Of course there's difference in the stock-A hoss that has a little ear, And slender build and shaller hock, Kin beat his shadder, mighty near.

While one that's thick in neck and chist, And big in neck and full in flank, That tries to race, I will insist, Will have to take the second rank.

And I've just laid back and laughed, And rolled and wallered in the grass At fairs, to see some heavy draft,

Each hoss has his appointed place— The heavy hoss should plow the soil, The blooded racer he must race, And win his wagers for his toil.

I bless the hoss from hoof to head-From head to hoof, and tail to main; I bless the hoss, as I have said, From head to hoof, and back again.

Our cowboy Bill is still in France, Where he will likely stay, So long as he can crowds entrance And make his visit pay.

They will not let him start for home, His absence they'd regret;

They yet may ask him to become Their poet laria. First Breath of Thanksgiving. Let winds blow cold, let winds blow high Let days be dark and drear, Who cares? Thanksgiving's drawing nigh, A time of mirth and cheer.

What though we burn wood by the core And weather phrophets croak?

S con on the groaning festive board
The turkey, stuffed, will smoke.

Then something to the poor we'll spare-Who're always with us here-And we'll forget all grief and care
To give a thanksgiving cheer.

How Cronin Was Murdered. CHICAGO, Ill., November 2.- A special from Winnipeg this morning says: Assistant State's Attorney Baker, of Chicago, had a long interview with Bob Heffer go, had a long interview with Bob Heller yesterday, the man who was in prison with Bourk, and from him received a corroboration of many of the details connected with the butchery of Cronin which Gillette recounted on Thursday. Bourk, according to Gillette, took quite a fancy to Heller at first, and was very communicative with him, telling him many details with Bourk, and from him received a corroboration of many of the details connected with the butchery of Cronin which Gillette recounted on Thursday. Bourk, according to Gillette, took quite a fancy to Heffer at first, and was very communicative with him, telling him many details about the crime. He told Heffer that Coughlin was the main actor in the crime. He told Heffer that sandbags were used by two of the assessing while the thing. He told Heffer that sandbags were used by two of the assassins, while the third weilded a common base-ball club. Bourk was under the impression that Cronin was being decoyed to the cottage under the pretext that he was going to attend the woman mentioned in yesterday's dispatches. Four men were waiting in the cottage for him. They listened for the sound of wheels. At last the carnage drove up, and an instant later the doctor hurried up to the door. He knocked loudly and hastily, as if he realized that his presence was urgently required. Two of the assassins stood behind the door, ready to strike, while one of the others from the inner room called out in a loud voice: "Come in." The door was quickly opened and the doctor strode in. The instant he was in one of the assassins slammed the door, while the other struck the physician a terrible blow with a sandbag. The doctor fell heavily to the floor. Bourk always declined to say who struck the first blow, and this fact, Mr.

Baker says, makes it quite clear that it was Bourk himself, else he would have mentioned the name. He always spoke about the four taking part in the crime and pounding the doctor at the same time. The moment the doctor was down the whole four rushed on him, and with the whole four rushed on him, and with sandbags and clubs pounded the life out of him. The poor man struggled and moaned awfully. Blood poured from his mouth and nose and even his eyes. He struggled and gasped tor breath, and nearly twenty minutes elapsed before he ceased to gasp. Then the fiends stringed mouth and nose and even his eyes. He struggled and gasped for breath, and nearly twenty minutes elapsed before he ceased to gasp. Then the fiends stripped the blood-stained clothing off him, and one of them pounded his face so as to make it impossiple to recognize the body. Coughlin hauled the trunk over and the body was crammed into it. body was crammed into it. One of the quartette went out and brought an express wagon, which had been left in a convenient place. When they went to carry the trunk out blood was dripping from it, and it ran on the floor and on some of their boots. The trunk was set down and the leaks in the trunk stopped with cotton batting, which was found in the doctor's instrument-case. The trunk and its contents were then taken to the lake, Coughlin driving the horse. There was no boat at that point, and they tried to shove the trunk out into the water, but it would not work. Anxious to get rid of the body some way, Bourke suggested that it be thrown into a catch-basin. The suggestion was adopted.

Henry Heidtman returned from Colorado last Monday, where he has been for some time breaking and selling a band of nearly 100 horses. He had fairly good success. B. We are reliably informed that the Baptist minister is awaking a lively interest in re-ligion in that section about Hoover creek. Several lost sheep have been found and gathered into the fold. It is said that among their number are William Black and David Gibson. Thank the Lord! Send us

The Beecher Flat Lyceum meets every Saturday night, and is quite an interesting society. The time is spent in reading, orations, declamations, essays, singing and the reading of the Beecher Flat Kicker, a paper edited by G. B. Dukek and I. A. Hender-son. All are invited to attend and take part in the exercises, as one never gets too old to learn something they never knew

A few days ago we were informed that there was a couple who desired to get mar-ried and made application for a marriage icease, but the girl was too young to ob tain a license, even with the consent of the parents. On Monday, however, the couple started to Idaho, for the purpose of getting married. Whether the laws of Idaho are more favorable to children marrying than those of Oregon, we are not prepared to say. The parties are from the Dutch Flat country, and when they return duly tied up, matrimonially speaking, it will be time to announce their names.

A Petrified Miser. A recent dispatch says that J. R. Mote farmer living in Phelps county, Nebraska, about twelve miles from Kearney, is in possession of a curiosity which is a valuable relic of prehistoric times in the part of the continent. Some time ago while excavating for a cave, he exhumed a large brown stone weighing over tweuty-pounds. When the clay was re moved from it a large fossil, representing a cienched human hand, was revealed discovery nothing was said of it, as Mr. Mote does not belong to the curious class of people.

For several months the specimen had lain about the house, and no one who saw over that part of the country, and being it had any idea of the great amount of to his astonishment, there rolled out eleven brilliant transparent stones. The showed them to a jeweler, who pronounced them genuine first water dia-

He had been there but a few days, hand as well as the rest of the body of this relic of an early age.

The mystery of the broken hand is one but to all of them the modern historian can only answer in remote and uncertain speculation.
