

ROSEBURG REVIEW.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1885.

A LEADING FAULT.

A correspondent of the Albany Democrat points out the fact that if Gov. Moody were to call an extra session of the Legislature and the Democratic members would not attend there would be no quorum and consequently no business. We trust that if the Governor so far forgets every principle of justice as to call an extra session that the Democratic members will attend. Nothing is ever gained by serving your party better than your country. But beyond this, there is a great fault for Gov. Moody to consider. From such a proposition as the Democrat's correspondent makes, the Governor will evidently be enabled to see something of the genuineness of the opposition to the extra session. It would be an outrage upon the people whose money it would squander. It would be a partisan move so plain and contemptible as to ever cast a stain upon the Governor's fair record. It would be an insult to the intelligence of the people of Oregon and would not go unrebuked at the polls. It is so uncalculated and such a low political job that several of the more respectable of the Republican papers disavowance it. If Gov. Moody should call an extra session let the Democratic members attend and stand united on one proposition that Z. F. Moody should not be the recipient of the stolen goods! Act fairly, honestly and honorably and appoint a senator and be satisfied.

A Re-united Country.

While listening to the simple and joyous melodies of the Nashville Students last week our mind wandered back to the olden days when these people were the children of bondage. We thought of the wild and excessive sympathy which stirred the soul of John Brown; of the heartfelt enthusiasm that inspired the tongue of Wendell Phillips. The stirring invectives of Garrison and Sumner came to mind mingled with the political presence of the great Seward. Lincoln's kind and homely face, with its great wrinkles of pity and sorrow stood out in massive relief. For an instant we wandered to the coffin of him who yet lies in state—the great leader of the sword—U. S. Grant. Fancy clustered the scenes of olden days together from the first whisperings of abolitionism up through the grand eloquence of the clash of arms! The defeated were there too. Lee, with his manly and great attributes, the idol of a lost cause. Stone wall Jackson as he passed out of the great strife to "rest under the shade of the trees." Yancey ever the typical fire-eater of the south with his magic eloquence, and in the background, the firm-cut, classic features of the great logician—John C. Calhoun. Out from the contest of arms, out of the settlement of the inevitable conflict we came to look upon our country to-day. We see it united and in a vigorous strength. We see the old sectional lines wiped out. There is no longer any South or North as in years gone by. The victor and the vanquished have shaken hands in sacred fellowship over a re-united country. The hero of the North has become the hero of the South. Around the bier of Grant the confederate bows his head with as much tenderness and respect as he who in the olden time followed the hero from Donelson, Vicksburg, Shiloh on to Richmond. And why not? It was the one sole and single issue of slavery that caused the war. It has been wiped from the face of the civilized world and those who were blind have received the light. The dead past should bury its dead. Its dead are the animosities, prejudices and the wicked institution that caused the war. But the past must ever live green in the hearts of Americans. It must be sung in songs of transcendent glory, the minstrel-boy must strike his sublimest notes, history must glow as though recounting the splendor of a fabled age. The wreaths of laurel must be twined by the hands of genius to place upon the brows of the victor. The lessons of moderation, of quiet faith and exalted patriotism must live forever and burn into the hearts of our youth!

A JOOOSE SHEEP.

The editor of the Times Jacksonville comes back on our editor pro tem for our article on the Josephine County Court House. The editor and pro tem of the REVIEW were both out of town at the time and it was our hilarious and humorous devil who was struck by the "joose" reflections of the ever witty and brilliant faber pusher of the Times. The merry, jesting, sprightly, facetious, jocundity of the Times in saying, that Mr. Abraham's had "captured" a Court House was highly appreciated by the said devil and as a master-stroke of wit he thought it was entitled to the bakery. We are pleased to note that the Times did not mean to cast any "imputations on any one, not even Mr. Abraham's." For a bit of humor this is rich and the devil, in the jocundity of his jocularity showed his appreciation in the humorous conceit of our last edition. Hereafter we will rank the Times with the Texas Siftings and the Detroit Free Press. But we can hardly refrain from suggesting that he should label his jokes.

SENATOR DOLPH MAKES A SPEECH

On the return of Senator Dolph from Alaska he was invited to address the Board of Trade in Portland on the general condition of home affairs. The suggestions of the Senator were all sensible if not new. And it seems a pleasure to the Portland Board of Trade to have some one now and then tell them what the possibilities are of the Columbia river and of Oregon if only we were a manufacturing people. We concede all that may be said on this point. But Senator Dolph might have said we are all a race of gamblers, and whenever an opportunity offers to take chances in pools and schemes for rapid fortunes, Portland men of wealth by no means stand back. The Senator, with the balance took a lively interest in the Villard pools and as usual, sooner or later, with gamblers, the lucky non-residents stripped Portland of several millions of money. It seems all right that those who gamble should lose. Had the wealthy men of Portland put one-fourth of those lost means into manufactures, our state to-day would have no hard times. Consumers would have been added to our population by thousands and our home market for all products would have increased beyond measure. Business in this line would have shut out the California supply and Oregon would stand more self-sustaining than ever before. There is no better wheat than Oregon produces, and had she the Chicago or St. Louis Board of Trade in her midst to aid the forming of industries, markets would be had at good prices for all we can produce. There is no valid reason that can be imagined why Oregon should lose the large English market for her wheat. Our farmers have never had the help to retain it that other cities through their Boards of Trade have given to surrounding farmers. And now our English market is uncertain. A live, active and faithful Board of Trade would have saved that market to Oregon. Mr. Dolph cannot tell this too often or too soon to the Portland Board of Trade. A more near-sighted city is not to be found anywhere, and if there is any one far-sighted enough to point out the way to future success by all means hear him. One thing mentioned by Mr. Dolph gratified us very much. He spoke of the successful completion of the Nicaragua canal and of its great benefit in shortening up the distance from the Pacific to New York and Liverpool. This would make a great difference in tonnage in favor of Oregon exports as well as imports. But there was one matter in this connection not mentioned by Mr. Dolph. It is a known fact that the lumber products of the east are failing very fast. A new field for timber is now being looked out by eastern capitalists, and they are found on the Pacific slope in search of this supply. There is no other field except that north of Mendocino on the Pacific ocean. Oregon, with her vast forests of timber will open the market for the world. Her timber is superior to that further north and of a greater variety. Her white cedar and myrtle, found nowhere else in the world, have no competitors in woods for excellence of texture and quality. Her fir, spruce, hemlock, maple, ash, alder, and many other varieties are abundant and awaiting a market. Open the Nicaragua or the Panama canal and at once our timber lands come into market, and Oregon would become one of the largest exporters of lumber that our nation has ever had. There is a secret seal upon the action of the last Senate in regard to the Nicaragua canal that we hope to see removed. That it is in the interest of commerce we declare for both Senators Sherman and Dolph speak in high praise of the canal as a helper to our commerce on the Pacific coast. In less than three years nearly all timber lands here will change hands. There is no better investment for eastern capital than to make Oregon a great exporter of lumber as well as wheat and fish. Our future is still glorious.

A HAPPY FAMILY.

The condition of the Republican party in Oregon must be truly gratifying to its members. With no U. S. Senator because the caucus nominee was a Jew and proscribed on that ground; their leading organ so afraid of Mitchell as not to discuss a single live issue, but daily bathing the same old shirt in fresh oceans of blood; with the small fry, pot-house politicians clamoring for an extra session and the federal pay peacefully receding from view, things must be decidedly harmonious. No wonder Gov. Moody should be puzzled. A man who would try to serve such a combination must be in a sorry pickle indeed. Say, Governor, you did not get your party in this fix, so let it go before the people and they will straighten out the kinks.

Communicated.

Eugene City, August 3, 1885.

EDITOR REVIEW: I have been greatly pleased at the sound course pursued by the REVIEW in regard to an extra session. It strikes me that the only honorable thing for Gov. Moody to do is to appoint the Hon. Sol. Hirsch as senator. He was the regular nominee of the party and should have been elected. The fact that he was a Jew was too terrible however for some model reformer. Strict discipline in party ranks is a necessity and Gov. Moody could not better serve his party than by rebuking these mar-ploters and standing in with the majority.

ENDYMION.

MR. JOHN ROACH'S son melodramatically declares that no private creditor shall lose a dollar by the old gentleman's failure. It is only the poor, old Government that is to be gonged, as usual. —N. Y. World.

Memorial Services.

The memorial services for General Grant will take place at the Presbyterian Church in this city Saturday, August 8th at 2 o'clock. The G. A. R. Post will have charge and form a procession at the Grange hall led by the Yankee Doodle Band and march to the church and arrive there promptly on time stated above. Rev. Mr. Saick will preach the sermon and the music will be under the superintendency of Mrs. S. C. Flint. There should be a large attendance of our citizens to pay this last homage of respect to America's greatest chieftan.
