THE BANDON BEACH.

O, we love to stroll,
Where the billows roll,
On a cheerful and cloudless day;
And roam o'er the strands,
With their jewelled sands,
And to watch the wild waves at play.

The water it raves
In the sounding caves,
In the gloomy and dark defiles—
Rushing and dashing,
Seething and splashing,
Through the echoing, somber aisles.

Or, rippling in ripples,
Smiles and dimples,
They steal up so softly and slow,
To startle some pet,
Whom they often met,
On other fair shores long ago!

Sitting on a rock,
Beyond the shock
Of the incoming, angry wave,
We think of this life—
Its sorrows and strife,
And the life that's beyond the grave.

There, with shining band,
In Summer land,—
In that land of ancient story,—
We hope we will be,
Through eternity,
In happiness, peace and glory.

Then! cheer up, sad one!
Come! Take courage, men!
The Heavens are brilliant with light!
And the glad'ning ray
Of the coming day
Peeps through:—you've passed the night!
GEORGE BENNETT.

THE PROMULGATION OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Letter of Col. A. Loudon Snowden, addressed to the Governors of the several States, requesting co-operation in the Centennial Celebration of the Framing and Promulgation of the Constitution of the United States, which will take place at Philadelphia, on the 15th, 16th, and 17th of September next.

PHILADELPHIA, July 9, 1887.

DEAR SIR:—From the enclosed correspondence you will observe that I have been appointed by the Constitutional Centennial Commission, Chairman of the Committee and Marshal in charge of the civic and industrial demonstration by which it is intended in part to celebrate the Formation and Promulgation of the Constitution of the United States.

I need not remind you that it is of the highest importance that this celebration should not alone illustrate our moral, intellectual and material progress within the past hundred years, but that it should be made so imposing as to leave an indelible impression on the minds of our people, particularly upon the youth of the land as to the paramount importance of upholding and guarding the Constitution as the sheet anchor of our liberties and the bulwark of our prosperity and happiness of our people. In July 1788 there was a celebration in this city, intended not only to manifest the gratification of the people on the adoption of the Constitution by ten of the States, but also to stimulate its ratification by all the states composing the old Confederation. On that occasion the processional display, which received the countenance and the hearty support of the leading men of the period, representing all branches of business, industries of all kinds as well as the judiciary, the professions, and the schools of learning, headed by the venerable University of Pennsylvania, etc., was the most comprehensive and suggestive ever attempted up to that period on this side of the Atlantic.

It devolves upon us in the coming celebration to illustrate, as far as possible, in the processional display, the marvelous material and industrial advance which has been made under the benign influence of the Constition.

It is a celebration in which all should participate. To assure succes will require generous and cordial co-operation, and upon this I confidently rely.

Without presuming to indicate a plan for your guidance I may say that it has been suggested that your Excellency appoint a committee to which shall be assigned the duty of directing the attention of your citizens to the subject, and the organizing your industries for participation in the demonstration, which it is proposed to make, if possible, the most imposing of the kind ever witnessed on this continent. With such a committee or any other agency you may suggest, I shall be glad to co operate.

Hoping to hear from you on this subject, and confidently relying upon your valuable assistance, I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,
A. LOUDON SNOWDEN.

To his Excellency,
Gov. S. PENNOYER,
Salem, Oregon.

Those hours are not lost that are spent cementing affection, for a friend is above gold, precious as the stores of the mind.—M. F. Tupper.

ONLY A TRAP.

BY KATE W. HAMILTON.

Over the newly-fallen snow walked Master Reynard the fox in the early light of a New Year's morning. He had been visiting some of the farmyards—he had his reasons for calling before the people were up—in the hope of securing a fowl for his New Year's dinner. But poultry was very high just then—quite beyond his limited resources, in fact—and, though he had no doubt that it would be lower in the day, he could not afford to wait. So it was a hungry pair of eyes that suddenly espied a treasure near the root of an old tree—a plump rabbit nicely frozen and apparently all ready to be carried home for a dinner.

"How lucky!" exclaimed Reynard. "Next to a tender chicken, a bit of rabbit is the very thing I should have chosen. Some hunter must have dropped him without knowing it. I never knew anything so fortunate as—Stop a bit."

Reynard stepped back and sharply eyed the tempting treasure-trove.

"My mind misgives me that this is a little too fortunate. This isn't the sort of world, so far as my experience goes, where things worth having are lying around free-and-easy like to be picked up without working for them: I have never found it so. It looks all right, but I am suspicious of free lunches; they generally hide a trap;" and, with a parting sniff and a longing backward look, the fox walked hungrily on.

A little later that same New Year's morning, Martin Geary walked into the town. He had a little money to spend for his family, and he was resolved to do it wisely and well without wasting a penny of it. But as he was passing a saloon he paused on seeing it invitingly open, decorated with evergreens and its windows placarded with "New Year's Compliments" and cordial invitations to "Step in for a Free Lunch."

"A free spread! Well, there's no harm in that, and I'll have that much good, seeing that it won't cost me any thing," said Martin.

So he entered, and the free eating was followed by drinking that was not free until he no longer cared for the cost of anything and was hilariously willing to treat all acquaintances while his money lasted. It was scant fare that reached the Geary family that day, and even that little was made more miserable by the condition of the man that brought it.

It was only the fox who had sense enough to keep out of a trap.

JUGGERNAUT NEGLECTED.

At the last anniversary of the Calcutta Bible Society, Sir Rivers Thompson, from facts that came under his notice during his recent visit to Orissa, gave illustrations of the great change in popular sentiment which has been passing over India during the lifetime of the present generation.

Pooree, the seat of the famous shrine of the original Juggernaut, is one of the most sacred shrines in all India. Vast multitudes of pilgrims still make painful journeys to the place, but the temple priests are no longer able to extort money, as in former days. A wealthy rajah (king) not long since visited the temple, and after performing the customary rites sent to the head Brahmin to know how much he should pay for the privileges enjoyed. The answer was a prompt demand for twenty-five thousand rupees (twelve thousand five hundred dollars,) whereupon the rajah coolly walked off without giving anything.

Another illustration of the decline of reverence for the shrine was given by His Honor. At the annual airing given to the idols the ponderous car was dragged out several miles with the utmost difficulty, but enough willing hands could not be found to drag it back again. The priests were for a time in the utmost consternation. If the car was not taken back within seven days, it would be illegal, according to the traditions, to move it again for five years. In this emergency they had recourse to the collector (chief British civil officer of a district,) who weakly yielded to their importunity and gave them assistance in getting the great idol back to his temple. For this unwarranted meddling he received a gentle wigging. But the incident shows how rapidly old-time Hinduism is losing its hold on the people. Not many years ago the people were so eager in their efforts to lend a hand in dragging the car that they threw one another down, and often those thus prostrated were crushed beneath the wheels. Old things are passing away in India, and a better day has dawned on the land.

Secrets are a poor investment anyhow—if you tell them you lose them, and if you keep them you lose the interest on the investment.—J Billings.
