THE OREGON AND CALIFORNIA.

Upon the completion of the tunnel between Coles and Ashland the last gap in the line of railroad from Portland to San Francisco will be closed. There will then be an unbroken band of steel along the whole Pacific coast of the United States from Puget Sound to San Diego. This will complete the circle of frontier communication, and a tourist can go by rail completely around the United States just inside the borders and come back to the place of starting. One of the most interesting questions now is whether the completion of this line will help the people of Oregon. Our opinion is that it will. Portland has held an important position as a jobbing center and her merchants have found it possible to do a considerable wholesale business with towns situated some distance out on the railroads, and especially with Southern Oregon. She will lose some of the wholesale trade of Southern Oregon but she will gain in other portions. She will be in direct communication with eastern capital and immigration that will be setting into Oregon and California, and there will naturally be an overflow and the chief city of Oregon will receive the benefit. And while we do not think that Portland will be injured, we do think that Roseburg and all towns in Southern Oregon will receive an impetus of progress that will be materially felt among our citizens.

True Patriotism.

Despite the furious rage created by the proposed restoration of old flags by the president. It appears that the good work still goes on. The St. Louis Republican says:

The battle flags are still being sent back, notwithstanding the howls of Foraker, Tuttle and Fairchild, but they are returned from the South to the North. A few days ago Col. Thomas T. Jones of the 2d' regiment of Alabama state troops, sent to the governor of Connecticut a flag captured from the Sixteenth Connecticut volunteers at Plymouth, N. C., on the 2oth of April, 1864. The capture was made by the Montgomery True Blues of Alabama, and as the ex-confederates have no motive for keeping it, they sent it back to its original owners. Col. Jones says in his letter to the governor of Connecticut;

"Restored to its defenders, this banner will tell now of peace, not of strife, as thronging and tender memories come back to those who loved it. At the sight of its worn folds in its old home it will recall no ignoble thought or passion, and will blind the men who bore it more strongly to foes of other days, who leaving the past to God and history, are now fellow-citizens and coworkers for the prosperity and glory of a common country."

WHAT BREAKS DOWN YOUNG MEN

It is commonly received notion that hard study is the unhealthy element of college life. But from tables of the mortality of Harvard University, collected by Professor Pierce from the last triennial catalogue, it is clearly demonstrated that the excess of deaths for the first ten years after graduation is found in that portion of the class of inferior scholarship. Every one who has seen the curriculum knows that where Æschylus and political economy injure one, late hours and rum-punches use up a dozen, and their two little fingers are heavier than the loins of Euclid. Dissipation is a sure destroyer, and every young man who follows it is as the early flower exposed to an untimely frost. Those who have been inveigled into the path of vice are named Legion. A few hours sleep each night, high living and plenty of "smashes" make war upon every function of the body. The brains, the heart, the lung, the liver, the spine, the bones, the flesh, every part and faculty are overtasked and weakened by the terrific energy of passion loosened from restraint, until, like a dilapidated mansion, "the earthly house of this tabernacle" falls into ruinous decay. Fast young men, right about.—Scientific American.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall is reported as saying he will not compromise with the majority of the democrats in congress on the tariff question. It is to be hoped there are enough better democrats in the republican ranks than Mr. Randall is, to carry a just tariff reduction bill through the house of representatives, and one, too, which shall meet the statesmanlike views of Cleveland, Carlisle, Morrison Cox, Mills, Scott and others.—Ex.

Governor Waterman, republican, who succeeded to the office of governor of California on the death of governor Bartlett, democrat, has been turning out democrats in a wholesale manner from the office to which they were appointed by Bartlett. This is the kind of civil service reform which republican leaders believe in when they are in power their belief changes.—C. B. News.

THE PROHIBITION COLUMN.

HE THREW DUST IN HIS BROTHER'S FACE, AND SHOT THE BEAR.

My young friend had been buttonholed by some of his old associates who were hand in glove with the traffic, not to say saloon frequenters themselves, and they had been filling him up to the brim with some of their precious arguments. The "prohibition don't prohibit one, as the most filling of all, so he came to me to ask if there was not another side," for "what's the good of making such a fuss," said he, and turning the world half upside down if it's to all end in froth? "Why you're as green as my other young friend who went out hunting with his brothers, two guns between three! After plodding away through thick brush for hours, Dave says to Charley "I'll take a turn at carrying your gun, guess you're kind o' tired of it." So Charley hands his gun over.—Another moment, a shot was fired, and a big black bear rolled over dead.

Now that's just the kind of dust the traffic is throwing up in our eyes. "Pity we should be wearing out our lives over what doesn't pay," say they! Guess they think we'll believe them, and call a halt, but we weren't born yesterday like you and Dave's brother Charley. These people sing a very different tune to each other. Just listen while I read from Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular, Feb. 25th. "The retrograde movement in the trade is due to prohibitory legislation." They then mention the states determined to submit prohibitory amendments, "which, if they become laws, will result in great loss of accounts and profitable trade, seriously interfering with the consumption of goods." The Champion (liquor paper) speaks yet stronger "The prohibition flood is now sweeping over every state in the Union, threatening some of them, ruining others. It undermines every distillery, brewery, and shakes like an earthquake every liquor warehouse and every saloon in the land &c." Katzenmagen, Sec. U. S. Brewers Association says (under the rose of course) "In Kansas the prohibition system has been in operation for two years, and all the brewers are ruined," nearly the same in Iowa, he continues "and consequently their political power has been greatly diminished." To my surprise the young man went off into peals of laughter which perturbed me, just as I thought I was clinching the nail of yesterday. "Katzenmegan, Katzenmegan, what a grand name, entrails of a cat, appropriate isn't it, for it seems he can stomach almost any thing! I smiled, (a youngster fresh from college likes to air the modern languages he has learned) and answered: "He thinks the prohibitionists, vermin made for him to devour, while he remains monarch! Another thing, he knows how to use bribes. Unheard of taxes were being levied a few weeks ago amongst the brethren, in order to defeat the amendment in Tennessee. With what effect we all know by this time. They are about to concentrate on poor Oregon now. When will beasts of prey swoop down like that; it is hard to withstand them. Dollars is a wonderful sop to throw, all-powerful to win, as men's morals are made nowadays! But let the prohibition states speak for themselves, or rather the old woman of Maine, who went to the drug store with her arm bandaged up, to get an alcohol camphor prescription filled to bathe it with. Next week she came again, arm all bandaged up, saying it was no better, and so she wanted more. The bandage removed, her arm was as right as the other, it was her stomach craved the liquor. But you don't find that to day in Oregon, folks have to bandage their arms in order to get a drink! The internal Revenue Statistics tells the same tale as the old woman. The sum collected last year in Maine was at the rate of 4 cents per head of the population. Whereas the average tax in other and now prohibition states was $1.76 per head. Governor Martin of Kansas and Governor Larraber of Iowa, (both objectors to prohibition when elected) have been converted by the solid facts and figures of their respective states. Larraber says: "The jails in this district (the 12th) are empty—the result of prohibitory law." Martin says: "The marvelous material growth of this state has been equaled by its moral progress the prohibitory law is enforced as carefully and successfully as that against horse stealing, murders, etc. But you who swear by the Oregonian will quote the oracle, that the words of officials are never to be relied on, nor yet, I suppose, of government statistics. He prefers, I know some obscure newspaper correspondent that no one has ever heard of, or the words of some country editorial pondering to political demagogues. When the Oregonian has veered round to a few more points of the compass, it will cease to be the oracle, so many Oregon men consider it! Your Katzenmagen is better named than I thought at first, when we were taken with your uncontrollable fit of laughter which, took me just a little aback. It just occurs to me how ferocious he is. Think of the minister Haddock, of Iowa, poor young Roderic Gambrell the Missouri editor, and Northrup of Ohio, (besides others who just escaped with their life) were murdered because they dared to fight the traffic. And this is the animal that sets up a hue and cry of liberty—personal liberty in the case of the "reformed sot," the New York Independent commented on a short time ago. Poor wretch, he was compelled by physical force to swallow that which had wrecked his early life, and which he lately swore never to taste again. He was dosed so heavily by these friends of personal liberty, that the next morning he was found dead in the wagon which the revelers had used to carry him about town, as an illustration of the saloon idea of what a man should be. Now thought I, in looking at the convinced face of my young friend, if those other fellows don't get hold of you again, your vote is once more safe for the amendment. L.

The need of reducing the revenue to a point more nearly approximating to the financial requirements of the government was a subject of discussion at the meeting of the New York Chamber of Commerce Oct 8th, the first meeting of that body held since June. Resolutions demanding speedy action by Congress looking to a reduction of the revenue and urging men of all parties to unite in pressing for such action were introduced by Mr. F. B. Thurber, and were unanimously carried. Indeed such a reduction is imperatively demanded, no matter upon what scheme of tariff policy it may be based. Singularly enough a resolution urging upon the President the importance of recommending to Congress the passage of a national bankruptcy law was dropped. —Bradstreets.

Thoughts of another prominent Republican now come to mind—the unsavory Bacon, who was spoiled on the hands of his party and who, as financial clerk, despoiled the Patent Office of $30,000, according to the report of the Commissioner of Patents, which has just been submitted to the Secretary of the Interior. The amount of the defalcation is much larger than had been supposed, and furnished the strongest of arguments for turning the rascals out. Bacon had been stealing thirteen years, and was not detected until an undertaker's call was imperative.

Cervantes is to have a monument. It will be in the shape of an inscription on a grotto near Algiers where the great humorist once took refuge. The author of Don Quixote is about the only brilliant light in Spanish literature. He was contemporaneous with Shakespeare, and like him a wonderful student of human nature. He possessed that genius which is understood and appreciated that genius which is understood and appreciated in all ages and tongues, and for nearly 300 years the world has been laughing at his wonderful satire.

The National Republican Executive Committee will soon meet New York or Washington to arrange the preliminaries for the meeting of the National Convention, the Committe being required to convene six months before the assembling of the Convention. Chicago, New York and Saratoga are always in the field for the honor, and some there are who favor Washington.

The limit for purchasing fourteen millions of bonds under the Treasury's September circular expired on the 8th, inst, the total sales to that date amounting to $13,376,850, which is $623,150 less than the call demanded for the purpose of the sinking fund. What the future policy of the Treasury on the question of the bonds will be, the Secretary declines to state.

Secretary Lamar continues to reverse the indemnity railroad land decisions of Commissioner Sparks, the Secretary's last over-ruling having restored 329,000 acres to the Omaha road.

HOW IS THIS?

It might be well to remind our republican friends that they are woefully mistaken when they attempt to abuse the public mind by claiming that republicans and republican states furnished the soldiery to put down the rebellion. The following table furnished by the war department in 1880 shows the number of soldiers furnished by each State.

Maine, 70,114; New Hampshire, 36,629; Vermont, 35,262; Massachusetts, 152,048; Rhode Island, 23,669; Connecticut, 27,379; New York, 467,047; New Jersey, 81,010; Pennsylvania, 366,107; Deleware, 13,670; Maryland, 70,316; West Virginia, 32,068; District of Columbia, 16,872; Ohio, 316,659; Indiana, 197,147; Illinois, 259,147; Michigan, 80,372; Wisconsin, 66,424; Iowa, 75,309; Minnesota, 25,052; Missouri, 109,111; Kentucky, 79,025; Kansas, 20,151; Tennesee, 31,092; Arkansas, 8,280; North Carolina, 3,156; California, 15,725; Nevada, 1,080; Oregon, 1,810; Washington Territory, 964; Nebraska Territory, 3,715, Colorado Territory, 4,903; Dakota Territory, 206; New Mexico Territory, 6,561, Alabama, 2,676; Florida, 1,260; Louisiana 8,224; Mississippi, 545, Texas, 1,965; Indian Territory, 3,503. This has reference only to the union troops, and shows that altogether the States and Territories furnished 2,678,968 men to help put down the rebellion. —Coos Bay News.

Democratic platforms this year have outgrown the equivocations employed by the short sighted politicans who assume that temporary expedience can safely be substituted for principles. The most distinctive clear-cut issue as between the democratic and republican parties is presented by the question of revenue. On this question Kentucky and Ohio recently spoke with an emphasis that could not be mistaken. Massachusetts has followed with a declaration more commendable than either of its predecessors because more clearly expressed.

The Republican papers throughout Mr. Cleveland's administration have been sneering at him because he had never been west of Buffalo and did not appreciate the bigness of the country. Now, that he is traveling to see the country of which he is president and at his own expense, too. These same papers are sneering at him for that too. The president, however, is doing very well. The country too, will receive benfit from his trip.—Benton Leader.

The Plaindealer was quick to costogate the Sentinel and Review not long since because of a wordy tilt between them. How the censorious editor of the Plaindealer could so far forget himself in his present, pleasant talk with the stateman is a wonder to those who expected him to practice what he preached.
