backward, breaking the spinal column. He lived but a short time, when they took his remains to Hardy Elliff's and notified Justice Flint of this place, who went out Saturday night and held an inquest Sunday. The jurors were James Moore, Hardy Elliff, A. Walker, Wm. King, H. C. Levins, and Edward Tulett, who after viewing the body and hearing the testimony returned their verdict to the effect that the name of the deceased was Al. Harlon, that he came to his death by gunshot wounds inflicted by Joseph Pardon, G. W. Smith, Winfield Booth, and John Haight, while resisting arrest, and that the killing was justifiable. The remains were buried in the Galesville burying ground on Sunday evening. Of the deceased but little is known. He was arrested some two and a half or three years ago and placed in the old jail, which he, in company with two others, broke and got out. The others were recaptured, but he made his escape. The grand jury returned an indictment against him for burglary and a bench warrant issued for his arrest, but little or no effort had been made to arrest him, although it has been reported for the last year and a half that he was along the line of the railroad, from Riddle to Grant's Pass. He has been regarded as a desperado and a dangerous man and considerable fault has been found with the Sheriff for not making a greater effort to arrest him before.

Colos Valley Gleanings.

The late rain has placed a damper on the farming community. I think the old-time Democrat from Colos valley who ventilated his fertile brain through the columns of the INDEPENDENT last week, feels at home once more, as he has just taken up permanent rooms at the poor house.

W. B. Clark and J. L. Baker propose building a large structure for the purpose of storing dressed lumber out of the weather. This will fill a long felt want.

Mr. J. A. Woodruff has just returned from the front and gone into winter quarters at Clarkburg. I can not say that he has lost anything lately but he keeps watching the "Barr's."

Our old friend J. E. B. Cartwright, has returned from Rogue river valley, where he has just finished a large contract of surveying and engineering for the O. & C. railroad. After paying Portland a flying business visit he has settled down on his farm, to enjoy the laurels he so richly deserves.

Mr. S. O. Emery is having a large ferry boat built to be run from the farm of the Widow Crow to the farm of N. T. Day, on the north side of the Umpqua river. Mr. George W. Daugherty has been engaged to take charge of the boat. That is a sufficient guaranty that the traveling public will always find the ferryman at his post.

Our old friend A. C. Clayton has returned from the front, looking hale and hearty. Dame rumor says he has added doodles of the railroad company's glittering coin to his already well filled pockets, and that he now proposes to add more "Fields" to his possessions.

Our worthy Justice paid a flying visit a few days ago to his mills on Hubbard creek. While there he made arrangements with parties to cut timber yherewith to build a handsome residence. His mill has become a permanent institution of the valley. The Justice has shown surprising business qualifications. He has proven himself quite a genius. He has filed a caveat and when he receives his papers he will begin manufacturing a very superior self oscillating gate, which, to say the least, will be quite an improvement on the old-fashioned bars.

In the way of high living I would say that since hog-killing commenced Colos valley can furnish more sausages and head cheese to the square rod than any other place in the county of the same size, and Mr. Editor, as they are about ripe you had better come down.

Mr. H. M. Hawn went down to Hubbard creek the first of the week to lay in his winter supply of meat. He had no trouble in procuring all he wanted of the finest quality of dog salmon.

W. B. Clark a short time since took a trip to Gardiner. While on his way he met with quite an adventure, which came near proving unpleasant, but with his usual good luck escaped without a scratch.

H. M. Hawn and W. K. Caldwell are longing for the 15th of January. The boys are getting dry and when they return to Roseburg to attend the January term of court treat them kindly, for they may need help. We know their failings. J. I. C.

Southern Oregon History.

The youthful emigrant who has been writing to the Portland papers under the non de plume of "Pioneer," with the philanthropic purpose of giving the historical origin of the names of the rivers, creeks, and places in southern Oregon, met from considerable of a rebuff from the pen of Hon. J. W. Nesmith, in the Oregonian of the 23d, in correcting the errors into which the youth had fallen in reference to the names of Josephine, Jump-off Joe, Grave creek and Grant's Pass. Mr. Nesmith states that the first emigrants came to Oregon by the southern route in 1846. A party of Missourians encamped upon the stream now called Grave creek, where a young lady by the name of Crowley died. Her friends made a rough coffin out of a wagon led and buried her in a deep grave on the banks of the creek, under the shade of a pine tree. In 1848 a party of 32 persons, of which Mr. Nesmith was the number, started for the gold fields of California. Some of the number knew the location of Miss Crowley's grave and visited it. The Indians had found the grave and opened it and having nothing but their hands and sticks to dig with, had made an immense pit in the soft and craving earth. The hole they dug was about 25 feet in diameter at the surface and ten feet deep. They called the stream Grave creek, as they knew of no other name for it. Mr. Nesmith says: "The next time I saw the grave was in September, 1853, when I went in command of a detachment of volunteers to reinforce General Lane, after the battle of Evans creek. A few days before our arrival at Grave creek, a party of packers and miners, aided, I think, by Fitzgerald's dragoons, had fought the Indians near the Grave creek house, as Hankness and Toogood's place was called. The carcasses of the defunct aborigines were thrown into the still open pit that the Indians had dug in the disinterment of Miss Crowley. I stood upon the bank and looked down upon the festering mass of "good Indians," out of which stuck arms, heads or legs, in an advanced state of decomposition. The sight was not pleasant and the odor still less so. As I walked away, holding my nose, I thought there was poetic justice in tumbling the carcasses of the red devils into a pit dug by their own hands, in pursuit of their nefarious schemes, and concluded that we had properly called the stream Grave creek."

A Batesville Arkansas dispatch of Nov. 22d says: Yesterday's cyclone in Izard county destroyed La Cross, five miles from Melbourne. Every store and the academy and churches are in ruins. Three persons were killed outright and several seriously injured. Latest reports from Melbourne of the cyclone there state that seventeen persons were injured. Miss Sheffield died today. A citizens meeting here sent a relief committee, headed by Drs. Lawrence and Case, to both towns, and $150 was raised for immediate relief.

A dispatch to the Galveston News, Texas, says: A cyclone last night struck the town of Calmesien, ten miles north of here. Several persons were seriously hurt. The amount of damage to property is unknown.

Thanksgiving—How Observed.

In accordance with President Arthur's and Governor Moody's proclamation and the time honored custom of the people of Roseburg, Thanksgiving was observed on Thursday.

Union services were held in the Presbyterian church at 11 o'clock A. M. An excellent an eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Craig, of the M. E. Church South. Turkey dinners were freely indulged in at the hotels and families throughout the city. Though we cannot boast of turkey at this office, the printers, editor, and devil all seem to have been neglected in this general rejoicing, but then we can boast of an absence of the unpleasant nightmares which attended many of our fellow citizens.

Some of our merchants closed their places of business for a portion of the day. Bright and early at the numerous places where the "ardent" is sold, a steaming bowl of eggnog graced the friendly board, where all were invited to make merry.

The grandest feature of the day was the masquerade ball at Marks' hall, in the evening, where a social dance was engaged in by the masquers until midnight. The costumes were rich and elegant, and showed off the symmetrical forms of some of the masquers to good advantage. Many of the masquers sustained their characters well. The prize for the best sustained female character was awarded to Miss Manie Jones, in the roll of Topsy, which was well merited. The prize for the best sustained male character was awarded to Mr. Slemmons, as Gipsy fortune teller. The music was excellent, furnished by Messrs. Gillam, Langenberg and Lorraine. At twelve o'clock the party unmasked and all present who desired, took part in the dance until the wee small hours in the morning. The large hall was crowded and yet the best of order and good feeling prevailed.

A Batesville Arkansas dispatch of Nov. 22d says: Yesterday's cyclone in Izard county destroyed La Cross, five miles from Melbourne. Every store and the academy and churches are in ruins.
