SNOW AND SUN.
[Mortimer Collins.]
Fast falls the snow, O lady mine!
Sprinkling the lawn with crystals fine;
But, by the gods, we won't repine, While we're together.
We'll chat and rhyme, and kiss and dine, Defying weather.
Sootier the fire, and pour the wine!
And let those wax-green eyes divine Four their love madness into mine!
I don't care whether
'Tis snow, or sun, or rain or shine.
If we're together.

VOL. IX.

ROSEBURG, OREGON, SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1884.

NO. 7.

TWICE BETTER.

If to reflect a light that is divine Makes that which doth reflect it better seen,
And if to see is to condemn the sinner, Twice surely better it had never been;
It had been better for her not to shine,
And for me not to sing. Better, ween, For us to yield no more than radiant bright,
For them, to lack the light than scorn the light.

Build the more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low vaulted past; Let each new temple, nobler than the last, Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast.
Still thou at length art free, Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresisting sea.

Out of all plagues, good Heaven, thy wrath can send,
Save, save, oh save me from the candid friend.

—(George Channing.)

Cocoa and Chocolate.

Many drinkers of these pleasant beverages are unaware as to the method by which the cocoa seeds are obtained.
Cocoa, or cacao, is extracted from the seed of small trees of the genus theobroma, which when cultivated grows from twelve to eighteen feet high, but to a higher elevation in their wild state.
The flowers are small and cluster on the branches and trunk, the matured fruit appearing as though artificially attached. Out of each cluster only one pod is allowed to mature, and this when full grown is from four to seven to ten inches long by three to four inches wide. The five cells contain each a row of from five to ten seeds embedded in a pink acid pulp, the cocoa bean. The tree is indigenous to Mexico, but it can be cultivated within the twenty-fifth parallels of latitude, and thrives at any elevation under two thousand feet, but it requires a rich soil, a warm, humid atmosphere, and protection from cold winds. The trees are propagated from seeds in a nursery until they attain a height of from four to eighteen inches, when they are transplanted and carefully sheltered by planting other trees about them.
They commence to bear about the fifth year, but do not attain maturity until the eighth, and continue yielding fruit for nearly half a century.

There is no special time for harvesting the crop, as the trees continue bearing all the time, flowers and fruit in all stages being curiously borne on the same tree. But in Venezuela the principal gatherings are in June and December. The chocolate is generally made from the finer varieties of cocoa seeds, and was a favorite beverage in Central America long before Columbus discovered the new world. As at present prepared, chocolate is made in cakes, while cocoa is usually sold in powder, flakes, or chocolate. The constituents of the average cocoa seed are as follows: Fat, cocoa butter, 32; nitrogenous compound, 20; starch, 20; cellulose, 2; theobromine, 2; saline substances, 4; water, 10; cocoa red, essential oil, 10.

Big Engineering Schemes.

[Demorest's Monthly.]
In their anxiety to profit by the commerce between Asia and Europe, the English are talking of realizing Capt.
Eads' and scheme of a railway to convey ships overland from one harbor to another. The author of the successful jetty system at the mouth of the Mississippi proposed this scheme as a substitute for the canal which De Lesseps engaged to construct through the isthmus of Panama. Engineers say that Capt. Eads' proposition is entirely practicable. Steamers and ships could be hoisted to the cars on one side of the isthmus and conveyed by steam power, to be launched again on the other side. This would be even more practicable than the long-lying sands of the isthmus of Suez than in the more mountainous regions of Central America. But other schemes are also proposed involving still greater engineering difficulties.

Scientists are now investigating a project for building a great Palestine canal, or rather two connecting canals, one commencing in the bay of Acre, to connect the Mediterranean with the northern end of the valley of the Jordan; the other making use of the depressed gorge of that river and the Dead Sea, ending in the Red Sea. This is said to be a feasible scheme. The youth is probably living who will take ship in an American steamer to carry him across the Atlantic, through the Mediterranean and then over an artificial waterway, where from the deck of a vessel he can look out upon scenery associated with the most marvelous sacred records of the Jewish theocracy and the Christian church.

Feeding the Brain.

[Boston Journal of Chemistry.]
The importance of the brain as a working organ is shown by the amount of blood it receives, which is proportionately greater than that of any part of the body. One-fifth of the blood goes to the brain, though its average weight is only one-fortieth of that of the body. This fact alone would be sufficient to prove that brain workers require more food, and even better food, than mechanics or farm laborers.

A New Pastime.

[Chicago Tribune.]
Down south a new and unique pastime has been invented, which is known as the melon test. A large watermelon is picked out and placed in some shop window, with the announcement that a prize, generally a watch and a chain, will be given to the person who correctly guesses the number of seeds in it. At a recent contest held in Knoxville, Tenn., 4,704 guesses were received from fourteen different states.

Why They Hatched Out.

[San Francisco Bulletin.]
A capital anecdote is told of a little fellow who, in turning over the leaves of a scrap-book, came across the well-known picture of some chickens just out of their shell. "My companion examined the picture carefully, and then, with a grave, sagacious look at me, slowly remarked: 'They come out 'cos they was afraid of being boiled.'" horse population of the United States is now over 11,000,000, or about one horse to every five humans.

THE UNLUCKY NUMBER.

A Superstitious Old Gentleman's Search for a Room at a New York Hotel.

[Boston Budget.]

There are a great many people in this world who think that the life of a hotel clerk is all sunshine, and that he has little else to do but to dress well and display huge "head lights" on his shirt front, condescending occasionally during the day or evening to accommodate a weary traveler with a room on the upper story at the rate of $3 or $4 per day. This in a great many cases is a mistake, as the following instance will show:

A well-known, wealthy, but very superstitious New Yorker stepped up to the office of the Westminister hotel, New York, on Friday last, and inquired of Mr. Evans, the clerk, for a room to let for the coming fall and winter.

"Yes, sir," said the major. "Shall I show you what we have?"

"If you please," was the reply.
He was shown No. 13, which room was about what he wanted, but the price he thought was "too high." The clerk proposed a compromise which seemed to rather catch the old gentleman, for he must have been at least 65 years old, but when about to close the bargain he espied the number—13—on the door and broke out with:

"Why, this is No. 13! I wouldn't occupy that room if you gave it to me for nothing, that's an unlucky number."

The clerk, who could scarcely refrain from laughing, proposed that he look at some others, to which he consented.
He was shown, unfortunately, the room No. 49 on the same floor, which, after a glance at the number, before the door was opened, he said:

"That won't do, either."

"Well, why?" said the major, "you haven't as yet seen the room. How do you know until you have seen it?"

"Don't you see that number?" said the old gentleman, "4 and 9 make 13; I wouldn't sleep in that room one night for $1,000."

When the O. G. came in sight of the number he objected to going any farther, saying in a rather subdued tone, "Why, that is like the others."

"Oh, no; this room is entirely different," said the clerk, "it is the only one in the house that is not haunted."

By his caller, who now changed his tone to a rather angry pitch, exclaiming, "Why, man, don't you see that number 53?
Five and eight make thirteen. You couldn't hire me to occupy that room."

"Hold on, sir," said Major Swope.
"Be seated, and let us figure this thing out," and while the old crank was resting, and in all probability harassed with the thought of his being a doomed man, the clerk discovered that he couldn't let him either of the two rooms he looked at.

"Yes, sir," said the major, "I 58, 55, 67, 76, 157, 571, 391, 139, 319, 931, 913, 310, 211, 112 or 121. He thereupon turned to his Crankiness and showed him the result of his figuring. "Now," said the major, "I'll tell you what I'll do, we will change the number of the door of any room you may select."

"Oh, no," said our O. G., "bad luck never leaves any house or room that has once been numbered 13."

"That settles it," said Mr. Swope, "you certainly are not a member of the Thirteenth regiment, are you?"

Where, sir, and abruptly started for the office, after having spent about half an hour in a fruitless effort to let a room.

A Visit to Mormon Zion.

[Salt Lake Cor. Inter Ocean.]
In an hour and a half the train rolls into the celebrated Mormon Mecca, or, as they call it, Zion, with its broad, clean streets, and a lot of young men and some fond parents and a few or two from the fort and a dozen or so transient visitors, a couple of hundred in all. I was surprised at finding so many cultivated and delightful "Gentles" residing here. Of the population of 25,000 there are about 6,000 who are not Mormons, and a few of them are merchants and bankers and professional men and their families, forming among themselves a congenial society. The rest of the population is a mass of ignorance, ugliness, and fanaticism. An entire absence of any interesting feature in the community is the first thing that impresses you. They are not even blessed with eccentricities in dress or behavior, nor spiced with viciousness as one might expect. Flat, stupid and staring may portray the mass of Mormon society here. I doubt if you would meet in any other city on the globe as uniform ugliness and want of intellect depicted on the faces of men and women as here.

Legend of the Nightingale.

[Boston Budget.]
The nightingale's habit of singing at night, and the imaginary sadness of its song, are accounted for by a legend to the effect that in ancient days the nightingale and the blind woman had only one eye apiece. The bird borrowed the reptile's eye in order to go with it to rest to a feast, and afterwards refused to restore it. The blind woman vowed vengeance on its perfidious friend.
Consequently, the nightingale is afraid to go to sleep at night lest the blindwoman should attack it during its slumber. And in order to keep itself awake it sings, resting its breast against a thorn, the pain caused by which renders its singing sad.

How the "Friends" Marry.

[Chicago Times.]
At a Quaker wedding in church at Philadelphia last week, the pair took their places on the lowest tier of the pulpit, and the bride and groom were two elderly ladies, attired in the Quaker garb. The groomsmen and bridesmaids sat in front of the congregation, facing the couple and their sponsors. Then the groom rose and, clasping the hand of the bride, who also stood up, said, in the presence of the Lord and this assembly, I take Deborah Brown to be my wife—promising, with divine assistance, to be unto her a faithful and loving husband until death shall separate us. The voice of the bride repeated the words. The pair sat down, when the marriage certificate was read and then carried to the altar upon a small table in the raised seats.
From there the groomsmen raised and carried the table to the front of the bride and groom, who signed the certificate which lay upon it. The table and certificate were restored to their places, and the Quaker wedding was over.

Actors and Theatres.

[Joachim Miller.]
How many actors and actresses are there in these United States? Why, the figures would startle you. We have 4,000 theatres, big and little, good and bad. More than all Europe. Think of that. Of course this number includes music halls, lecture halls, and all such places, which sometimes serve those whom Shakespeare set down as "The brief and abstract chronicles of the time."

Sailors' Superstitions Concerning Finlanders.

[London Daily Telegraph.] Indeed marine superstitions should not be hard to kill, for they are not very numerous. A large number have been falsely on sailors by land writers, but they want the true ring, the salt flavor is lacking, and it is easy to perceive that their narrators never were aloft.
The really nautical superstition is unmistakable. It is born of the sea-faring life and the spirit of it speaks as surely of blue water and the association together for months at a time of briny
