ROSEBURG REVIEW

FRIDAY, JANUARY, 7, 1887.

"1887."

As we said last year, so we repeat that we are not disposed to be vain—in fact modesty is a marked trait in our character. Nevertheless we feel inclined to pose complacency as we present to our many readers this issue of THE REVIEW. About two years ago we added to the active duties of life the obligation of editing and conducting this paper. Our list of subscribers was not encouragingly large—the advertising columns were neither many nor crowded—the type neither new nor bright—our experience was not large, and to the causual observer our prospects were not dazzlingly brilliant. We happened to possess a little capital in the way of determination and energy, and went to work with a hearty good will. The result thus far has been to us quite satisfactory—our subscription list has almost quadrupled—our advertising patronage is extensive and all in all we come to realize that we have reached a position in the journalistic field whence we can interest, instruct and benefit our friends. In presenting our compliments at this time we confess to a feeling of pride—genuine, honest and candid pride. We do not attibute this feeling altogether to selfishness; on the contrary, we can greatly congratulate ourselves that we were able to comprehend the superior character of our patrons, and could appreciate their tastes—wishes and demands, and to the best of our ability sought to gratify them. To them our success is due and to them honor and praise should be given. To them we look for the future, from the past they can judge what they may be, it is in their hands. Whatever interest they may extend to us we shall return grateful compound. Let this year attest our sincerity.

Consumption is often only an indirect result of deranged kidneys. "Over two years ago I became a confirmed invalid. My friends all thought I was far gone in Consumption. I was sure the time had well nigh come when I must leave my helpless little children motherless. With this dreadful fact staring me in the face, I resolved to try Warner's safe cure. My husband tried to dissuade me, thinking I was too far gone for anything to help me But I took it, and in two weeks time I was like a new creature; and in four weeks I was able to resume my household duties"—at this writing I am perfectly well. Mrs. E. J. Wolf, wife of Rev. Prof. T. Wolf, D. D., editor Lutheran Quarterly, Gettysburg, Pa. If you write her, enclose a stamp, and she will tell you the story is true.

None labor harder or more continuously than they—farmers and agriculturists. No enactments limit their hours of toil and no interposition of the government enhances to any great extent the value of their products And yet for many of the necessaries and comforts of life which the most scrupulous economy enables them to bring into their homes, and for their implements of husbandry, they are obliged to pay a price largely increased by an unnatural profit which, by the action of the government, is given to the more favored manufacturer.—MR. CLEVELAND'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

Bob Taylor, the governor-elect of Tennesse, and fiddler, is in Washington city now shedding his wisdom. He sententiously remarks that what the democratic party needs is more harmony and more hominy. There would probably be more harmony if some of the hungry members of the party could get a little nearer to the trough through which the hominy is distributed.—Walla Walla Statesman Dec. 15th, 1886.

W. H. Rhodes 118 E. Gay St., Columbus, O., in 1879, was taken ill with palpitation and neuralgia of the heart, consequent on diseased kidneys, "Horrible Dyspepsia" also afflicted him. He spent hundreds of dollars for relief in vain. He took 50 bottles of Warner's safe cure and was fully restored to health, gaining 70 pounds while using that great remedy. Write him and enclose a stamp. He'll tell you the welcome story.

Whenever we begin taking off the shackles of war tariff taxes on raw materials increased prosperity will follow to the employers, who dread it, and larger and steadier employment to the wage earners, who need it, by increasing the sales abroad of our own manufactures and by whipping out foreign competitors in our own markets—SECRETARY MANNING'S REPORT TO CONGRESS.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

The reason why Acker's Blood Elixir is warranted, is because it is the best Blood Preparation known. It will positively cure all Blood Diseases, purifies the whole system, and thoroughly builds up the constitution. Remember, we guarantee it. For sale at Marster's drug store.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION

By B. L. Arnold, President State Agricultural College.

It is sometimes asked, how do industrial schools justify their existence, and what is their object? They must justify their existence either (1) by what they have done, or by what they are doing, or by what they are intended to do, of course by any or all of these. The first two points are matters of statistics and inference, the third a matter of speculation. I will devote a few lines to this last, viz: What are industrial colleges intended to do? There are two things that they are not intended to do? One is to increase the number of farmers and the other to make caste or perpetuate it. These they are not intended to do. The amount of labor devoted to agriculture is already sufficient to supply the market of the world and no more is needed, hence the regret that so many young men leave the farms and enter upon other business is not pertinent to the subject. Again Agricultural colleges are not intended to create or perpetuate caste, it would seem needless to say this, but the remark that one frequently hears that the colleges lead farmer's sons from the farm, implies that they, the sons of farmers, ought to stay on the farms, if this be true of the farmer it is true of the lawyer, the doctor, the preacher, the merchant, the shoemaker, the blacksmith etc. and this is caste. One of the benefits of industrial schools is that they tend to destroy castes. If there be more advantages in other pursuits than in farming, it is the worst oppression to try to prevent an escape from this pursuit by the young men of the land, and it is time to bring farming up to the level of such pursuits as are more excellent and ennobling. We must by some means strive to render farming as desirable a pursuit as any other if it be not so already, now let us devote a few words to the positive side of the question. The first object in agriculture and mechanical education is to fill the country with educated laborers, truly, says John Locke, "in men of low and mean education who have never elevated their thoughts above the spade and plow, nor looked beyond the ordinary drudgery of a day laborer you will find him no more capable of reasoning than almost a perfect mediocre," such a man cannot be as efficient in his labor as an intelligent one" a strong and enlightened writer says, "an intelligent community of workmen will get through their work quicker, will fit its parts more nicely, will finish off everything more sharply, will waste less material by trial and error, and so give higher value as well as quality and durability to all their work, than ignorant unrefined, and ill educated men. The highest value in the world's markets will be obtained by that nation which has been at most pains to cultivate the intelligence of its people generally, and often words to give each the highest education and training in this special calling." Technical education while it makes better workmen, makes at the same time better men, better citizens, one who is more ready to listen to suggestions and to think before he acts, whose range of vision sweeps a larger field and sees this field more clearly, whose mind is more open to conviction and argument, whose will is less rigid and obstinate. But the second and most important object of technical education and particularly of that branch of it that relates to agriculture is to prevent a retrograde movement of civilization. Civilization depends upon the division of labor, this again depends upon the amount of surplus food and raiment produced by the farmer, if this surplus is great, a large number of men can devote themselves to other pursuits, if the surplus be small a smaller, number can pursue other occupations, but as land becomes exhausted and population becomes greater, more work must be done to create the same surplus as before, or the same amount of work must be more productive than before; hence the necessity of better methods of farming and more intelligent labor. Suppose, for example that there are 50,000,000 of people in the United States to-day and that of these, 5,000,000 are farmers; these 5,000,000 produce food enough for themselves and families and the remaining 45,000,000. Now if the population should remain the same and the soil become worn out, the 5,000,000 could no longer produce the same amount of food and raiment as before and hence either the number of farmers must be increased at the expense of the 45,000,000 or else the 5,000,000 must be aided by improved methods of farming, if this could not be done civilization must suffer. Now this is the actual tendency of things and unless it can be arrested the movement is downward. Many periods of civilization have flourished and decayed, and there can be no question, that one cause at least is to be found in the want of improved methods of agriculture. This then is one of the objects of Industrial Education to arrest the retrograde movement of civilization. This proposition might be indefinitely illustrated, but it cannot be attempted here.

Old and reliable Medicines are the best to depend upon. Acker's Blood Elixir has been prescribed for years for all impurities of the Blood. In every form of Scrofulous, Syphilitic or Mercurial diseases, it is invaluable. For Rheumatism, has no equal. For sale at Marster's drug store.

A NEW ISSUE.

TO EDITOR OF REVIEW. As there seems to be a lack of vital issues between the political parties at the present time I would respectfully suggest that we take up the coyote and make a political issue of him. As a live issue among sheep, farmers I am confident he will draw largely. In this important branch of industry he already holds the balance of power; and unless something is done to check his inroads he will soon be in the majority. As the "Anti Coolie Party" seems to have weakened, and Prohibition is on the decline, the coyote might be used to advantage as a third party issue. The "Anti Coolie Clubs" could be changed to Coyote Clubs and instead of hunting Chinamen they could hunt coyotes, and in this way gratify their thirst for blood and serve their county too. I would also suggest that "Reform Clubs" be changed to Coyote Clubs, they might then be able to strike an effective blow for God and home and the little lambs. What the country needs in order to cope with this formidable varmint is a thorough organization. A great many scalps are lost annually for want of an organized effort. I have heard of at least a hundred coyotes being shot in this neighborhood, and only know of three or four scalps being secured. Almost every hunting party that goes out shoots 2 or 3, but for want of dogs or help at the proper time the coyote runs off and the scalp is lost. This is all wrong. The thing to do is to agitate this question and organize clubs. Having had considerable experience in hunting coyotes, I will offer a few suggestions for the benefit of clubs when organized. Each club should be armed with repeating rifles and suppled with at least 15 dogs, as follows, three pointers for starters, six hounds to turn loose after the game is up, and six bull dogs to be held in reserve for the final struggle.

A coyote when pursued by hounds usually runs in a circle around the base of some mountain, and as the pursuit continues he gradually contracts the circle, always approaching the summit. After getting his circuit definitely located send a man on top of the hill with the bull dogs. The other members of the club should then take stations at convenient intervals, and as the coyote comes around fire at every opportunity. By keeping up a continual fusilade in three or four hundred shots, some one may hit him which will greatly simplify matters and increase the chances of securing his scalp. After the coyote has made a few revolutions of the hill the sport becomes very animated and interesting, the coyote seeming to enjoy it as well as anybody. In fact I believe they delight in making it as interesting for the hunters as possible. After circling the mountian for several hours until the thing becomes monotonous he utters a peculiar cry which brings coyote number two on the scene. Just before he utters this cry the bull dogs should be turned loose. A good deal depends on getting the bull dogs loose at the proper time. Some practice will be necessary in order to fully acquire this trick. Coyote number two runs in and has a tussle with the dogs and for a moment you imagine they have caught him Not so however, by dexterous maneuvering number two succeeds in decoying the dogs after him and entertains them, while number one takes a nap or goes in search of refreshments. Number two soon changes his base to another mountain and the sport goes on indefinitely until the dogs tire out.

Realizing the necessity of a united effort to rid the country of this formidable pest, I would advise rod and gun clubs, and hunters generally to leave off shooting innocent birds, and deer, and shoot coyotes. They will not then be haunted with the recollection of the "dieing doe." "The Indian War Veterans" might still serve their country by joining in the chase. They could be drawn up in line on the hill side, and as the coyote comes around raise the war whoop, fire and fall back and fight their battles over again, to some purpose. I would advise persons of sedentary habits, and young men who have impaired their health by smoking cigarettes. to hunt coyotes. If the aged and infirm would go out and kill a few coyotes they would feel altogether different. To tramps and those out of employment, it seems to me an inviting field, and a good investment, as the county stands ready to pay $7.50 for every scalp. I would particularly recommend the sport to fat people, having reduced my own avoirdupois 14 lbs. in a single chase.

Being in favor of womans rights I see no good reason why the fair sex should not be invited to parcipitate. And I hereby invite them to organize clubs and join in the chase and recommend it as both healthful and amusing. If they would only organize a club and elect me captain I would take it as a very high compliment. In fact I would consider it the crowning glory of my life. I have always hankered after a military title, but have despaired of earning one. No cruel war is raging now, and if there was, I suppose my modesty would keep me in the rear. A lady friend of mine once told me that my modesty would be the ruin of me, and I begin to believe it, but Gen. Grant was modest, I think I resemble Grant in that respect. Trusting that the above suggestions will meet with public favor, and hoping we may all live to see the day, when the coyote, and the lamb shall lie down together and the lamb not molest him. I remain respectfully,

EL CAPTAIN.

In describing Olalla in our holiday edition we perhaps unwittingly did that section an injustice. In addition to its mining operations, the country surrounding it is of the best quality of farming land, besides wealthy stock men reside in the vicinity, and a store is kept in Olalla and the post office in connection therewith.

Mrs. J. T. Richey, 562 4th Avenue, Louisville Ky,. was a confirmed invalid for eleven years, daily expecting death. Doctors pronounced her trouble to be neuralgia, female complaints and every other known disease. For months her left side was paralyzed. Could neither eat, sleep nor walk. Finally the doctors gave her up. She then began to use Warner's safe cure, and November 18, 1885 she wrote "I am as well to-day as when a girl, and feel about twenty years younger. Warner's safe cure has worked a miracle in my case." Mrs. Richey will gladly answer stamped inquiries.
