A respectable citizen, so we are in-formed, had been constantly threatened and annoyed by a neighbor, who had threatened his life, and on last evening be jumped over the fence and threatened an attack when the shot was fired. Another candidate for the capital of Washington is Pasco. The Headlight thus gives vent to its enthusiasm: "We would respectfully inform both the capitalists and the people that Pasco is nature's choice. When the great Designer planned this land of ours and joined the great waterways of the northwest at Pasco, he so moulded the commerce were also compelled to center here. We are now the axis from which radiates the great rail and waterways of our state, and we shall not de-pair of securing the state capital in the near future." What is the matter with Rockland for the capital.

The famous painted rocks of Lake Che'an are described as follows: Imagine a perpendicular and nearly smooth wall of granite, with no chinks or crannics that would en-able one to descend from the heights above or to ascend from the water below. Twenty feet above the water are painted a series of figures of Indians, bears, deer, owls and other animals. The pigment used is black and red, and the pictures are as clear apparently as when made. As the water of the lake varies only eighteen inches in height during the year, the aucient artists must have done the painting while in their canoes, and while the level of the lake was nearly twenty feet higher than it is now.

There is no better method of advertising both the products of the individual and the wealth of our agricultural lands than through this exhibition, and it is a matter of individual interest to every farmer to correctly represent the value of his land. It has frequently been said of other fairs in the state that they amount simply to a horse race. The exhibition of tast horses has its proper place in every agri-cultural fair and no doubt in this one there will be as fine a speed program as has ever been known in Eastern Oregon; but the farmers of this district can bring to this fair that which is of greater importance, if they are disposed to do so. Without their co-operation and support the managers cannot make it a success and the fair will be simply a horse race or an entire failure; in either event its real object will fail. Every farmer who reads this paper should feel that upon him rests some the responsibility of making this fair a true advertisement of this portion of our

While an exhibition by the mer chants necessitates no little expense and trouble nevertheless advertisement would abundantly repay them. This exhibition eught to be to a certain degree a mechanics fair as well as an agricultural fair and every merchant ought to have an exhibit upon the grounds. Particular attention should be given to this by the merchants of this city, it seems to us, for not only are they benefited by such an advertisement directly, but the city is more especially penefited by the success of the exhibition We believe that it is only necessary to ousiness men to these facts in order that they will give whatever assistance they can to the managers. TANNER HAS RESIGNED WASHINGTON, Sept. 12, 1 A. M .- The resident has received the resignation of James W. Tunner commissioner of pensions. In the let er conveying the resignation it is said that the commissioner writes that he recognizes that differences exist between himself and the secretary of the interior respecting the administration of the pension bureau and that these differences being radical, in the interest | of a thoroughly satisfactory administraion of the office, he should resign. THE NEWS IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 - A Washington special says that Tanner bid good by to all the men in his office last night, and was not at his desk to-day.

A special to a morning paper says that President Harrison said to a friend yesterday that Tanner would have to go out of the pension office. He said he was reluctant to part with him on account of the embarressment it would place him in considering the indorsement given the commissioner at Milwaukee, but he ad ded it was altogether out of the question to keep him. The president said he had repeatedly talked to Commissioner Tanper and urged him to give his topque less exercise, but that everywhere he went and upon the slightest provocation be put his foot into it." It is un terstood hat the commissioner's resignation is at the request of the president and it will be disposed of within a few days. It for ten ays or more has simply been a question of how to drop him without offending the soldiers.
