I LOVE YOU.

There are three words of magic power,
With love and joyance laden;
Ever remembered is the hour
When first the happy maiden
Hears from the lips she loves the best,
Those words so sweet and true,
That open the gates of paradise—
Those sweet words, "I love you."

And be it under the shady trees,
Beneath the summer skies,
Or if it be where the ocean waves
In crested billows rise;
Or under the light of autumn stars,
Or out in the morning dew,
That time is blest when first we hear
Those sweet words, "I love you."

And sacred in our inmost hearts
We keep that memory still,
Though life's earnest realities
Our lives with duties fill;
Sometimes amid our labors,
Or when the task is through,
We see again that place and hear
Those sweet words, "I love you."

They never lose their magic power
Amid life's fret and care,
And sometimes when our burdens
Seem all too great to bear,
Like oil on troubled waters
They will our strength renew,
When loved ones softly whisper
Those sweet words, "I love you."

"I love you"—words of magic,
That make life's burden light;
"I love you"—words of blessing
That make life's darkness bright;
"I love you"—words of promise
So strong, and sweet, and true,
That open the gate of paradise—
Those sweet words, "I love you."

IOWA'S TEMPERANCE MARTYR

There is great commotion in Iowa over the trial of the alleged murderers of Rev. George C. Haddock. Indeed it may be said, almost without aggregation, that the state is on fire. Mr. Haddock was an earnest and aggressive prohibitionist at Sioux City. He had given up his pulpit and was acting as agent of the prohibitory league in collecting evidence against liquor sellers who were defying the law. By the liquor league he was denounced as a spy and informer, and some of the men whom he had been instrumental in prosecuting formed a conspiracy to kill him. Finally the threat was executed. He was shot down on the street, it was asserted and believed, by a hired murderer. At first no certain clue could be had, but at length some of the parties began to talk. The investigations went on, till those who were pressed by growing danger accused others as principles in the crime—that is, with having incited it. The case is now on trial at Sioux City, and it creates an excitement never before equaled in Iowa.

It was a most heinous murder. Throughout the state it itensified the prohibition feeling to a degree unexampled. Sioux City, in particular, it created a storm of indignation against the liquor business which has done more to put it down than the prohibitionists, had this crime not been committed, would ever have been able to accomplish. The murder of Haddock has done more to push on the cause for which he stands as a martyr than a thousand living Haddocks could have done in the course of their natura. lives. If the testimony of the accomplices and instruments of the murder shall prove to accord with the confessions which some of them are said to make, convictions will certainly be secured, and this hideous murder will be punished as it deserves.—Oregonian.

"My Lads, Be Honest."

Dr. Livingstone, the famous explorer, was descended from the Highlanders, and he said that one of his ancestors one day called his family around him. He was dying, and he had his children around his death-bed. He said: "Now, lads, I have looked all through our history as far back as I can find it, and have never found a dishonest man in all the line, and I want you to understand you inherit good blood. You have no excuse for doing wrong. Be honest."

Uncle Jack returns from a long walk, and being somewhat thirsty, drinks from a tumbler he finds on the table. Enter his little niece Allie, who sets up a yell of despair. Uncle Jack: "What's the matter, Allie?" Allie (weeping): "You've drinked up my aquarium and swallowed my free polly-wogs." (Howls with anguish).

Joseph Rabbinovich, the Jewish reformer in South Russia, continues his work at Kischieneff, where his Sunday services are crowded with men and women of Israel thirsting for the gospel.

Mrs. Arnold, residing near New Holland, O., has celebrated the 109th anniversary of her birth. She has a sister aged 106, and another who i 112.

It is always good to know, if only in passing, a charming human being; it refreshes one like flowers and woods and clear brooks.
