He wears the military cross of honor, and delights to talk about what he had gone through during the war. To add to his meager pension he sells a small pamphlet containing a full description of his wounds, and of the apparatus that has been so skillfully devised as to render him at least presentable to his fellow creatures.

Dickens in 1842.

[Ben: Perley Poore.] Charles Dickens, when he first visited Washington in 1842, was just entering his 20th year. He was a middle-sized somewhat fleshy person, and he wore a brown frock coat, a red-figured vest and and chain. His hair, which was long and dark, grew low upon the brow, had treated gradually from the eyes, without any marked protuberance, save at the outer angle, the upper portion of which formed a prominent ridge a little within their sockets. The aperture of the lids was not large, nor the eye uncommonly clear or bright, but quick, moist and expressive. The nose was slightly aquiline, the mouth of moderate dimensions, makig no great display of the teeth, the facial muscles occasionally drawing the as the mouth opened in speaking. Hiand more intelligence than beauty.

Brevity Is the Soul of Wit.

Baltimorean.] The following amusing story, which was told by Franklin, ought to be read and acted upon by all correspondents communicating their thoughts to the newspaper press. A young man, on commencing business, proposed to paint over his shop window, "John Thompson, hatter, makes and sells hats for ready money," to which was added the sign of a hat.

One friend suggested that, as he make and sold hats, the word "hatter was unnecessary. It was therefore struck out and the sign remained, "John Thompson makes and sells hats for ready money.' Another friend advised him to omit the phrase "for ready money," as there would occur occasions for selling on credit; and so the sign read: "John Thompson makes and sells hats." It was then hinted the buyer of the hat did not care who made it, and that the sign would be better if it read: "John Thompson sells hats." But another amputation was in store still, for a critic pointed out the uselessness of the phrase "sells hats," for, said he, "no one would ever suppose that the hats were to be given away for nothing." Thus, at last, this aspiring tradesman commenced business, like many worthy successors, under the modest sign of "John Thompson."

Camphor for Cholera.

[Medical Journal.] Dr. Dudgeon, the famous homeopathist physician of London, recalls the fact-apropos of Koch's investigations into the nature of the cholera germthat Hahnemann in 1831 suggested that the contagious matter of cholera consisted of "excessively minute invisible living creatures," and accordingly advised the free use of camphor, which he held to be a potent cholera bacilicideto the efficacy of which treatment, adds Dr. Dudgeon, the statistics of every
