A War Episode. The battle was on, and the blue and the gray were at each other's throats. It was at Gamesville, and the Federals were getting the worst of the fight, writes Wallace P. Reed. The heat of an August sun beat fiercely down upon the long lines of glittering steel melting away in the fiercer heat of war. On the right the earth trembled under thundering hosts of charging cavelry; on the left the men in blue heard their bones crash under the

Over all rose the sulphurous clouds, belched forth by the deep throated guns whose terrible roar shook the rock-ribber As the ranks of blue, shattered and shaken by the shower of shot and shell, slowly rolled back, a Federal colone; waved his sword over his head in the vain attempt to rally his men, and then The tallen officer was a man o egions of gray, and the men unconsciousy swerved aside to avoid trampling him stuggered and fell on the blood stained triking appearance. His grand face and form caught the attention of the rushing down. Desperately wounded, the colonel painfully crawled to a tree, and reclined egainst it with the life current flowing from the bullet hole in his breast. His anxious eyes looked into the stern faces of the Confederates as they charged on past him. In another moment his face

"Bob!" he shouted, "Bob, don't you General Toombs, riding at the head his brigade, heard the familiar voice. He rode up to the tree, and glanced at the "Good God!" exclaimed the general. "it is Fletcher Webster- Damel Webster s

In an instant Toombs was kneeling by the colouel's side. He placed the helpless man in a more comfortable position and gave him water from a canteen. "He is my old friend," he said to a staff officer, "poor Fletch Webster-Daniel Webster's son--stay here with him-I must go to the front."

General Toombs mounted his horse, and charged on with his brigade to annihilate the rest of Webster's regiment.

The first lull in the fray brought the Georgian back to the tree. "And so we meet as enemies," said Webster, returning the other's sympathetic hand pressure.

"Never!" replied Toombs. "Daniel" son must always be my friend. Just now we must fight out our differences, but there are happier days ahead for both.' "My wound is mortal," said Webster, "God bless you, old friend, for your kindness. Gentlemen, I thank you. War is a bad thing."

Again the general took leave of the sufferer and returned to the front, leaving a surgeon behind him. The Confederates cared for their captive with brotherly tenderness, but it was of Weaker grew the dying man's pulse and more fitful his heart throbs. Quickly, and with a smile on his face, he passed away. He whispered a message for his loved ones, and said:

"Tell Bob I loved him-God bless

Fletcher Webster was dead-the hope and gory of a proud father—the ideal soldier of New Eugland—this was his end—dead on the battle field with the sorrowful taces of his toemen bending

"A true man and a brave soldier," said General Toombs that night as he wiped away a tear. "Let us send him through the lines with the honors of war." It was done. Fletcher Webster's dead body was sent with an escort to the Federal camp. A funeral cortege accompanied it to Boston. It lay in state in old Fancuil Hall, and all New England War is a bad thing!

CUPID'S HARNESS. Most women naturally look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life, but they should constantly bear in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form, are the best passports to a limpy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weaknesses, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex, destroy beauty and attractiveness and make life miserable. An unfalling specific for these maladies is to be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give catisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrappers, and faithfully carried out for many years. $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.
