THE PRESIDING ELDER TALKS AGAIN.

EDITOR REVIEW: Will you please allow me a little space in your columns to correct a few errors into which you have fallen.

As the village clock was striking nine and the moon rose over the hill, Death had visited a happy home; And all was hushed and still.

A few days of sickness were passed, And such suffering none can tell, And the closing scene in the last long sleep, As we all know too well.

For his Mama does not usually call, But, she's gone and left him for all that, And in other hands he now must fall.

When the Lord will appear to judge the world, And the angels with him shall come, One of them shall be Maggie!

Yes, coming to embrace you home, Dear friends, weep not for your loved ones, "They are better off," we can assure; And we will all wait gladly For the grand old Judgment Day.

NOTICE is hereby given that I have the bank notes and accounts of Gates & Critser, in my hands for collection and settlement.
