GENERAL GRANT.

Is the Old Hero Dying Because of Medical Intolerance?

The American Homœopathist has an article on the treatment of General Grant by the Allopaths, in which it says:

"General Washington was murdered by his medical attendants; but at least they were heroically—too heroically—endeavoring to extinguish the disease. Their brutality was of the active sort, and in purpose commendable, though disastrous in result. General Garfield was maltreated for months under an error of diagnosis, and at last escaped beyond the reach of his eminent torturers. Here, also, there was much medical heroism and activity displayed, albeit misdirected. Other illustrious patients have suffered from eminence in the profession; but General Grant seems reserved as a shining example of the cold-blooded expectancy. To him the little group of eminence have nothing to offer but a diagnosis. For him they propose no relief but in the grave. Ignoring the only source of therapeutic salvation, they gather round his bedside to observe his unaided struggle. The fiat has gone forth that nothing can be done; and nothing will be permitted to be done. Those who question such a decision are quacks and cranks; but who ought not to be proud of such a designation from such a source? Scholarly, refined, cultured, earnest gentlemen as they are, of what avail are all these good qualities in presence of such therapeutic bankruptcy? On the contrary, while so-called scientific medicine is to the fore, well may the daily papers announce in startling headlines, 'A Bad Day for General Grant—Seven Doctors in Consultation.'"

Yes, the hero of Appomattox is dying!

He who knew no fear in war, knows no fear in suffering. His quiet fortitude wins universal admiration.

President Lincoln, in visiting a hospital during the late war, noticed a poor Confederate boy, mortally wounded. With his native tenderness he put his arms around his neck in sympathy. The sight melted the hospital to tears.

The heart of the American people in like manner bleeds for Grant, the silent sufferer. It would have him get well, by any effective means.

His physicians say he cannot recover. They fill him with anodynes, but despite their favorable bulletins he is daily growing worse.

A specialist who has won reputation in the treatment of cancer visits his bedside. The opposition he encounters from the attending physicians brings painfully to mind the story of the dog in the manger.

And General Grant perhaps must die because of this intolerance! Is it possible that there is no hope of cure outside of the medical profession?

Preposterous!

For years medical men insisted that certain fevers were incurable, but Chincona proved the contrary. For centuries they have protested that certain renal disorders were incurable and yet a special preparation has cured and permanently cured the very worst cases.

Why may it not be possible in like manner to cure a case of cancer? B. F. Larabee of Boston, was doomed to death by many eminent Boston physicians. J. B. Henion, M. D., of Rochester, N. Y., was given up by the best doctors of all schools. Elder J. S. Prescott of Cleveland, Ohio, was gravely informed by them that he could not live, and yet these men and thousands like them have been cured and cured permanently of serious kidney disorders by a remedy not officially known to the code.

What has been done may be done again.

General Anson Stager died of Bright's disease in Chicago last week. "Joe" Goss, the Boston pugilist, died of it. Hundreds of thousands of people perish of it every year while in their doctors' hands. The cause of death may be called blood poisoning, paralysis, heart-disease, convulsions, apoplexy, pneumonia, or some other common ailment, but the real difficulty is in the kidneys. Physicians know it, but they conceal the fact from their patients, realizing their inability to cure by any "authorized" means. The remedy that cured Larabee and Henion and Prescott (i. e., Warner's safe cure) is a special independent discovery. Its record entitles it to recognition, and it gets it from intelligent people. Its manufacturers have an unsullied reputation and are entitled to as great consideration as any school of physicians.

Professor R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean of the United States Medical College of New York City, rises above professional prejudice, and on its personally proved merits alone gives it several pages of the warmest commendation in his published works—the only instance on record of a high professional indorsement of such a preparation.

The unprejudiced people do not want General Grant to die. If there is in all nature or any where in the world a remedy or a man able to cure his cancer give them a chance.

Will they do it?

No.

Why?

It is not too often the case that many excellent physicians who are greatly devoted to the code, would prefer that their patients should die rather than that they should recover health by the use of any remedy not recognized under their code?

CANCER CURED.

I have had a cancer on my face for many years. I have tried a great many remedies, but without relief. I almost gave up hope of ever being cured. Dr. Hardman, my son, recommended Swift's Specific, which I have taken with great results. My face is now well, and it is impossible for me to express my thanks in words for what this medicine has done for me. MRS. OLIVE HARDMAN.
Monroe, Ga., Sept. 2, 1884.

Swift's Specific has cured a cancer on my face, and has almost made a new man of me. T. J. TEATE, Waciasa, Fla.

I have had a cancer in my right ear for three years. I tried every remedy the physicians practiced, to no permanent good. Swift's Specific has wrought wonders for me. It is the best blood purifier in the world. JOHN S. MORROW, Florence, Ala.

Swift's Specific is entirely vegetable, and seems to cure cancers by forcing out the impurities from the blood.

HUNTLEY, REX.

The Creator of Spoopendyke, Now King of the Teton Sioux, Willing to do the Fair Thing by the United States.

Stanley Huntley, editor of Drake's Traveler's Magazine, and just advanced to the position of Chief of the Teton Nation, having been adopted by them years ago when among the Indians in the capacity of correspondent, is preparing to leave for the Sioux country. He bought ten cents' worth of war-paint and a pair of moccasins yesterday, and will start as soon as the walking improves. He had the moccasins charged in the name of Waukpey Wankan, or Holy Leaf, as his name signifies in the Sioux language. The name was derived from the fact that he cured a wounded Indian chief called Little Knife by applying leaves and oil.

"What does the pale-face want?" asked the new chief as a reporter of the World entered his wigwam yesterday.

"To know how the big medicine man cured Little Knife," was the reply.

"I had to cure him," said Mr. Huntley, smiling. "I was held prisoner by Sitting Bull's allies, and it was cure Little Knife or die. No cure no life. The chief had two sons. One was killed awhile ago and Young Antelope has just died. As I was adopted by Little Knife, the hereditary chief of the Teton Nation, which includes all the Sioux tribes, the title falls to me. The Indians regard the tie as sacred as though I was a blood relation."

Mr. Huntley sent the following to the President:

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Hon. Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States—Dear Sir: As you will observe by the dispatches in this morning's New York papers, I have succeeded to the chieftainship of the Tetons, and I want to ask you whether your nation and mine are to live on terms of friendly equality or whether you want strife and carnage.

I would like to remark that we will have war on tap for any marauding Republican form of Government that comes fooling around our Congressional District, while we will be on a peace footing toward your people so long as they conduct themselves with due regard to the prejudices of civilization. Any deviation from this course of proceedure will result in your being sent to the tower for the first offense and to two towers for the second.

Please speak to your Secretary of the Interior and have him brace up the rations issued to my tribes so as to include an occasional ham and a mackerel for Sunday. Any cast off war material, plug hats, or light literature now on file in your State Department will be gracefully received as a guarantee of your good faith.

Hoping to hear from you soon in a spirit of peace around the reservations and good will toward the undersigned, I have the honor to remain, yours, STANLEY HUNTLEY, REX.

Mr. Huntley allowed his eyes to wander to some Indian relics on the wall above his desk. Among other things was a feathered coronet that he wore when a young buck among his newfound friends. He continued: "I am afraid to assume the emblems of the new dignity while in the city until Mr. O'Donovan kicks out, because he don't want kings or chiefs outside of himself; that's why you see these old plumes and moccasins there. It would take me four days to tell all my experiences among the Indians, besides I have forgotten most of it now."

"Have you been officially notified of your advancement?"

"The first I heard of it was when I read the morning papers to-day. I shall take the cigar-man across the street along with me. He has just sent me a bill, and I suppose I must make him chief of one of the tribes."

Early in the day Mr. Huntley sent out for four bricks, and placed one under each leg of his chair as a mark of distinction. His reputation heretofore has rested on two great efforts of his life. The first was during the Chicago riots, when he coined the expression: "The pale air was streaked with blood and the gutters gushed with gurgling gore." The other effort was, "The Spookendyke Papers," which were printed in a Brooklyn paper. His object in getting the bricks yesterday was to have a more enduring foundation.—N. Y. World.

A HINT TO BUILDERS.

Over-Ornamentation in Brickwork Condemned by a Connoisseur.

"The desire for the ornate has given rise of late to the most elaborate and fantastic attempts in bricks and in the methods of putting them together," said a real estate agent yesterday. "In many cases of newly built houses this matter has frequently been the occasion for the display of bad taste in the erection of a cheap, flashy and wonderfully designed wall. While this, when new, is not unsightly to the average eye, the wear and tear of the elements on the various projections, niches, balconies and the like render the exterior appearance of such a house much more unsightly in a given time than that of a building of a more substantial and less startling appearance.

"The various projections and recesses form a convenient place for dust and dirt constantly blown about, and to add to this damage the ornamental brickwork of the cornices offers a snug abode for that numerous little pest, the English sparrow. When the white deposit, so common to brick buildings, makes its appearance the dinginess and general air of past glory and damaged splendor is increased. If builders would only recognize the fact that the effort spent in this direction would be better appreciated if directed toward the interior finish of a house the result would be advantageous in many ways.—Philadelphia Press.

Contentment.

Contentment is illustrated by a story told of a house in Denver. On a certain street is a stone mansion of surpassing elegance, which, with its grounds, cost nearly $1,000,000. Directly opposite, on a vacant lot, is a tent, boarded up inside as far as the angle of the roof. The back end of it is pierced with a stovepipe, and in the front end a door and window. In the window hangs a curtain of costly lace and in the tent is a piano of exquisite tone. The tent itself did not cost over $20. The piano, upholstery, and furniture inside are said to have cost over $3,000. The owner planted his tent here over twenty-five years ago, and is one of the moderately successful Colorado miners, being worth about $50,000. He prefers his tent to any dwelling house, and says he would not exchange it for Windsor Castle.

—He had a crowd around him on the Campus Martius, and when he had placed his toothache-cure on the board before him and got his lamp brightly burning, he said: "Gentlemen, the last time I was in your fair city some one hit me with an egg. I sincerely—" At that instant a turnip, thrown by some one in the outer circle, struck the man's hat and carried it ten feet away. He reached out his hand for it and continued: "Thank you! I was going to say that I preferred turnips to eggs, but would it be asking too much of you to boil them first?"—Detroit Free Press.

A SALESMAN'S NARROW ESCAPE.

To sell goods appears to be easy business, especially when the goods are so beautiful and attractive as to seem almost to sell themselves. But there are duties and responsibilities connected with the life of a head-salesman in a great establishment, of which the casual shopper has very little idea. One of the largest houses in the artistic porcelain and glass business not long ago came near losing its chief salesman. Had he died, as it was expected he would, his place would have been a very difficult one to fill. His escape from death was indeed a very narrow one.

When our editorial correspondent recently called on Mr. Alonzo Clark, he found him surrounded by all manner of tasteful elegancies in china and bric-a-brac, in the spacious salesrooms of the well-known house of Davis, Collamore & Co., Broadway and Twenty-first Sts., New York. Mr. Clark is a somewhat spare and sinewy gentleman of about 40 or over. He carries with him the marks of a severe tussle with disease, but shows, both in his countenance and his actions, that he won the victory.

We will let Mr. Clark tell his own story:

"My trouble," he said, "was chiefly with my lungs and throat. Originally I had a good constitution, and came of a healthy family, my mother having reached the advanced age of 82, and being still an active woman. During the war I could endure long marches and severe fatigue, and could lie on the ground at night without being attacked by rheumatism. My first sickness was four years ago in a malarious region in Connecticut. The malaria got the better of me, and laid the foundation for catarrh and all the other evils I have been afflicted with.

"About a year and a half ago I caught a severe cold. My lungs became inflamed, and my whole system was prostrated. Soon I showed all the symptoms of consumption. I was entirely disabled and unfit to attend to business. I was in the care of one of the best known physicians in the city, and one of the most expensive ones. But physicians could do little in reaching my case. The nearest they came to finding out what was the matter with me was when they told me that if I had any business affairs to settle, to see about it as early as possible, as I could not last long. It was understood at the store that I must die, and that my place would have to be supplied by somebody else. My weight, which had been 137, ran down to 110. Yet I had a firm courage, with a sure hope that somehow or other I would recover.

"After I got rid of the doctors, who had given me up to die, I got a little better and was able to drag myself down to the store. A couple of lady customers spoke to me about Compound Oxygen, and advised me to go to the New York office of Starkey & Palen, and see Dr. Turner about it. I knew nothing about this remedy, but concluded to try it, just on a venture. On taking a few inhalations at Dr. Turner's office, I was surprised at the effect on me. It seemed a light matter to inhale something which was without taste or odor; but certainly it did me a great deal of good. My benefit began at once. I soon was able to walk up and down stairs. I took one "home treatment," which lasted me for three months; then I got a second. My appetite returned and my sleep was good. When I first visited Dr. Turner, I had not for months slept in a bed. I had been compelled to take such sleep as I could get by reclining in a chair. My feet and ankles were badly swelled, and I seemed in all respects to be getting ready for the undertaker. After taking the Oxygen awhile I began to enjoy refreshing sleep for two or three hours at a time; I could lie in bed and obtain rest and comfort by doing so.

"I will here say that I have found great advantage in the use of the nose-piece inhaler for my catarrh. I inhaled directly through the nostrils, with the best effect. A yellowish pulpy secretion had been coming both from nose and throat. The effect of the Compound Oxygen was to cause this to stop, and with it, the pain and unpleasant sensations I had been feeling in my head.

"Soon I found myself, to my great delight, able to attend to business, as of old. I had not all my former strength, nor could I expect it. But I was rapidly gaining, and have kept on gaining ever since. All last winter I was on duty except a few of the wettest and most slushy days, when I thought it prudent to stay in the house. I have been able to attend to my regular business, and am now. Of course I am careful of myself. I do not expose myself to storms. I walk with ease a few blocks every day, and hat without experiencing any great sense of fatigue."

"Mr. Clark, do you still continue the treatment or are you independent of it?"

"Once in awhile if I have a slight return of throat trouble, I take few inhalations, and with positive advantage. I do not now need to take it for catarrh, for my catarrh is all gone, to my great relief. I consider myself as thoroughly cured as I can be. I have gained most of my lost flesh back again, and am increasing. Of course I do not expect ever to be very stout."

"Are you, then, a believer in Compound Oxygen as a restorer of health?"

"Believe? Why, yes; most thoroughly and heartily. I cannot say too much for it. You cannot wonder that I have lost all confidence in the old systems. They could do nothing for me but tell me I was going to die, and they blundered when they told me that. Compound Oxygen brought me to what you see me now, and did it after they had failed. Yes; you may say that I believe in Compound Oxygen, and that I recommend everybody who is situated as I was to make a fair trial of it. I don't know what they make it of, and I don't care; all that I know about it is that it pulled me through. That's enough for me."

Compound Oxygen is not an experiment. It is tried and true. Hundreds of others give similar testimony to that of Mr. Clark. Many of those who have experienced the best benefits from it are those whom the old-fashioned doctors had given up. To learn all about Compound Oxygen, send to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 & 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, for a deeply interesting little work on the subject, which will be sent you by mail.

Above all other earthly ills,
I hate the big, old-fashioned pills;

A Pleasant Purgative, and small;
Just try them as you feel their need,
