SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 28, 1889. A PARTY OF PRINCIPLES. The Democratic press have nomi nated Harrison as Republican candi date in 1892. The national convention which meets to outline the policy of the party may or may not see fit to nominate the present incumbent as standard-bearer in the coming canvass. In the latter emergency we sympathize with our friends of the opposite political persuasion for being premature in their calculations. The Republican party is a party of principles, not men, and it makes little difference who se cures the nomination, so that he upholds the great fundamental doctrines of the organization. We cannot say as much of Democracy.
