ROSEBURG REVIEW

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1885.

FALLACIOUS.

The Oregonian in a leader recently presented a view of the whiskey trafic in this country something after this style; the $900,000,000 spent annually in the United States for strong drink, creates a demand for labor and material commensurate with that great expenditure, and therefore the people will be slow to inaugurate any measures that will militate against the production of corn, barley, grapes, bottles, barrels, etc. etc., or anything that will reduce the demand for so much labor and capital invested. Now the gauziness of this reasoning, and the fallacy of such a statement, may be seen when the writer of that article continues by showing that the misuse of this great business may be held in check by "society, schools, religious teachings etc.

It appears to us that the attitude of the writer of that leader refered to, is in direct antagonism to our "society, schools, and churches," for he says that "these have done, and are doing much to hold this misuse in "check" thereby cleary showing, that if "society, the schools and churches," were to reduce the demand to $500,000,000 per annum, that there would be $400,000,000 worth of supply on hand, which would be surplusage and consequently the next year the producer of corn, barley etc., would be correspondingly impoverished. Now here is about the state of the case in a nutshell, according to his method of reasoning; the traffic in ardent spirits in this country is a great business; it gives employment to many in the production of materials; the people will be slow to do anything that will interfere with this enormous business possessing such great commercial power;—"society, schools; and churches" are holding it in check, and are the proper agencies to regulate or destroy the traffic, therefore the corn raiser, the barley producer, the grape grower, the bottle and barrel manfacturer, and the shipper as well ought to oppose "society, schools, and religious teaching," for the very good reason that these agencies are reducing the demand, thereby necessitating a reduction in supply, and this reduction in supply reaches back to the producer and manufacturer and turns many out of employment, and leaves capital on the market without a borrower, or an opportunity to invest profitably. Now the above is a fair sample of the Oregonian's sophistry upon this great question. We believe that society, schools, and churches are the proper agencies to suppress the liquor traffic, but we do not see that they antagonize the very best interests of the country.

Suppress the Prize Fight.

"For several days there has been high excitement in Portland about a prize fight which, it is said, will take place to-day. The city is full of a class of beings, the hardest that still keep the form of humanity, and more deeply degraded than any creatures known in other than human form, attracted from hundreds of miles, to witness the exhibit. It is high time measures were taken to stop this, now too familiar brutality. We have no law of any account that will reach the case. The most that can be done is to make arrests for disorderly conduct or breaches of the peace, and it is not easy in such cases to sustain a charge even to this effect. There ought to be a stringent statue making it a felony to arrange a prize fight in the State, to enter into negotiations for arrangement of a prize fight, or to engage in such prize fight in any manner, either as principal, second, assistant, stakeholder, trainer or referee. The statue should also forbid persons to leave the state to carry on such prize fight or to assist in it in any capacity, and it should empower and direct the officers to make arrests when persons are about to depart on such errands. These regulations made sufficiently comprehensive and explicit, if they did not stop this disgraceful brutality, at least would compel it to keep under cover. It is now open and shameless. Its publicity is debasing to the last degree. Inasmuch as the Legislature will assemble in a few days it is hoped that a legal remedy may be provided that will check the growing frequency of these brutal occurrences. Every consideration of order, decency and morals requires it.

As the Oregonian suggests in the above, no better legislation could be had by our extra session than that refered to in the article. Whither are we drifting, are we going back to the pays of the gladiator; and bull fight? Shame on our boasted civilization in some places at least.

Eloquence.

Mrs. Clara Foltz last Saturday evening defined eloquence as being necessarily truth. Daniel Webster said that eloquence was "action, noble, godlike action." Eloquence is animation, force. A bundle of perversities, a train of sophistries, a group of falsities may be eloquently stated. Truth is always eloquent, but all eloquence is not necessarily truth.

A colored lawyer from Florida has been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States on motion of Senator Call (Democrat) from that State.

THE Boseburg REVIEW will enlarge next week. Brother Bell is deserving of much credit for establishing a sound Democratic paper in Douglas county. —Guard.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

We noticed in last week's Benton Leader, that some one signing himself "Tax payer" writes as follows:

"The failure to appoint and have confirmed by the Senate the Boord of Regents for the State Agricultural College, provided for by the last Legislature, has prevented anything being done toward the erection of the buildings provided for in said act, as one of the first things to be settled was to have a legal body to receive the title, for the State, to the land upon which the building is to be erected; and now that we are to have an extra session it behooves the people of Corvallis to take immediate steps toward having the matter properly brought before the Legislature by Gov. Moody, to the end that said Board may be appointed and confirmed. We ought, in addition to that, ask the Legislature for an extension of time in which to raise the money and erect the buildings, as we have lost one year on account of the Board of Regents not being appointed at the time required by the law. I have been reliably informed that the last Southern Methodist Conference rescinded their former resolution tendering the school back to the state; if they have there is not only bad faith in the act but it indicates a movement to get the College away from Corvallis. It now remains to be seen whether the people of Corvallis will "lie supinely on their backs" and let this valuable institution with all its present advantages and future possibilities, slip away from their grasp; or rouse up, and by a determined effort, raise the means either by subscription or taxation to secure the permanent location of the College at Corvallis."

Now we have this to say, that the failure on the part of the senate to confirm the Board of Regents appointed by Gov. Moody at the last sesssion of the Legislature, was not perhaps the real or only cause why the funds were not raised to erect the buildings on the farm promised by the people of Benton County. The real cause is, a great number of the citizens of Benton county will not give anything, and want the State to give the funds with which to build, and then they will call a meeting and pass a "resolution of thanks." "Junius" in the same issue of the Leader, to our mind, suggests the most reasonable and consistent course, that of "amending the Charter and taxing the City." "Taxpayer" is correct I am sorry to say, that the last Conference of the Southern Methodist did rescind its former action in tendering to the State the College, to which we were certainly opposed. It may be necessary sometime to give the true inwardness of this extra-judicial proceeding, but the time has not yet arrived. Now we want to say once for all, that this is a State Institution, all have a right to be heard;—that without invidious distinction of place, or previous condition of opinion, we believe that Corvallis is the place for the Agricultural College to be located permanently, and that there is no disposition upon the part of any one whom we know to take it elsewhere, that this is a move upon the part of the Conference to remove it, is a great mistake of "Taxpayer,"—that it is folly for any member of the church to suppose it will ever be returned to the church, or that it ought to be;—that the church in order to its prosperity should not have, directly nor indirectly the custody of any State funds;—that it is a positive damage to the success of any church to have any alliance whatever with any amount of State money all of the above we believe to be true. Let the Church stand on her own merits, and she will succeed in her glorious calling, but when she is dictated to by the State, she is shorn of her power of free and religious liberty. Let the State direct its education, let the Church direct hers. We believe there are enterprising men enough in and about Corvallis to secure the buildings they think they need. We know some men who have subscribed liberally, and will do so again, but that all may contribute to this enterprise we think that taxation is the proper method. You will Mr. Leader, please excuse the intrusion of these rambling suggestions.

Receive our best wishes for your success.

Solid South.

The South was as solid in 1880 as in 1884, why did we not hear such a cry then as we hear now? The need of the negro was every whit as great. The Republican losses have not been in the South, but in the north; their defeat was due not to bull-dozing, but to blundering in Congress and in party conventions. When Mr. Hayes doubted whether he or Tilden would be decreed President he was anxious, not for himself, but for the poor negro, and his first act was to withdraw whatever protection the negro thought he had. Last year the Republican party was beaten in fact. Straightway Mr. Blaine became concerned for the poor negro. If he had been elected, things would have gone, so far as the Southern states are concerned, substantially as they did during the administrations of Hayes and Garfield and Arthur and as they are going now. The negro in the South is just as well off to day as if Mr. Blaine were President.—Democrat.

WOULD the Oregon Sentinel which passes itself as such a facile critic upon the "sentences of howling newspapers," please point out to us some of the much needed legislation to be done at the extra session. It is much easier to criticise a sermon than it is to preach one.

HUNTER'S REPLY.

Information Wanted.

MR. EDITOR. "Evolutionist" in answer to my query as to the meaning he attaches to certain words, refers me to Webster and says he accepts the meaning of those words as given by him so there is no issue on that point between us. We are together there. He quotes, "theology" Webster says "is the science which treats of the things of God" a meaning I accept. Now with this meaning let us go back to his first article. We ask him to show where "theology" (the science which treats of the things of God) "is tender to feel" and to show the time when it "cries ouch at the smallest pressure from the advancing step of science" and "is fearful of the destruction of the holy faith," This we wish to know. We ask him to show when or how "Theology" (the science which treats of the things of God) combats evolution with a zeal not unlike that against astronomy in the days of Galileo and Bruno.

We ask him to cite to us the time when, the place where and the circumstances under which "Theology" (the science which treats of the things of God) "plays upon the words differentiations, protoplasm and the survival of the fitest with the flippancy of a child with the words papa and mamma and as litt'e understandingly."

Give us the book, chapter, section and paragraph; we want to read these charges for our self. We wish him to bring his intelligent and truthful witness upon the stand and prove the unprovoked charges he has made against "Theology" (the science which treats of the things of God.)

"Evolutionist" like all that class of writers which he represents, in presenting their favorite topics or theories, unnessarily seek to slur or ridicule "the science which treats of the things of God." Hear him again. "The differentiation of the lower protoplastic life into the higher order of sentient beings is a riddle to some, especially to theologians" Now I ask is not this something a "riddle" to lawyers, merchants, doctors, mechanics and even to scientists as well as to theologians. If so then why specify theologians as a separate specific class as though all others understood this "riddle' except theologian, and therefore must be esteemed inferior, because of their ignorance and obtuseness. There must be some reason in the mind of "Evolutionist" or some inharmony in his theory, which leads him to specify this class to the exclusion of all other classes and professions. As a thinker and observer I am always led to mistrust any cause or theory, which requires a thrust at "Theology" to sustain it and commend it to the public favor. Now let us see. A short time since a short article appeared in the REVIEW, "Evolution Set Back." This furnished "Evolutionist" an occasion to come to the support of his favorite theories; this he had right to do; no one objected to this. But why speak of his theory as "A riddle to some, especially to theologians." Was this not a reflection on the Editor of the REVIEW and through him upon the whole school of theologians. This conclusion is logical. Why speak as he did of "Theology" (the science of the things of God) if it was not to reflect on all who believe in "Theology" (the science of the things of God.) Again we ask "Evolutionist" what meaning he attaches to certain words which he used after refering us to Webster as orthodox with him. He gives us nearly a column in connection with his belief and then winds up by inviting us to sight our game in the jungles, fire and see what we will bring down. Here he mistakes, we are not hunting for game, we are hunting for truth, truth is science, truth is history, truth is theology, and we wish him to turn the light on, especially upon those points where we have asked so respectfully for the confirmation of his statements.

A Safeguard.

The fatal rapidity with which slight Colds and Coughs frequently develop into the gravest maladies of the throat and lungs, is a consideration which should impel every prudent person to keep at hand, as a household remedy, a bottle of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

Nothing else gives such immediate relief and works so sure a cure in all affections of this class. That eminent physician, Prof. F. Sweetzer, of the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, Me., says:—

"Medical science has produced no other anodyne expectorant so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is invaluable for diseases of the throat and lungs."

The same opinion is expressed by the well-known Dr. L. J. Addison, of Chicago, Ill., who says:—

"I have never found, in thirty-five years of continuous study and practice of medicine, any preparation of so great value as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, for treatment of diseases of the throat and lungs. It not only breaks up colds and cures severe coughs, but is more effective than anything else in relieving even the most serious bronchial and pulmonary affections."

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral

Is not a new claimant for popular confidence, but a medicine which is to-day saving the lives of the third generation who have come into being since it was first offered to the public.

There is not a household in which this invaluable remedy has once been introduced where its use has ever been abandoned, and there is not a person who has ever given it a proper trial for any throat or lung disease susceptible of cure, who has not been made well by it.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has, in numberless instances, cured obstinate cases of chronic Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and even acute Pneumonia, and has saved many patients in the earlier stages of Pulmonary Consumption. It is a medicine that only requires to be taken in small doses, is pleasant to the taste, and is needed in every house where there are children, as there is nothing so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for treatment of Croup and Whooping Cough.

These are all plain facts, which can be verified by anybody, and should be remembered by everybody.
