TELEGRAPHIC. High Handed Outrage ASTORIA, Or., Nov. 20 .- A gang of drunken sailors, headed by a lawyer named Thomas Burns, last evening narched up to the British ship Buccleuch, lying at the Union Pacific docks, and going aboard, requested that the nine sailors that Captain Johansen had shipped should leave the vessel, claiming that they had shipped for less than the regular wages. The men refused to leave and ran aft to the cabin, where the captain was standing. He immediatel sent them nside and, locking the door, ordered the listurbers ashore. The spokesman, Burns, who is said to be a runner for Bunko Kelly, in Portland, said: "Captain, we intend to have those men by fair means or foul." The captain refused to give up the men. Thereupon the rioters ran forward and took the men's clothes and went ashore. There were fully fifty sailors in the gang, and they marched lown to the Liverpool house, where the clothes were found this morning by Sheriff Smith. The sheriff was in Portland yesterday, and did not reach here e began rounding up the lawbreakers, and so far has arrested twenty-nine men. Their names are: D. NEW YORK, Nov. 21-At 2:80 o'clock this afternoon, while a number of men were engaged in laying a new conduit at avenue, Brooklyn, the caving in of a sand bank caused the old conduit to burst, burying a number of workmen and causing the death of at least four laborers, and possibly three more. A derrick had been rigged over the spot, and the engineer was in the act of lowering a section of iron pipe into the ditch. which had been dug for the new conduit. Suddenly, and without warning, the bank of heavy wet sand, which had been thrown out of the excavation, caved in. and at the same time a trench of water burst out of the old conduit. In an in stant Hugh Murphy, John Bauers, Michael Smith, Ernest Tully and two Italians were covered with earth. To add to the horror, a large gas pipe, which ran parallel with the conduit, was broken, filling the place with noxious gas. The sudden flow of water probably saved Bauers' life. The sand had completely buried him, but the force of the stream washed him out and carried him under the steam derrick. He came to the surface in the ditch below, and, grasping the planking on the side, quickly scrambled up with no great injury Hugh Murphy and the two Italians were not so fortunate. A great avalanche o earth came down upon them and completely entombed them, The other Italian was caught in the wreck, and partly buried in the sand. He was held ible to move him. Finally, another cav in buried him out of sight. Earnest Tully was the first to be dug out. He was unconscious, having been overcome by gas. Michael Smith escaped with a lacerate

There are three occupants in the city jail, who are not at all satisfied with the manner In the first place they are out of tobacco, and this causes them great sorrow Again they have no spring mattresses on which to sleep, and the corridor is not lighted by electricity. If these things were remedied, life to them would be a pleasant dream, and it would make little difference Coryallis Times: Every county in the state will be compelled to purchase election booths next June in order to comply with the recently adopted Australian ballet law. In consequence the woods are full of canvassers trying to make contracts with the various county courts in Oregon. Some of the booths are offered at exorbitunt prices and it will be well for the various officials to be cautious in making their purchases, Very many visitors, not knowing the working among military convicts. French's case is peculiar. He comes of good English family, his brother being a captain and his father a colonel in the British royal artillery. French had been in the artillery in India, but returned through some quarrel and came to America. When his relatives heard he proposed to enlist in the American not to, and promising they would help him The burned district is being built up in a to return to the English service. This letter arrived after he had enlisted. While serving at Fort Wingate he was courtmartialed for appearing at dress parade without a white collar, as the regulations The plank roadway to the landing of the provided. He would have been lightly punished, but he wrote a sarcastic letter to the officers of the court asking that they grant him the "honor of dishonorable discharge." He made in this letter several sharp comments on army discipline, which, he said, were suited to Prussia or France and not to a republican country, and he closed with this judgment: "Two years' experience has taught me ered entirely subordinate to the work that should be performed by citizen contract or army staff departments, and that the regular army is defective in organization, antiqand exists almost solely to gratify the personal whims and administer to the material comfort of a class whose caste prejudices and bigoted conservatism foster sentiments which are a direct menace to the liberty and progress of this great democratic reter that they sentenced him to dishonorable discharge and two years at hard labor. He had served five months when he escaped in
