tinuously obstructed. We must take the rough and rocky way as well as the smooth and pleasant. As a rule, the men who stand boldly for the defence of truth, are not the gentlemen who have been rocked in the cradle of indulgence or caressed in the lap of luxury; but they are men whom necessity has called from the shade of retirement to contend with the stern realities of life under the scorching rays of the sun.

Life is earnest! it is aggressive! with just enough trouble to enable us to appreciate it. "Gems cannot be polished without friction, nor man perfected without adversity."

DILIGENCE.

By Ida Benedick.

Diligence is steady application to any kind of business. We may enter into any kind of work; yet without diligence we will never succeed. All great men were not born in palaces. Some of the greatest men the world has ever known were too poor, when boys, to obtain even a common school education, yet by constant effort they have attained the highest positions in life and their names will be honored through the coming ages.

The success of this world depends on diligence. Were we to neglect the little things of this life, what would become of the great things?

"Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves" is a sentence we often hear. If we neglect our school work we cannot expect to succeed in after life. We should therefore be faithful in school, doing well the duties assigned us, so that when our school days shall have ended we may recall, with pleasure, the many happy days spent in the school room.

The poet said, "great oaks from little acorns grow." We may have little or nothing with which to enter business, yet if we are faithful in our work we are sure to succeed. Many who are so fortunate as to have parents to start them in life, are yet unfortunate, for they do not feel the responsibilities and do not care so much about their business. They who by hard work and diligence earn a fortune take best care of it.

It has been well said that "diligence is the philosopher's stone that turns every thing to gold." Many young men just from the school room, with the future bright before them, little think of the hardships they will have to endure through life, yet with diligence they may reach the top round of the ladder of well-merited honor and prosperity.

WAITING.

By Ella Wimberly.

One of the most difficult lessons humanity learns is the art of patiently waiting. The activity which works for a certain end will prove the industry and skill of the worker; but the strain upon his power of endurance will not be felt then as painfully as when his labor is over and he awaits the result.

The sluggard who with folded hands waits for the favorable turning of Fortune's wheel is but a drone in the human hive, but the patient man is he who during his toils and struggles endures alike the balmy air of spring, summer's heat, or winter's chill.

Skilled effort is required to enable one to patiently await the results of lifetime efforts to know whether we are to be crowned with success or to linger amid disappointment.

He is a hero who during such a crisis can stand firm and erect, preserving that even mental balance, that unshaken fortitude, that courage and endurance that have sustained our greatest heroes or martyrs through the ours of trial.

It requires culture to bear unmoved the suspense that precedes great events in life when one is ready for well-earned rest if successful or for renewed effort if failure is the result of years of weary labor. Life's journey is marked by periods of waiting in prosperity or pain. Waiting is the guardian of faith, the preserver of peace, and the teacher of humility. We must be satisfied to work energetic ally with a purpose and wait the result.

All progress of the best kind is slow, but you can accomplish anything if you only have patience. Water may be carried in a sieve if you can only wait till it freezes. Those who at the commencement of their career meet less applause than they deserve, not unfrequently gain more than they merit at the end.

The active have duties to perform; but there are those to whom is given no part in life's work but to await God's will patiently. Some are denied physical power, some to whom is given no mental force, some are stricken down helpless midway in life's journey and must be a burden upon loving or careless hands until kindly released by Death. To these in their weary hour of inactivity and suspense, when physical powers lie prostrate and mental force is enfeebled, there is a comfort in the thought that, "They also serve who only stand and wait."

Wait cheerfully then at life's station where Patience is called upon for her work folding the hands perhaps prayerfully, but fretting not that they must for the time lie idle. Wait as God's humble servant till he opens the way for renewed usefulness or gives the gentle spirit rest in what we hope to be life everlasting.
