Persons must not expect to live by sympathy alone, but a little cash is sometimes necessary.

If our official signal officer B. S. Pague cannot improve the weather as it has been of late with his instruments, he had better send for Wiggins, or close up shop. It is true he told us what kind of weather would be, but the prognostications were always in conflict with our previous experience. Miss Rosa Stannus gave one of her pleasing dramatic entertainments at the Presbyterian church last Wednesday evening, which was much enjoyed by those present. Owing to a mistake on the part of some one her bills failed to reach here, hence her coming was not generally known, and her audience was not as large as Roseburg should have given her.

We have thought it proper to rest awhile on the spiritualistic discussion, as all parties have been heard pro and con and all seem more or less satisfied, and we suppose clarified too. However our Astoria correspondent is entitled to one more article, and then the benediction, after which a collection will be taken for the benefit of the Mutual Aid Society. LOST, STRAYED, OR STOLEN, the foreman of THE REVIEW office. Left Roseburg unceremoniously between the hours of 8 Thursday evening and 6 Friday morning. The subject of this sketch is 5 feet 11 inches tall, brown eyes, black hair, and when last seen was well dressed, and wore a plausible appearance. Any information that will lead to the conviction of the above named person will be suitably rewarded.

The Signal Service Observer reports the following: Total precipitation this week to date (24) 5.78 inches, which is 1.22 inches in excess of average. Total depth of unmelting snow fall 26.6 inches. Mean February temperature 42.5, mean this month to date 31.5, highest 45.2, lowest 7.7 on 31st, temperature below 32° (freezing point) 17 days. This month has been, so far, the severest in 20 years, from signal service records, and even the "oldest inhabitant" fails to remember anything more severe.

Miller, the speaker of the evening, being absent, Mr. Carl Sr. gave us a short address on the progress of temperance work, in the last fifty years. Mr. Ramp followed in a five minutes speech telling about the work done at the alliance and introducing resolutions relative to reorganizing the club, suggesting that its name be changed to "Home Protection League," its immediate work, the securing of votes for the amendment at the election in Nov. next. W. F. Benjamin was selected speaker for the next meeting. The meeting adjourned to meet in two weeks when the work of reorganizing will be dealt with.

NO LOSS OF SHEEP.—There has been no loss of cattle or sheep in Eastern Oregon this season worth speaking of. E. Lobenstein of Pendleton writes to a friend here that in W. Gilson's herd of 7000 sheep the loss has been only eighty-three and another herd of 1700, belonging to E. Gilman, in the Flat rock country only lost twenty-three. Some sheepsmen were at Pendleton looking to see where they could get hay if they should need it, but as they had enough on hand for more than a week, and everything seemed to indicate the approach of the welcome Chinook, Mr. Lobenstein thought that those parties would not need to buy any hay.—Oregonian.

All such are requested to send their names to Mr. P. H. Raymond, Salem, at an early date as possible. The O. & C. R. R. and the Oregon Railway Co. Thoughts suggested at little Cleveland Baxter's funeral. The choir sang: "Is it fair?" The beautiful song rests on my mind, and I repeat, is it fair? Is it fair from the animate to the inanimate? Is it fair from life to death? Is it fair from death to life, or is there death? Is it fair from the cradle to the grave? How far will we journey with the pale boatman over the dark Avernus waves? How long shall we stand on the deck of the pale Elysium, or we reach the golden land beyond the sea? Is it fair? Is it fair, to the time when wrong shall swing in the sacred balance of a tear; when right shall be robed in the resurrection and life, and the clouds roll away. There is no death beneath the burning sun; There's nothing mortal known in heaven or earth; There's no comparing when our race is run; There is no measure of a being's worth. For all must swing in the harmonious train Throughout the endless ages yet to be; Each forms a link of the unending chain. This hinders the boundary of eternity.

Is it fair? Do not pause, dear friends, to compute time or space with the infinite; for there is no end but eternal blessed resurrection for ever and forever. Why should we mourn for friends who have gone before to a life that will go onward forever and never end will. As the links of eternity's chain; Where are our numbers? 'Tis a tassel bend On the face of the broad stellar plain. Oh! say, brother pilgrim, Is it fair?—LODI in Coquille City Herald.

If anyone wishes to spend a pleasant evening, where all is sociality and good feeling, just let them attend a meeting of the Robert's Creek Reform Club. Their last meeting was held on South Deer creek, Saturday evening, Feb. 5th, interspersed with music, singing, recitations, short speeches, &c. Miss Martha Gilmore, address, read the Temperance Day Star, it being filled with choice selections of temperance pieces, poetry, general news and home items. A dialogue entitled "All's Well That Ends Well," was executed in excellent style; Fred Hatfield and Frank Rose taking the parts of the two peppery old gentlemen and Miss Clara Bush and Jno. W. Whitson the parts of the dutiful son and daughter, and Miss Lillie Hatfield the companion of Lola Holmes. They all performed their parts in a natural and lifelike manner, exciting by far the most of the amateur dramatic performers. The next meeting will be held on Roberts creek Feb. 26th, when B. F. Ramp is expected to give one of his famed prohibition speeches. SECRETARY.

Quite a lively time was had at the Adelphean Literary Society last Friday, the discussion was rendered in favor of the affirmative.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS ON THE POEM, "ANGEL OF THE COVENANT"

THE ANGEL OF THE COVENANT.—The papers over the State are at present eulogizing the poem, "The Angel of the Covenant," written by Mrs. Dr. S. Hamilton. That it should receive such general attention is acknowledged evidence that the poem possesses merit, and that the notice have almost universally been of a favorable character, in some way complimentary to the authoress. Once in every few decades there is a meteor, like Byron, Shakespeare, Milton or Poe, that flash for a time with unequalled brilliancy in the literary heavens. And while these lights may grow no less dim, they each have a long train of followers who never attain an excellence above mediocrity. Mrs. Hamilton has taken an entirely new field of literary work, from the fact that she adopts poetry as the best means of blending history, allegory and revelation in a readable form. Much of the Bible was written in poetry. Christian theology is only poetical in its tendency and influence. Mrs. Hamilton has taken advantage of this to treat poetically what is generally considered prosy. Here are a few of the gems with which the poem abounds: "Bivle cannot be more than void of gold, Nor angels purer than void of wold."

In speaking of knowledge and wisdom she says: "To learn of wisdom, man must die to gold; But to know of both, is the wisdom of God." How true are the following lines: "Where and parental steps, the child's begin; And from the mother's grave, the eye can trace Where'er the footsteps of the son hath been Since the beginning of his mortal race."

The authoress has evidently carefully studied the general drift of the poem before it was written; and it will likewise bear careful study on the part of the reader. We predict that those who will take the time to carefully peruse the three books with all the multiplied multiplicity of new thoughts and applications of old ideas that the volume contains.—[Plaindealer.]

We have received from Roseburg "The Angel of the Covenant," a poem complete in three books. Mrs. Dr. S. Hamilton authoress. The poem is historical in its nature, contains much poetical beauty and many good thoughts. The public generally read poems by local talent with suspicion. This poem, though, is worth a careful perusal, which is saying considerable for these trashy times.—[Democrat.]

NEW POEM.—We have received a poem entitled "The Angel of the Covenant," written by Mrs. Dr. S. Hamilton and published by THE REVIEW PUBLISHING CO., of Roseburg, Ore. It is well written. The three books are bound in one volume of about 65 pages.—[Chronicle.]

A poem of three books bound in one volume has been received at this office. It is entitled, "The Angel of the Covenant;" it was written by Mrs. Dr. S. Hamilton; and published by THE REVIEW PUBLISHING CO. The authoress evidently took much time and pains in writing this volume. Her views are somewhat new departure from the theological views of the day.—[Echo.]

We have received a pamphlet entitled, "The Angel of the Covenant," written by Mrs. Dr. S. Hamilton, of Roseburg. It is the longest poem ever written in Oregon, and contains much valuable reading matter. It will therefore bear careful perusal. Some parts of it need to be studied to be thoroughly understood.—[Enterprise.]

"The Angel of the Covenant," is the name of a poem, published by THE REVIEW PUBLISHING CO., of Roseburg, Mrs. S. Hamilton, the authoress, has in this literary effort happily blended history, allegory and revelation, in a readable form.—[Corvallis Gazette.]

We are in receipt of "The Angel of the Covenant," a poem in three books by Mrs. Dr. Hamilton of Roseburg, which is well spoken of by those who have read it. Rev. J. R. N. Bell has our thanks for it.—[Jacksonville Times.]

"The Angel of the Covenant," is the title of a poem in three books, written by Mrs. Dr. Hamilton, of Roseburg, and published by THE REVIEW of that place. We are under obligations to the publisher for a complimentary copy.—[Ashland Tidings.]

THE ANGEL OF THE COVENANT.—This is the title of a poem in three books, written by Mrs. Dr. Hamilton, Roseburg, and printed by THE REVIEW press. We are under obligations to the publishers for a copy. It is written in a manner somewhat fascinating, and is no doubt meritorious, but as we have not had time to give it careful examination, we defer criticism.—[Prohibition Star.]

W. Scott Walker, A. M., president of Washington Seminary, W. T., says: Through the courtesy of some friends in Roseburg, Oregon, the writer of this note has received a poem of no mean merit, written by a lady at Roseburg. It is one of the most fertile, in new and original thought, of all the poems I have ever read. Even one of its ideas is enough to give it immortality. That thought is this: the first human movement of any moral character was to erect a house, a domain. Its foundation was human wisdom. At least, it was the wisdom recognized by Satan. It was merely the knowledge of good and evil. Humanity tried to edify itself upon such a foundation. The foundation was sand. God showed, at length, that wisdom was the principal thing; just as Eve had thought when she accepted to Satan's suggestion. But God said, as the heavens are above the earth, so are our thoughts above your thoughts. Then the New Testament says, "The wisdom of God's first pure, then perfect, Christ was the power of God and the wisdom of God." These are, of course, not the words of the author of that poem; but I owe the thought to her suggestion. The poem should be read by every minister and Christian in this country. Thanks to the lady and the kind friend who sent it to me.

LANGFELD.—At the residence of Henry Adams near Myrtle Creek Oregon, last Sunday Feb. 20th, 1887, Mrs. Philena E. Langfeld, she was born November 26th, 1849, in Cass county, Missouri, and with her parents came to this valley in 1863. This highly respected lady united with the Methodist church in 1869, and from that time until God said "it is enough, come up higher," she was a consistent member of the church of her choice. The subject of this sketch leaves a sorrowing husband, and one little girl less than 3 years old to mourn her untimely departure. Mrs. Langfeld's maiden name was Cornett, the sister and relative of that large and excellent family of Cornetts on Cow Creek. The remains of this lady were taken to Riddle, and the funeral services held in the school house by Rev. J. R. N. Bell on Feb. 23, 1887, and the body was then deposited in the Riddle cemetery, there to await the sound of the trumpet of the resurrection morning.

Mrs. Reames received a letter Monday evening from Rev. R. Heber Newton's wife stating that her husband is very low suffering from nervous prostration.

Dr. Gann's Improved Liver Pills for Sallow Complexion, Pimples on the face and Biliousness. Never sickens or gripes. Only one for a dose. Samples free at W. S. Hamilton.

An Overture

Have we no laws in Myrtle Creek or have we laws and no officers to enforce them, appearances would indicate that we had neither, if we have where O where are they kept? Last Sunday evening at the close of an able sermon by our faithful friend, Mr. Smick, a dozen or so of persons calling themselves young men, took a line from the Church to their place of resort with whoops and yells and shooting off pistols equal to a band of savages on the war path, while a few of the more genteel ones were their guests and their joined their companions in reviling which was kept up till near morning. It is said that a majority of the voters could not be got for a liquor saloon at this place, yet we have here a place where men and boys too may go and get drunk when they choose. The place is frequented by all ages from the young boy to the gray haired grandfather and I am sorry to say in many instances boys are led hither by their fathers who ought to set a better example while the mothers spend sleepless nights in tears and prayers for their rascal sons and husbands. O how long must we bear with such things, is there no remedy? Yours for law and order and prohibition in the strongest sense of the term. A PARENT.

Something New. ROBERTS CREEK, Feb. 22, 1887. Ladies I take pleasure in announcing that on the 3rd of January, 1887, I had a vision that told me there was something I must do immediately. I set to work at it and now the work being done fully represents a perfect and complete washing machine. At first I intended to make only one for home use, but of late has been concluded to make them for sale. It is not an old fashioned country cut washing machine but a new style and pleases everybody.
