THE LIMIT OF STATE EDUCATION.

We take the following from the Oregonian, which to our mind is exactly in harmony with the spirit of American institutions, baring one point and that is West Point's trained soldiery. Our experience as well as information gained by reading, does not favor even a trained soldiery. This state education theory of such a high grade is aristocratic in its tendency, and in conflict with the public school system.

"State education, in its primal purpose, is not for the sake of the man, it is for the sake of the state. With the individual man the state has no concern, except so far as seeing to it that he has the elementary education which enables him to discharge those duties and obligations which are involved in defence of the life of the state. A tax is therefore levied on the property of all, that every child may have such education as will enable it to understand and perform at the proper time the political duties of the citizen, in so far as not to be a hindrance to or a burden upon the public weal. To this extent childless men of course are as justly taxed as men with children, since it belongs to the fundamental common weal just as much as the maintenance of an army, the exaction of military service, the pecuniary contributions for the support of courts and legislatures, and a man might as logically refuse to pay for courts and legislatures, because he never had a case in court, as to refuse to pay for common schools, because he never had a child. This also answers why we tax the nation for West Point; because it is one of the fundamental necessities of a state to have a trained soldiery for defence. But it is not a fundamental necessity of the state that every boy rich or poor, shall receive a higher education at the cost of taxing the many for the few. It may be well for many boys, though not necessarily for all, that they should be highly educated in books, but this is no reason why the state should tax itself for this end any more than, because it is better to be rich than miserably poor, that the state should tax itself to put money in every poor man's purse.

The state under a Republican form of government, in distinction from a paternal despotism, governs best when it governs least, and the reason why America grows and developes more grandly than Europe is that the state does not attempt to usurp the function of society and social forces among men. The pernicious doctrine is taught too much that the satisfaction of the diverse and manifold aspirations of the individual, and not the fundamental necessities of the commonwealth is properly within the function and scope of the state. This doctrine is taught with the interpretation that we demand of congress or of state legislatures appropriations of money and land for a system of education that is not needed for the simple purpose of educating a child in such a way and manner as suffices for securing, so far as education can do, the grand features of good citizenship. Some educators seem to argue that the fact that the child is capable of education is proof of the obligations of the state to educate; that under this view the child that leans toward music should be musically educated at the public expense, and so on in regard to every specific faculty or facility of acquirement. This vicious doctrine means that the whole property of the country should be taxed not merely to make good citizens, but expert mechanics, engineers, lawyers and physicians; which is "monkeying" with the money of the many for the culture of the few. The state is concerned that the citizen be taught to read so that he may acquire knowledge: that he may write so that he can communicate with his fellows: that he can compute; it is concerned that he have all that fundamental knowledge that lifts the multitude, not the few, to the level of efficient citizenship, but the state is not at all concerned with the question whether the citizen becomes a lawyer, a doctor or a clergyman.

This sort of salvation through higher education must be left for the individual to work out for himself; it is not within the obligation or duty of the state. The founders of our government believed that the state was bound to afford its citizens such education as would protect them against fraud in their business relations, and enable them to understand the fundamental principal of the laws, religion and political system under which they lived, and that for this purpose the common English branches were enough; that the state had no right to increase public burdens for affording intellectual accomplishments to rich or poor. Furnished with the weapons of the common school the state says to the boy who can pay for further knowledge, "If you want it pay for it," and to the poor boy it says, "You must earn your accomplishments as you earn the means to support a wife, or win wealth; the state can no more fairly pay to accomplish you than it can pay to enrich you; the education of your struggle for eminence is the best higher education she can give you." The result is what takes place everywhere in art or nature, "the survival of the fittest." Any other policy on the part of a state only increases the number of those who are not mentally gifted, and who would only acquire through the state bounty what so many now do through high schools, a distrust and contempt for any employment that means rough clothes and soild hands. Many persons waste at high schools years that would be better employed learning a trade, and leave school at last not to engage in any productive industry, but to swell the number of middle men; to increase the number of commercial failures, to crowd the country with legal shysters, medical quacks and clergymen whose reputed divine call fails to be supplemented by the call of any church. When the state stops with the common schools it simply refuses to afford the mentally ungifted a stimulus to conceit, to tempt them to waste valuable years at school, to educate them into contemptuously declining to engage in those productive industries for which they are adapted and on which the welfare of the nation depends.

It is a fundamental duty of the state to support a hopeless pauper, but it is no part of its duty to pay for a piano because he has a fine musical ear, or to clothe him in soft raiment because he has a fine physique. Sunday schools are good in a wide sense for the state; so are churches, so are a thousand other humane enterprises of a secular character, but it does not belong to the province of a state to establish or support them. Beyond the education necessary to state protection from foreign assault or necessary to domestic defense from civil wrong the state wisely leaves higher education to society, just as it leaves a thousand missionary and charitable enterprises, not because they are not salutary, but because it is the genius of American institutions to let society regulate and govern itself so far as possible without seeking to support by statute things that are wisely left to that individual aspiration and effort which stimulates the spiritualties of society to healthy action and ceaseless growth. The state does not forbid education beyond the common schools, but it cannot afford to pay for it: because, while it believes that the state should pay for the necessaries of education, it thinks the boy should earn its luxuries, since it is honester and juster for the state and better for the boy. And this was the limit of state education approved by so eminent a scholar and man of vast and varied culture as Edward Everett. The elevation of the common school by having none but genuine men and women for teachers is the only higher education that can be properly undertaken by the state. The common school ought to furnish all the education necessary to make a man a good citizen, enough to make him fear God, fight for the flag and love his fellow man."

News From the Railroad Front.

A gentleman just in from the railroad front says the main camps have been moved forward to Castle rock. The work is being pushed along as fast as possible. By August 1st there will not be over 90 miles of staging. The prospects for the commencement of active operation on this side of the Siskiyous, is quite favorable, but as yet there is nothing definite. Mr. Voik and Mr. Hulburt have just invoiced the goods of the O. & C. R. R. Co. stored in the warehouses at Ashland. The purposes of the company in taking this invoice at this time is not known: the conjecture is that it is to see what is on hand and what further supplies and machinery is necessary to begin work on this end of the line.

Twin Foes to Life

Are Indigestion and Constipation. Their primary symptoms are among the most distressing of minor human ailments, and a host of diseases, speedily resultant from them, mutually aggravate each other and assail at once the whole machinery of life. Nausea, Foul Breath, Sour Stomach, Dizziness, Headaches, Bilious Fever, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Kidney Diseases, Piles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, and various Skin Disorders, are among the symptoms and maladies caused by derangement of the stomach and bowels.

A Thorough Purgative

medicine is the first necessity for cure. Then the cathartic effect must be maintained, in a mild degree, just sufficient to prevent a recurrence of costiveness, and at the same time the liver, kidneys and stomach must be stimulated and strengthened.

Ayer's Pills

Accomplish this restorative work better than any other medicine. They are searching and thorough, yet mild, in their purgative action. They do not gripe the patient, and do not induce a costive reaction, as is the effect of other cathartics. Withal, they possess special properties, diuretic, hepatic and tonic, of the highest medicinal value and

Absolutely Cure

All diseases proceeding from disorder of the digestive and assimilatory organs. The prompt use of AYER'S PILLS to correct the first indications of costiveness, averts the serious illnesses which neglect of that condition would inevitably induce. All irregularities in the action of the bowels — looseness as well as constipation — are beneficially controlled by AYER'S PILLS, and for the stimulation of digestive organs weakened by long-continued dyspepsia, one or two of AYER'S PILLS daily, after dinner, will do more good than anything else.

Leading Physicians Concede

That AYER'S PILLS are the best of all cathartic medicines, and many practitioners, of the highest standing, customarily prescribe them.
