foreman of the gang. By sheer hard work he earned promotion after promotion, in turn becoming conductor, paymaster, assistant superintendent, chief superintendent of a division, assistant general manager, and then general manager. This position was tendered him in 1865. He was not a man of liberal or even a common school education, but one of practical ideas, sound com-mon sense, and judgment. He knew every round of the ladder, and for that reason was an excellent manager of men. No one was ever more admired and respected by those under him. His is a remarkable case, but still it is only one out of many similar instances.

The section hand belongs to the lowest stratum of railroad employes, and yet he is, to a great extent, a skilled laborer. Although his work is of a routine nature, still he must have the intelligence to meet any emergency in his path of duty, and be able to overcome difficulties. This department of a railroad is one of the most important, for the condition of the road depends upon the work done by the men in it, from the assistant engineer of a division down to the humble spikedriver. For information concerning these workmen Assistant Engineer Alex. T. Gest, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was interviewed yesterday afternoon.

"We have on this division about eight hundred men who have immediate supervision over the tracks," said he. "There are four divisions on the road, out I could not say how many such nen are employed. In this division here are five supervisors, each of whom ave under their charge from twelve to ourteen subdivisions, and each subdivision is in the care of a foreman, who has a gang of track hands, varying in number from seven to twelve.

"A foreman, when picking a gang, takes the best and most experienced men. If I see ten men carrying a fivenundred-pound rail I get at the opinion that it is about time six of them were feet long. That is the work the green hands are put at until they get over their awkwardness, learn how to be spry, and quit falling over each other's hammers, shovels, and other tools.

"Fastening on the connecting bars between the rails is very particular work and requires care. The expansion and contraction of rails must be considered, and they are laid accordingly for winter and summer temperatures. Frogs and switches require painstaking and must be properly adjusted. Then besides track-hands we have watchmen. There are sixty men doing this sort of duty at night between here and Altoona, and juite a number by day, as at Horse-shoe and other special places. The watchman goes along the track after every passenger train and examines every bar. bolt, rail and switch. If there is anything wrong he reports it to the nearest telegraph office to the foreman of the subdivision, who always lives along the track, and, if he has not time to notify anyone, he displays a red light or flag. Red always means danger and white, all right.
"The tunnels are all similarly watched, a man going ahead of every train. A good section hand has a chance of being promoted to a gang boss or a foreman at a salary of from $50 to $60 a month. As these foremen generally live in the country, this is good pay. They have few expenses, and a great many of them own their own house and four or five acres of ground to raise vegetables. Then, an intelligent foreman will be advanced. Many of the best railroad men of this country have started where they are.' -Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Men Who Mend and Keep Safe the Iron Highways.

Since the death of General Manager S. S. Merrill, of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, and the publication of his history, a very humble class of railroad employes has been made the subject of much inquiry. They are those who attend to the general track repairs of a railroad line. To show their possibilities it is cited that Mr. Merrill, in fifteen years time, rose from the position of section hand to general manager of one of the most prosperous at least, the blessing of ease from pain. manager of one of the most prosperous roads in this country. The Black Hills tin region is found to be much larger than was supposed.

Catarrh is a muco-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite ameba in the internal lining membrane of the cose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: Morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscie of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxomea, from the retention of the effete matter of the skin, suppressed porspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a coastant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back of throat, causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustaclian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness; usurping the proper structure of the brenchial tubes, ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

Many attempts have been made to discover a cure for this distressing disease by the use of inhalents and other ingenious devices, but none of these treatments can do a particle of good until the parasites are either destroyed or removed from the mucous tissue.

Some time since a well known physician of forty years standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessany combination of ingredients which never falls in absolutely and peymanently eradicating this horrible disease, whether standing for one year or forty years. Those who may be suffering from the above disease should, without delay, communicate with the managers, Messrs A. H. ENGLISH COOKING. An Expert Declares That, in Cookery, the English Excel.

After a long experience of the cuisine Francaise and of American cooking and of English cooking, I have arrived at the conclusion that the last named is the most succulent, substantial and health-bestowing of any other in the world. English chops, steaks, kidneys, baked potatoes, roast beef, boiled salmon, plum pudding and Cheshire cheese are exactly the groundwork required by man—at least Saxon man—to form the physical basis of the corthe conclusion that the last named is cheese are exactly the groundwork required by man—at least Saxon man—to form the physical basis of the corporeal existence. French dishes tickle the palate, but they do not lay healthy the palate, but they do not lay healthy flesh on the bones, calm the nerves and make pure blood. These desiderata are attained by a steady course of British feeding. In proof of what I say, one has only to take a walk at any hour of the day in Hyde Park and watch the promenaders there. As specimens of the human animal, the varied nationalities whose aristograms one mosts in the ties whose aristocracy one meets in the verdant lanes and smooth esplanades of that beauteous greenery, all yield the palm to John Bull and his woman kind, palm to John Bull and his woman kind, with their bright eyes, rosy cheeks and splend d physical developme t. Moral of all this: Eat plenty of "cast beef and juicy steak, boiled mutton, plain boiled potatoes, bread a day old, and simple suet puddings. Avoid hashes (whose nourishing qualities have all departed in the recooking), lobster salads, meals of the innutritie is oyster alone, hot rells, newly-baked bread, rich pastry, candy and watery soups. In America we have no national cuisine, but the choice of all the cuisines of the but the choice of all the enisines of the world is at hand, and therefore there is no reason why a perfectly healthy diet should not be selected by every individual. — Olive Logan.

-The University of rennsylvania has started a "department of physical culture." Dr. J. W. White, who will preside over it, states that his duties will be to examine each student, note wherein he needs physical development, and recommend the proper mode of exercise to induce it. If his back is weak, the rowing machine or boat is advised; if the chest is flat, parallel bars are in order. The ordinary trainer generally picks out for the boat a man who does not need it.—Philadelphia Press. GENERAL GORDON.

races; he had Francis Xavier's overmastering love of humanity. But with these traits were combined a chivalrous devotion to the races for whom he labored, with a contempt for the statesmanship of Europe, an unquestioning reliance upon the law of his own conscience, and an intense religious nature that reflected at once the mysticism of the middle ages, the austere virtues of Puritanism and the fatalism of the East. A man of commanding genius in achieving great results by means of insig-nificant instrumentalities, and in con-ciliating the prejudices and overcoming the resistance of barbaric hordes, he was at once a hero among men, and a solitary figure removed from them by unique characteristics. There is, perhaps, no other country in the world where such a character as General Gordon's would be so easily misunderstood as England. His som-bre genius, his mediæval piety and his devotion to the interest of semi-civilized races, had little in common with the in-tensely practical instincts of the Nation. His contempt for the tedious processes of diplomacy, and his indifference to the fate of ministries and the policy of governments, marked him out as a mysterious idealist, whose judgment was not to be accepted without hesitation and reserve. He returned from China to face a storm of obloquy and reproach from the humanitarians who mistook him for a cold-blooded butcher of the Chinese population. His work in the equatorial provinces and his battles with the slave-hunters were neither understood nor appreciated by Englishmen, while he incurred the hostility of the ring of pachas at Cairo through his administrative reforms. At Mauritius, in Basuto-Land and in India he found it impossible to endure official restraint. His mission to South Africa was a compl te failure, and it was not until as an arbitrator he had personally decided that China should not declare war against Russia that the English people began to comprehend the genius of this grim Puritan warrior. His roving commission as miracle worker in the Soudan was regarded at first with enthusiasm, but the moment he arved at Khartoum every proclamatio that he issued, every proposal that he made, was criticised and misconstrued. The Government which had dispatched him across the desert refused to follow his advice. The humanitarians denounced him as the slaveholder's ally. Practical politicians condemned his nomination of Zebehr as his successor as the act of a fanatical madman.

But even Englishmen awoke at last to a consciousness of General Gordon's heroic qualities. For nearly a year that solitary European has held his ground against a horde of barbarians. He has raised armies and paid them without money. He has conducted a marvel-lous campaign by promising liberty to several thousands of blacks and by mounting rusty artillery on a fleet of leaking hulks. He has stood on the broken rampant, a solitary English sentry refusing to desert those who had trusted in him, and awaiting an army of rescuers which never came. And there he will remain in the memory of the nation - a sublime figure, never to Rev. Jas. L. Pierce, Oxford, Ga.
