"I think Gen. Grosvenor's speech in he encampment, in which he said that the Grand Army of the Republic was greater than the president and greater than congress was rank heresy. No man in his senses should give utterance to that assertion. The idea that any society in the country, whether composed of military men or civillains, is greater than the government, is rank treason. My understanding of the MRS. E. F. HOTCHKISS Grand Army of the Republic is that it is a fraternal society of old soldiers, with charity for its object. I think that when that society assumes to be greater than congress or the president or interests itself in political movements or in the obstruction or passage of legislation, it is guilty of usurpation. The Grand Army of the Republic has nothing to do with the president's approval or disapproval of legislation submitted to him by congress. think that when the Grand Army of the Republic, as such interferes with the business of the people, it is time for the people to call a halt."

An Astonished Subscriber The infuriated subscriber had just rushed into the office, and a pale, spirituelle reporter faced him calmly and asked him what he wanted.

"I did." "You did? Sure it wasn't an error of the compositor?"
"Certainly."

"Not in the least." "Y oung man, let me embrace you, 've been whipping editors all my life and you're the first one I ever met who did not blame the proof-reader or compositor."-| Chicago Times.

Notwishstanding the absorbing nature of the Irish question, the British liberals find time to adopt as a new and definite plank in their platform the disestablishment of the state church in Wales. It fell to Mr. Gladstone's lot to lead the movement in parliament for the disestablishment of the Irish church, and if he should live many years longer he would probably take the leading part in separating church and state in Scotland and England as well. And this notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Gladstone is a good Episcopelian.

If every boy in the country who has his own way to make in the world would sit down with the fact, long enough to master it, that nothing but hard, honest work will bring anything worth having in the world, there would be fewer young men looking for some kind of work where they could keep their hands clean and in doing which they could lie in bed till eight o'clock in the morning. There would be fewer looking for such jobs, and more who were anxious to work at trades, where the prospects of amounting to something is much greater .-

They Threaten to Secode because Gen. Sla-Sr. Louis, Oct. 3 .- The amount of Il-feeling among democratic Grand Army men over the defeat of General Slocum for commander in-chief is extraordinary, and it is very likely to lead to heavy defections from the order among those who regard their defeat as actuated entirely by political motives. Ex-Gov. Stoneman of California is to some extent the spokesman of the malcontents, and he appears utterly disconcerted by the way things have gone in the encampment. In the ourse of a long interview on the subect, he says:

"I think, taking all things into consideration that the defeat of Gen. Slocum for commander-in-chief ought to be sufficient to disrupt the [Grand Army. It is evident to my mind, that Gen. Slocum was defeated because he was a democrat. No man with eyes and ears who moved about the hotel New York Coffee House here during the week could fail to observe that politics was behind everything. I am a member of the Grand And Oyster Saloon, Army. I joined it with the understanding that it would have nothing Leading Check Restaurant at all to do with politics. I was quite would be chosen because of their military services; but when I see an officer of Gen. Slocum's record he is a democrat, and an unknown man chosen in his stead, I think it about time for the democrats of the order to put on their thinking caps. The Grand Army of the Republic could not honor Gen. Slocum but Gen. Slocum would have honored the G. A. R.
